Mournfully Ned passed the house. Then he started down a narrow lane. This was a short cut to the bank, which fronted on the next street. As he reached the point where it merged into an alley that ran directly behind the bank, Ned was surprised to notice, standing in the vacant space at the rear of the institution, a wagon.

In an instant Ned glided down the alley. Then curiosity and wonder gave way to rapid [illegible]. The wagon was a covered box vehicle, with hinged doors closing tightly at its back. These were open. Two stealthy figures were just entering the rear door of the bank. A metallic glint inside of the vehicle caused Ned to draw more closely. Deeply stirred at an extraordinary discovery, he gasped out:

"The small safe from the vault!"

Then robbery, burglary, was afoot! Whoever had entered the building must have penetrated to its most [illegible] vault, to then secure the [illegible] which was in fact John White's real treasure house.

The moment had in deciding what was best to do, run and sound an alarm or remain and face the robbers, was a precious one. A sound at the rear of the bank attracted Ned's attention. Two men were coming thence, poking their pockets full of gold from bags of coin they carried.

Acting on a quick impulse, Ned gave a spring and landed in the wagon. The next instant he regretted it. The men slammed shut the two rear doors of the vehicle.

"Let's hurry," he heard a gruff voice speak. "We've got about all there is worth taking—whoa!"

Something had startled the horse. So suddenly did the animal start up that Ned was flung flat, striking the edge of the steel safe. He realized that the horse had run away. He steadied himself as he comprehended that the animal was dashing down the long incline sweeping to the river. The wagon swung about like the tail of a kite. It struck one of the bridge pillars, the horse tore loose, and the wagon crashed through the railing and went over into the river.

Ned's head was bleeding from a severe wound. He felt the swift current swirling the wrecked vehicle about. He tore at the shattered side of the box, squeezed through the aperture, the water all but engulfing him, and reached the shore, how, he never knew.

Ned must have been in a kind of delirium after that. When he was again restored to reason it was two days later. He lay on a couch in a strange room. A man, a farmer, sat by his side.

"Keep still, stranger," he urged. "You are all right, but the doctor says you must rest. You kept calling for some one so much," added the man, "that when my wife found a photograph in your pocket with a name under it, Miss Elsie White, she went to town and saw the young lady. She's here now, in the next room."

"Who is?" almost shouted Ned, springing up on his couch.

"Easy, friend, easy," soothed the farmer. "She's a grand girl, let me tell you. When she learned you was hurt, she gave up home, father, everything to come and [illegible]. I know [illegible] and [illegible]. He's [illegible] now, [illegible]—bank robbed, everything gone. [illegible] then, say, I'm curious to know how you ever got into this fix."

Ned told. The farmer evinced the greatest excitement [illegible] of the wagon box that went into the river.

"Why," he exclaimed, "I noticed the battered wreck of just such a contraption floated into the cut-off on my land. Thought I'd fish it out for kindling wood some time."

"If it is the [illegible]," declared Ned [illegible], "it holds the safe stolen from the bank."

It did, as they soon ascertained. Old John White had felt badly at losing his daughter; he had felt worse at losing his money. Now, with a chance to get both back, he graciously accepted Ned as a son-in-law.

Two Stealthy Figures Were Entering the Rear Door.

SCHOOLBOY HOWLERS

The following quotations from British examination papers, ridiculous as they are, might be matched from many a Canadian teacher's experience:

A Kelt is part of a Scotchman's dress.

A vacuum is an empty space full of nothing but Germans (germs?)

A Conservative is a sort of greenhouse where you look at the moon.

Queen Elizabeth was tall and thin, but she was a stout Protestant.

Wolfe gained fame by climbing the heights of Abraham Lincoln.

Where was Magna Charta signed? At the bottom.

Wellington threw up earthquakes behind him as he retreated.

The plains of Siberia are roamed over by the lynx and the larynx.

During the Interdict in John's reign, births, marriages and deaths were not allowed to take place.

The Habeas Corpus act was that no one need stay in prison longer than he liked.

The Seven Great Powers of Europe are gravity, electricity, steam, gas, fly-wheel, and motors, and Mr. Lloyd George.

The religion of the people of the Ganges Delta makes them clean, but, like other things, there are some who do not keep the rules. They live an open and free life except for the few wigwams which are inhabited by the natives.

The Hindus generally are a hardy race, but prefer to worship in their temples rather than follow much manual labor; what little they do is mostly carrying luggage and such like; the rest of their time is spent in wandering about in the shade of the various palms.

What is the object of distillation? Describe the process and the apparatus used. Answer: The object of distillation is the making of whiskey. You have a box and a glass tube at one end and another at the other end, and if you pour water in at the one end it comes out whiskey at the other.

Hedgehogs as Housecleaners

Backwoodsmen, when in camp during the winter, entertain strange guests—hedgehogs among them. One woodsman, it appears, on leaving camp on a Saturday afternoon, used to neglect, purposely, to close the door of his shack in order that the hedgehogs might enter and clean his floor.

Inasmuch as the principal constituents of the camp menu are pork and beans, bacon and other dishes rich in fat, considerable grease is spilled upon the floor in the course of a week, and a hedgehog will risk his neck, at any time, for a bit of fat.

Just as soon, therefore, as this particular camp was deserted by its occupants, the spiny gluttons would hasten in, and begin to plane off the surface of the floor with their chisel-shaped teeth, eating away all the wood that held a trace of grease. On his return to camp the owner could sweep up, and enjoy the comforts of a clean floor for another week. The only serious objection to this method of housecleaning lay in the fact that it was necessary to lay a new camp floor rather frequently.

Grapes are among the most [illegible] of [illegible] fruits. They are very easy to [illegible] and can be trained over the side of a barn or a fence as well as on a trellis or arbor. They are ornamental, too, and make an excellent screen. On a small place it is possible to have grapes growing all along the fences and stretching over the buildings, yielding a very large amount of fruit without trespassing at all on ground needed for general purposes. If one has an inexpensive fruit press it becomes a very simple matter to make good grape juice, and it is but little more trouble to make wine.

Grapes have a preference for sunny locations and rather rich, loose soil. An ideal place for them is the south side of a building, where they will be sheltered from cold winds. They will thrive in the rich soil of a poultry yard, and provide needed shade for the fowls. Train them high, however; chickens have a weakness for grapes.

It is best to plant grape vines at least ten feet apart in the home garden and to cover the roots with six inches of soil, well tramped down. At planting time the vines should be cut back to three or four buds; and pruning will be needed every spring before warm weather starts the sap flowing. If the work is left until late the vines will bleed. Even so, some spring trimming of the smaller branches may be needed, if the growth is very heavy. It is a great mistake, though, to remove the leaves. Many amateurs think that the fruit should be exposed to the sun, but this is all wrong.

Pinching off the ends of the branches will help to give larger fruit, and often it pays to thin the bunches if one wants grapes of quality. Grow Concords, but have other kinds also.

PROBLEMS OF THE AIR

French Scientist Says He Has the Key to Aeronautical Puzzles

The director of a French Technical College, M. A. Magnan, announced before the Academy of Science the discovery of a formula by means of which he expects to solve many of the remaining puzzling problems of aeronautics.

Up to the present, says M. Magnan, aeroplanes have been constructed practically without reference to nature's own principles as exemplified in the flight of birds. It has been thought that the great relative difference in weight between a bird and an aeroplane made the fundamental principles of bird flight inapplicable to the man-made machine. M. Magnan declares his formula solved this difficulty. By means of it he is now able, for the first time, to give the dimensions, curves and other figures of a man-lifting machine constructed on the principles of bird flight. It is simply a question, he declares, of magnifying the bird measurements according to a formula which will scientifically adjust the various parts to the human machine increased in size.

A Bull's Strength

The following authentic tale comes from a South Wairarapa (New Zealand) station, and shows the immense power possessed by a bull. Two shepherds were driving bulls from various paddocks, and bringing them down to the homestead. As each fresh bull was added to the mob there were trials of strength and savage skirmishes between the various members of the herd. At one gate a large roan shorthorn bull was waiting for the rest and as soon as the gate was opened he charged out, and, after the usual roaring and grunting, came to locks with a well-grown red shorthorn bull of equal size. After several bouts with horns locked, the red bull slipped past the roan's guard, and, getting him fairly under the body, heaved him bodily over the fence into the paddock where he had just come from. The roan bull weighed nearly a ton, and his body cleared the fence, one of the post being broken by his horns.

Cured My Cough In One Night

Relieved Me of a Throat Weakness That Resisted Every Treatment.

"SUFFERERS, FOLLOW MY PLAN"

"After being loaded down with a chronic hacking cough for months, you can imagine my joy at finding even a relief from it," writes Mrs. C. E. Taylor, of Boston, Mass., U.S.A. "I was troubled with an irritable throat weakness and asthma that simply defied every medicine I ever used. I was discouraged until a friend recommended Catarrhozone so strongly that I bought a dollar outfit from my druggist. I breathed in the healing fumes of Catarrhozone very deeply—used the inhaler five minutes every hour. After the first day I was better, and next morning my cough was gone. My asthma is cured, my throat weakness is gone, and I am well. For two years indeed, with the aid of Catarrhozone, I have kept perfectly well. I have also used Dr. Hamilton's Pills for constipation with grand results, and consider your remedies have done wonders for me."

Thousands of wonderful cures are reported every year. Catarrhozone does all that is claimed for it, and is certainly most efficient for colds, bronchitis, throat trouble, asthma and catarrh. The two months' treatment (large size), price $1.00, is guaranteed, smaller size 50c., sample size 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

EAT AND DRINK WITHOUT A STOMACH

Frankfurt, Nov. 21.—A man and woman in this town eat and drink and though entirely stomachless. One is 56 years old and lost his complete "anatomical stomach" under the knife of Dr. Sasse who operated on him for cancer. After thirty-five days this man was again allowed to eat solid food and his digestion is said to be entirely natural. The process of digestion in this patient is watched by X rays.

The second stomachless person has done without it for two years and is healthy looking and happy.

When she went on the operating table to have the useless stomach removed, she weighed only sixty pounds. Today she weighs one hundred and twelve.

As she does so well without a stomach, she thinks the stomach a useless encumbrance. However, there is one thing she misses; she never knows when she has had enough to eat, the feeling of satisfaction never entering her dining operations.

ARTHUR HAWKES WILL MAKE SECRET OFFER

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Arthur Hawkes, the non-partisan candidate in South Lanark, has promised to make an offer to Col. Balderson, the Independent Conservative candidate, at a meeting to be held in Smith's Falls on Monday evening. What the motive of the offer is Mr. Hawkes refuses to divulge until the meeting comes off.

TRAPPER RETURNS TO FIND FAMILY DEAD IN STORM

Wife's Body Found on Trail—She May Have Gone to Look for Him.

Pembroke, Nov. 22.—Conflicting stories of what at best must be a horrible tragedy, have reached here regarding the death of Mrs. D. Pilon on the upper Ottawa, near Des Joachims, and the disappearance of her two children.

It seems that Pilon, who is a trapper, left his home a couple of weeks ago, informing his wife that he was going to Des Joachims. Not returning when expected, the woman is believed to have started out in search of him, or to procure food for her family. When he returned home he found the family had left, and he then set out to search for them.

Mrs. Pilon's body was found on a trail leading from Wolverine Creek, about ten miles from her home. She had evidently died from exhaustion following the great storm of the previous night. It is also reported that the body of one of the children has been found.

Mrs. Pilon was in a poor state of health for such an experience and it is believed that the horror of the situation during Sunday night's storm deranged her mind.

FIVE GENERATIONS OF McWILLIAMS' FAMILY

The other day our esteemed fellow townsman, Dr. Bingham, was visited by Master Robert B. McWilliams, three-year-old son of Mr. Theodore McWilliams, of the Peterborough Hardware Co. This is the youngest of five generations of the McWilliams family that Dr. Bingham has known. They are as follows: Mr. Robert McWilliams, who was a resident of Belmont.

Mr. James McWilliams, his son, who for many years, was warden of the county buildings here.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams, his son, who is known to almost every man, woman and child in the midland district.

Mr. Theodore McWilliams, his son, who is one of the owners of the Peterborough Hardware Company's store, and last but by no means least

Robert B. McWilliams, three years old, who bids fair to become in process of time, a worthy descendent of his fathers.

Dr. Bingham, we might say, notwithstanding his years, is hale and hearty, and keeps in close touch with everything that is going on in the city and in foreign lands. He is one of the "boys" in matters of sport, and thoroughly enjoys life.

ARE THE LOCAL POLICE AND THE LICENSE INSPECTOR AT OUTS?

Saturdays Meeting of Police Commissioners Ended Without Any Apparent Satisfaction on Either Side

On Saturday afternoon the Police Commissioners met with Judge Huycke in the chair. Mayor Bradburn and Magistrate Dumble were present. The absence of City Clerk Armstrong, Mayor Bradburn acted as clerk

A letter was read from the legal committee asking that, when an accident occurs on the street, the police at once investigate conditions and report. The Mayor replied that when the City Solicitor gets a report of an accident he wants the police to furnish full information. The request was adopted.

A letter from the License Commissioners stating that they had received a complaint that the police did not fully back up the License Inspector in making convictions under the license law.

A letter from Chief Thompson countering the above, which is substantially correct, is given below:

Chief Thompson's Reply.

To the Board of Police Commissioners,—

Gentlemen,—Replying to the charges made by Joseph Stewart, License Inspector, against myself and my department, I beg to report as follows:

Re case of C. Gravel.

As you will notice his offence was committed in the township of Smith and the defendant, I understand, was living in Smith at the time the conviction was made, on Aug. 17th, defendant having been given 30 days to pay his fine. The fine was not paid and a distress warrant issued. On enquiry, I found the defendant was out of the city and returned the warrant, as usual. When a commitment warrant was issued I notified the department and again found defendant was out of the city. On or about Nov. 9th I was notified by P. C. Newhall that Gravell was arrested. By request of defendant, Archie Moore paid his fine. I do not recall Mr. Stewart speaking about warrant not being executed. I never send constables outside the city to execute warrants of commitment, but if such parties return to the city they are arrested.

Another local man against whom an information had been made in regard to the prohibited list. A summons was issued and served according to law. However as the man pleaded guilty and was fined, for the sake of his family I gave the matter no publicity.

Inspector Stewart said, in part, in the case of Gravell, he laid the information on July 7th. He was convicted on Aug. 7th. In the meantime the auditor came from Toronto and complained that Gravell had gone away. He afterwards found he was working at the hospital. He asked the police to hunt him up. He heard nothing from the police until early in November. Newhall was sent out and arrested Gravell. He told the Chief the law had been evaded long enough. He wanted the fine or the man arrested. He got the fine later on. He thought it better to report the matter to the License Commissioners. He had to do all the enquiring in the Gravell case himself. It was six weeks between the time he, the inspector, found Gravell was at the hospital and when the fine was paid. In the other case, he, the inspector, had found much difficulty on account of the man's family. The man was blacklisted. The speaker said the Chief was at the defendant's house when the latter was drunk. On Oct. 17th a neighbor across the way from the blacklister had trouble and the former came to the inspector's house to complain. The case was put off for some days. He left the name of two witnesses with P. C. Meagher. Several days passed by and one of his witnesses had to go to Kingston, through illness of a relative on the morning of the trial. On the morning of the trial, the Chief called him up by phone and asked, "would you be content if defendant pleads guilty?" Speaker said he would accept this if the name of the man supplying the liquor was given. Speaker seemed to claim that he had got into a mix up with defendant's wife because the papers had not been served.

Chief Thompson asked the inspector: "Have you not often dropped subpoenas to witnesses when the defendant has pleaded guilty?" "Yes, after consulting His Worship." "Does not his Worship often take a plea of guilty on the back of summonses?" "Yes." "Did you not agree to take a plea of guilty when the defendant gave away the name of those supplying liquor to defendant?" "Yes." "Would you think it necessary to serve witnesses with subpoenas when defendant pleads guilty?" "No."

Mr. Dumble asked the inspector: "Don't you think a woman is very reluctant to go into the witness box?" "Yes."

Chief Thompson said his statement was all he wanted to produce.

Here Mr. Dumble asked "How did you expect the Chief of Police to do what you did not do yourself?"

The inspector said he was not present for himself, but for the sufferers. The Chief here asked the inspector "Have you seen blacklisters under liquor without prosecuting them?" "Well, I may have seen them a little the worse." Here the inspector told what the man's wife told him, but he was ruled out. The inspector denied that the Chief had offered him the use of his men. He said the police never refused to assist him. The inspector said that the Chief when he takes a plea of guilty in such cases, turns in the fines to the city, whilst when the inspector acts the fines go to the government.

P. C. Meagher said he remembered the main bone of contention in the dispute. He did not serve subpoenas on witnesses as defendant had decided to plead guilty. Witness took the plea of guilty from defendant. It was a written plea. He has always served papers for the inspector when asked. The Chief then agreed that hereafter he would take no pleas of guilty on charges laid by the inspector.

Here the chairman remarked "you gentlemen had better shake hands and make friends," but no handshaking ensued. The inspector said he had no quarrel, and the Chief's face dimpled with a broad smile. Take your choice gentle reader.

EAST CITY'S PRESSING NEEDS

With the passing of Ashburnham into Peterborough's corporation two objects were achieved: the unity of a divided people, and the creating of a new city in Ontario, with all its responsibilities to and prestige in the Dominion. Since the day of its incorporation within our midst, East City, nee Ashburnham, has grown apace with other Peterborough districts, from which, however, it is still more or less divided by an obtruding river, the absence of street railway connecting links and an insufficiency of bridges. With its comfortable homes, its hospital, churches, business street, modern school, to say nothing of the Lift Lock, canal and Vermont Marble Co's works—to be followed in all probability by more new industries—East City should not much longer be denied easy access to both railway depots, via street car service, and a vehicle and pedestrian bridge at say Dalhousie street or adjacent thereto. These privileges would complete the connecting links between East City and Older Peterborough at all points, and incidentally advance the interests of Greater Peterborough as a whole.

Perhaps the most crying need at present is connection between East City's southern district and Peterborough's industrial south and south-west end. East City residents are practically cut off from Peterborough's industrial hive, thus retarding East City's residential growth. At one time the C. P.R.'s bridge was used by foot passengers, but to such an alarming extent that the company were obliged to forbid the use of the structure, in the people's own protection. And now it is incumbent upon Peterborough City as a united community to fill in the gap and provide that necessary missing link.

East City contributes to Peterborough's general municipal burden; is capably represented in the City Council and on the School Board; has given us an exemplary member of the Legislature in Mr. E. A. Peck, a safe-guardian of the city's finances in Ald. Anderson and may in the near future send to the Council Chamber's velvet chair a Chief Magistrate in the person of Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie. Since discarding the swaddling clothes of a village and uniting with Peterborough Town in the responsibilities of a city, the people of Old Ashburnham have contributed their fair quota to Greater Peterborough's progress. Consequently, future municipal governments are morally committed to advance ways and means for adequate bridge connection, at all necessary points, and encourage any acceptable scheme for street railway connection between the East and the West.

Plans for another bridge at or near Dalhousie street have already been drawn and estimates submitted. Circumstances would not permit of this year's Council undertaking the scheme the need of which was fully recognized. Next year, however, this proposition should be one of the first numbers on the municipal slate; it is the next great thing needed, and should be faced early and squarely by both the people and their representatives.

NAVAL SITUATION CAUSES CONCERN

Britain and United States Appear to be Acting in Perfect Concert

Washington, Nov. 22.—Rear Admiral Fletcher cabled to-day that the battleship New Hampshire had left Tuxpam to return to Vera Cruz in accordance with the pledge from the constitutionalist General Aguilar that his men would not molest foreign property, the movement was regarded as evidence of the restoration of order between Tuxpam and Tampico.

The Madero refugees were transferred late last night to the scout cruiser Chester from the battleship Rhode Island, and the Chester sailed for Havana.

With the full realization that there probably can be no immediate developments in the diplomatic scene pending a clearing of the tangle in which the Mexican Congress has involved itself, interest is now centred in the naval situation on the gulf coast. The approach of two British cruisers was communicated to the state department through the British embassy without eliciting any expressions of disapproval, and that is taken as another evidence that the United States and Great Britain are acting in perfect harmony as to [illegible] to protect foreign interests. It is pointed out in naval circles that German and French warships in the [illegible] waters, there could be no objection to the presence of British ships.

NEGROES LYNCHED FOR TRIVIAL ACTS; AND FORTY-FIVE IN YEAR

Number Who Have Met Death in Southern States Little Decreased

New York, Nov. 22.—From Tuskegee, Ala., Booker T. Washington, the noted negro educator, writes, calling the public's attention to the numerous lynchings in the several southern states recently. "At the end of six months of the present year there had been twenty-four cases of lynching," writes Mr. Washington. "At the end of ten months—Nov. 1—there were forty-five lynchings, a reduction of four as compared with the same period for 1912. Within the past four months—July, August, September and October—there have been twenty one lynchings, making a total as I have said of forty-five lynchings for ten months. Of this number only seven individuals were charged with rape. It is worth while, I think, to state a few typical cases for which human life was taken by a mob."

Mr. Washington then summarizes the lynchings and their causes, the latter being, assisting a criminal to escape, a burglary, for frightening women and children, though offender was half-witted, sweeping dirt on shoes of passersby and other trivial crimes. Commenting on the summary, Mr. Washington says: "A reduction of the number of lynchings by four, though small, means something in way of higher civilization."

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES AT MARK ST. METHODIST CHURCH

Large Congregations Hear Eloquent and Impressive Sermons Yesterday

"Crowded and enthusiastic" is an adequate description of the congregations at Mark street Methodist anniversary services yesterday. At 11 a.m. not six seats were empty, and in the evening the church was packed to the door.

The platform was tastefully decorated with plants and flowers.

Under the efficient leadership of the organist, Mr. Miller, an excellent choir, augmented by the presence of an ex-leader, and other friends rendered admirable service.

Morning Service.

The anthem "Come let us sing unto the Lord," including a duet finely rendered by Misses Howson and Iredale, was given by the choir; a male quartette sang, "Nearer, still nearer." After the sermon, Mr. [illegible], former leader of the choir sang with fine effect, letting every word be plainly distinguished, "His love can never fail." Rev. T. J. Mansell, from the seventh verse of the first chapter of St. John's first epistle, preached an impressive sermon, listened to with rapt attention by the entire audience.

Evening Service.

This was of special interest. Ivor Brook of Toronto gave an earnest and thankful address on "Opportunity," illustrated by stereopticon slides, and two songs by Mrs. Hughes, "The search of the Wise Men," and "Let the lower lights be burning." We were told how the innkeeper of Bethlehem missed his opportunity, as did the rich young man, Zaccheus and Pilate. But the dying thief by his two spoken sentences showed that his opportunity was seized, as the shepherds and the wise men took advantage of theirs. Did we make the most of the opportunity of learning better things at our mother's knee? Finally, Hoffmann's portrait of Christ in the attitude of saying "Come unto Me" was shown and the congregation was invited to sing "My faith looks up to Thee." Most of the pictures were copies of the works of great artists and were very fine indeed.

MANAGER OF BANK GETS SEVEN YEARS, LOSS WAS LARGE

Several Officials of German Institution That Failed With Big Liabilities Sentenced.

Dortmund, Germany, Nov. 22.—After a trial lasting 114 days Herr Ohm, managing director of the Niederdeutsche Bank, which failed with liabilities of $12,000,000 on July 27 1910, was sentenced to-day to seven years' imprisonment for wrecking the institution by appropriating funds. A public accountant, Herr Hartwig, was at the same time sentenced to three years' imprisonment and a number of other bank employes to terms of from four to six months each.

The bank had been started some years ago on a small capital and Ohm appealed to the poorer classes to make deposits, spurring them on to do so by using the religious quotations. Later on the capital increased until it reached $3,000,000.

The evidence showed that Ohm had made fraudulent entries and published false sheets to cover up the bank's condition.

THREE CURRENCY BILLS ARE NOW BEFORE U. S. SENATE FOR CHOICE

Washington, Nov. 22.—The banking and currency committee will hand back to the floor of the senate this afternoon the Glass-Owen bill, accompanied by two other bills, and the senate will have to choose between the three or grind them all into pulp and then make a new bill of its own. In short the committee is utterly unable to agree. JUST ONE APPLICATION AND THE HAIRS VANISH
(Helps to Beauty)
Here is a very simple and effective way to banish objectionable hairs or fuzz: Mix into a stiff paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the undesirable hairs, apply and after about 2 or 3 minutes remove the paste, wash the skin and every trace of hair will have vanished. This method is quite harmless and leaves the skin soft and spotless. Be sure, however, to get the delatone in an original package, otherwise it may not be of the correct strength and purity.

WILD HORSES OF WEST

Descendants of Animals Abandoned During Cariboo Gold Rush

More than three thousand wild horses, in herds of from 24 to 100, are roaming over the hills and valleys in the interior of British Columbia, according to a report brought to Edmonton by James Bradley, after an extended exploration tour of the coast province.

Wicked Cost of Cheap Beauty.

A newspaper picture of a music hall dancer, accompanying an article in which she is supposed to tell how to become beautiful, shows her wearing a headdress of aigrettes and swathed in white furs, other details of her costume being lost in the blur of ink. In England, where aigrettes are known as the "white badge of cruelty," the sale of these plumes is forbidden by law, and similar statutes have been enacted in several American states. The reason is that these plumes of the female heron can be taken most readily during the breeding season, and when the mother has been slain for the sake of this ornament, the young perish from starvation. The destruction of dozens of mother herons and the slow torture of their broods must have been required for this particular headdress, and a score of ermines would be needed to make a wrap of the generous proportions portrayed. Quite aside from the market value of the plumes of dead birds and the skins of dead animals, the young woman has paid a high price for her beauty, such as it is.—New York Evening Post.

On Solitude.

There can be no very black melancholy to him who lives in the midst of Nature and has his senses still. There was never yet such a storm but it was Aeolian music to a healthy and innocent ear. Nothing can rightly compel a simple brave man to a vulgar sadness. While I enjoy the friendship of the seasons I trust that nothing can make life a burden to me. The gentle rain which waters my beans and keeps me in the house today is not drear and melancholy, but good for me, too. Though it prevents my hoeing them, it is of far more worth than my hoeing. If it should continue so long as to cause the seeds to rot in the low lands it would still be good for the grass on the uplands, and, being good for the grass, it would be good for me.—From Henry David Thoreau's Essay on "Solitude."

"It Had to Be!"

The war in the near east has been responsible for a number of little stories about the inhabitants of the Balkans that throb with human interest. One of the latest and most pathetic of these tells how a soldier leading a horse stopped before the door of a peasant's house in Old Servia. The householder came forward, smoking a long pipe.

"Isn't that my Ivan's horse?" he asked, after a pause.

"Yes, good uncle."

"Where was he killed?"

"At Veles, good uncle. He fell at the capture of the town."

"Then it's all right. My father and my two brothers were driven out of their homes by the Turks of Veles. Now they are avenged; but Ivan gave his life. It had to be!"

"Where shall I put up the horse, uncle?"

"Take him, my friend, for yourself. I have no further use for him. Take him and ride with my blessing to Constantinople."

Then the old man re-entered his lonely cottage, repeating to himself, "It had to be! It had to be!"

Modern Dress Sensible

The decency or indecency of dress depends a good deal on the person who wears it; and, more still, on the manner in which she wears it, says a writer in The Winnipeg Saturday Post. The costume of the present day is far more becoming, much more sanitary, and incomparably more convenient than many of the fashions which have prevailed in the past fifty years.

The Queen of Holland is also favorably disposed towards French dressmakers, although she frequents the shops of her own capital. Her Majesty's fondness for Nile green is a standing joke in Paris shops. The story is told that when she purchased a blue costume on one occasion the genuineness of the order was called in question by the firm, so seldom had she departed from the custom of selecting Nile green and white. The Queen smilingly confirmed the order on request, but is said to have chafed under the amusement caused by the story in her own circle, and to have withdrawn her patronage from that particular establishment.

Queen Helena of Italy has a taste for colors, and wears them with a true mountaineer indifference in vogue consistently with her Montenegrin origin. EGGS ON THE FARM

Indifference the Cause of Great Waste in Eggs

Every year there is a loss of millions of dollars in bad eggs, the direct result of haphazard methods of production, marketing and shipping which are now in vogue. The greatest part of this loss is due mainly to ignorance or indifference on the part of the farmer and producer, and only a small part is caused by carelessness on the part of the buyer and shipper.

Exhaustive tests emphasized the fact that infertile eggs keep better than fertile. One-third of the annual loss in eggs is due to "blood rings." A blood ring is caused by the [illegible] and subsequent death of the embryo of a fertile egg, [illegible] to heat. [illegible] a fertile egg will spoil [illegible] almost as quickly as [illegible].

Some of the loss due to "heats" and "spots" is caused by [illegible] in the nest, and is largely, if not entirely, preventable.

Among the results of the tests it was found that:—

[illegible]

[illegible] such, the nest in the straw stack, or under the corn crib, and the stolen nest, as well as the "keeping of eggs in the house, favor the production of spots, blood rings and rots.

Infertile eggs, regardless of where they may be kept, are much more resistant to deterioration than fertile.

Two-thirds of the total loss in fertile and infertile eggs takes place on the farm. The basic factors responsible for this condition are the haphazard methods of poultry management on the farm.

The results of all the experimental work point to the fact that the production of the infertile egg is the greatest asset in the attempt to produce high quality market eggs during hot weather.

To assure a high-quality of product and prevent in a large measure the loss experienced in egg production producers would do well to observe the following five simple rules:—

1. Give the hens clean nests.
2. Gather eggs at least once daily.
3. Keep eggs in a cool, dry place.
4. Market eggs at least twice a week.
5. Kill or sell all mature male birds as soon as the hatching season closes.

BATHS AND BATHING.

Frequent bathing is an essential if the skin is to have proper opportunity to carry off waste material, and act readily.

There are three kinds of bath suitable for the majority of people. The tepid or lukewarm bath is from 80 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit. This has no especial effect, apart from cleansing. It is suitable for invalids, the elderly, the convalescent, and those who do not re-act well to cold water. It may be taken at any time of the day, but preferably before meals and at bedtime.

The warm bath, which is especially appropriate for infants, is 90 to 100 degrees. It nearly always prevents sleeplessness in adults when taken just before retiring. It also is excellent after severe muscular exercise to relieve soreness and stiffness of joints and muscles. It should not be employed until two or three hours after a meal, as blood may be drawn away from the stomach, with resulting digestive disturbances. It is not wise for the bather to venture into the cold immediately after a warm bath.

The third type is the hot bath which is taken when the water is from 105 to 110 degrees. It is unsuitable, except for the strong, as it has a depressing effect on the circulation. It should only be used at night, or when the bather is to stay in a warm atmosphere—and not after meals.

At bedtime, however, the really hot bath may cause sleeplessness unless a cold cloth is kept on the head during the bath. The most valuable use of the hot bath is to prevent colds after exposure and chilling, and to produce sweating in many disorders.

The cold bath should not be indulged in by any who have palpitation or any form of weak heart. It is not wise for the old nor the very young. If it is taken, it should be followed with a vigorous rubdown with a rough towel to insure a rapid circulation of the blood.

Earache is one of the most painful ailments of the body. To relieve it evaporate the alcohol from a teaspoonful of laudanum; add half as many drops as you started with, of glycerine or sweet oil. Make this lukewarm, and pour into the ear, taking hold of the upper tip and pulling toward the crown of the head.

Or wet a scrap of linen in a teaspoonful of laudanum, dry before a fire, cut into bits, place in the bowl of a tobacco pipe, light it, cover with a coarse handkerchief. Insert end of the stem (mouthpiece), suitably proportioned of the laudanum into the ear. Then apply the lips to the bowl and blow the smoke from the burning opium of the laudanum into the ear.

Sometimes a few drops of ordinary sweet oil dropped into the ear, when the head is so inclined that it will remain in the ear for several minutes, is instant relief.

A hot hop bag or onion poultice applied to the ear as a pillow rest at night will often draw a gathering in the ear, to a head, and cause it to break.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Our observation is that the blunter a man is the quicker he gets to the point.

The Lindsay Warder says the umbrella is vanishing. Somebody must be going home earlier than the others.

In these days of the uplift polite society might take a hint from the fact that the Bartender's Union of Poughkeepsie barred the tango from its annual ball.

The militant suffragettes of London are now tearing the coats off the police, and cutting their suspenders. The sights of the "bobbies" in union suits chasing the erring sisters must be highly interesting to the bystanders.

A fashion magazine says that the waist line of men will be more defined this year. But many of them are so well defined that the waist is seen coming around a corner before the man appears in sight.

LAURIER VERSUS ROWELL

In the provincial elections of 1911 the County of Bruce elected three Liberals against the Whitney government, with a total Liberal majority of exactly 860, as follows:

Centre Bruce, 164.
North Bruce, 391.
South Bruce, 305.

The municipalities which compose South Bruce for the Commons gave 398 Liberal majority.

This shows that while the Laurier Opposition is more popular than the Laurier Government was, yet in point of popularity it is not in the same class with the Rowell Opposition.

THEY'RE "SEALS" THIS YEAR

Last year's confusion in the minds of Canadians, caused by the order of the Post Office officials at first prohibiting Christmas Seals on letters, and later permitting their use on the backs of mail matter, has been cleared up this year by the issue of a timely statement from Ottawa explicitly stating the Department's regulations. The "Stamps" henceforth to be known as "Seals" may be placed on the backs of letters, where they will not confuse the Mail Clerks. They must be also unlike a postage stamp in design.

A year ago, when the ban was first put on the little tokens of good cheer, the effect on the various charitable societies, using them, promised to be severe. The National Sanitarium Association, which derives considerable of its support for the Muskoka Free Hospital for consumptives from their distribution, led the van in a protest to Ottawa, and the order was modified. The prompt action of the Department this year, in stating the regulations, will avert last year's uncertainty and more of the seals will be used this year than ever before in the history of the movement.

FEWER TRADE DISPUTES AND WORKING DAYS LOST

The Department of Labour reports that the industrial situation from the standpoint of the number of trades disputes in existence, was better in October than at any time during the year. The loss of time to employees through the trade disputes actually commencing during that month was small, and in all there were only eight disputes in existence, this number including those already in existence at the beginning of the month, and those which commenced during October. On no occasion during the present year has the number been as small as this; the next best record being in September when eleven disputes were reported. About 3,657 employees were directly and indirectly involved in the disputes of the month. About 70,000 working days were lost through strikes and lockouts during October as compared with 83,280 during September and 98,000 in October, 1912. As in the previous months the most important dispute was that of the coal miners on Vancouver Island. It is difficult to estimate the loss of time through this dispute, as it is probable that the strikers obtain work from time to time in other localities and that other men are taken on by the operators concerned. An estimate would show about 2,800 men out of work directly as a result of this dispute during October.

NO FREIGHT ON

Seattle, Wash., Nov. 21.—All of the big questions were out of the way when the American Federation of Labor met to-day excepting the dispute between the regular and seceding factions of the Brotherhood of Electrical Workers. The election of officers and selection of a convention city, probably will take place Saturday morning. The predicted fight between the administration and the radicals has not materialized.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE.

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

ARTISTS OF MERIT IN WORKHOUSE

Many Unfortunates Really Clever Making Articles From Very Inferior Materials

Many inmates of British workhouses are clever, ingenious, brainy people, who through no fault of their own are down on their luck, homeless and friendless. Many of these are old, infirm, crippled, blind, deaf, or afflicted in some way or other. But where there's a will there's a way, and the ingenious man will generally find scope for his ingenuity, even in a workhouse. A man in West Bromwich Workhouse makes dainty hatpin stands, etc., from bones. His only tool is a penknife; his other accessories are sand paper, glue, and scraps of velvet. The bones are washed perfectly clean, and after being cut the requisite size and shape they are rubbed and polished till they become as smooth and bright as ivory.

At Wolverhampton Workhouse a helpless cripple—except with his hands—made a beautiful bed-spread. It was composed of small squares of linen. The man designed the pattern for each square, no two alike, and then embroidered them with blue thread. The finished article was valued at $25.

Three inmates of Chester Workhouse, one an imbecile, completed a handsome pulpit for the workhouse church. It is worth $400, although the cost of material was an insignificant sum.

A pauper at Rochford Workhouse carved a splendid baptismal font from a solid block of Bath stone.

Kensington Workhouse contains a number of oil paintings which were executed by one of the inmates. Among them is an excellent copy of Rubens's "Descent from the Cross"; also portraits of the Royal Family.

An ex-member of the Scottish Academy was for some time an inmate of Carlisle Workhouse. While there he painted several landscapes which now brighten the walls of the workhouse hospital.

The Wirrall Guardians had a most troublesome inmate until he turned his attention to wood carving. Among other things he made an exquisitely carved and polished oak tray. Another man in the same workhouse made a salt-cellar from a salmon-tin and a piece of broken glass, and an artistic flower vase out of a soda-water bottle and bent ironwork.

Many clever musicians find their way to the workhouse. For several years an inmate of the Dudley Workhouse played the organ at all the services held there.

In Chelsea Workhouse there used to be a paupers' newspaper called "The Searchlight." It was in the form of four closely written pages of foolscap.

Ernest Stockdale, a blind inmate of Windsor Workhouse, was paid $15 by a London publisher for ten hymns he had written.

An inmate of Newington Workhouse certainly had an eye for business. After residing there six years he succeeded in accumulating $42, being made up of pennies which he earned by writing letters for other inmates, the charge being one penny a letter.

Quite recently a clever sculptor was discovered in the Southwark Workhouse. He made a five foot lectern for use in the workhouse chapel. Although made of rough yellow deal full of knots and cracks it is a splendid piece of work. It is surmounted by an eagle with outstretched pinions. The bird revolves upon a carved pedestal. The panels of the pedestal are works of art in themselves. One depicts an angel raising a child from the ground, another an angel pointing heavenward. The same man also fashioned quite a number of small animals which he colored and stained in close imitation of the natural objects, and he is very clever with crayons, for he drew a peacock on one of the walls, every feather of which is beautifully colored with surprising naturalness.

Sidewalk Signs

Lanterns to project advertisements upon pavements are now made with electric lights powerful enough to be effective in the best lighted city streets.

CITY WATER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I have been informed that city water, in certain localities, is being supplied to people living outside the city boundaries. Kindly let me know through The Times if this is true and oblige.

D. R. Moore.

Reply.—The Times called up Mr. Frank Adams, Secretary of the Water Commissioners in regard to the above, and was informed that the Brinton Carpet Company as well as a number of residences on the south side of Lock street, and also at Byersville, are being supplied with city water. These people have to make their own connection with the city system, which city ratepayers do not have to do, besides having to pay 50 per cent. more for their water supply.—Ed. Times.

PROPER BREATHING

Few People Allow Their Lungs to Get Full Play

Correct breathing is not only the best health-giver, but it is also the great beautifier and does much to give roundness to the figure and a healthy bloom to the cheek. Let it be understood that the human body consists of millions upon millions of cells; that each cell must have its quotum of oxygen to support life; that the more the cell breathes the more it lives; that a withdrawing of oxygen means a flagging, a slow-dying—consumption. Every cell that has sufficient oxygen for its needs is a healthy cell; the body that is composed of healthy cells is a disease-resisting body. It is known that the bacillus of tuberculosis cannot endure oxygen; therefore, to ward off consumption and other forms of disease enough oxygen must be inhaled. From personal experience extending over many years I can say that the habit of full, easy breathing—that is, filling the chest slowly from the diaphragm to the collar-bone without strain of any kind—will convert a sallow, muddy complexion into one of glowing health, for oxygen burns up the waste material, and it is eliminated from the body in a variety of ways. But what is not generally understood is that the vast majority of people cannot breathe fully and freely through the natural channel—the nose—on account of some congestion.—J. W. Williams, in the "Pall Mall Gazette."

$10,000,000 a Year Wasted on Trusses

How 60 Days' Trial Protects You Against Throwing Money Away

Away With Worthless Makeshifts

Ninety-nine out of every hundred dollars spent for elastic and spring trusses might about as well be thrown away.

Close to ten million dollars a year—in this country alone—is practically wasted on such contrivances.

And all simply because nine ruptured out of ten trust to a mere try-on or body examination instead of first making a thorough test.

A Mere Try-on Is a Snare

You can't possibly tell anything about a truss or anything else for rupture merely by trying it on.

A truss or so-called "appliance" may seem all right at first and afterward prove utterly worthless.

The only way in the world you can make sure of exactly what you're getting is by making a thorough sixty-day test without having to risk any money.

The Only Thing Good Enough To Stand a 60-Day Test

There is only one thing of any kind for rupture that you can get on sixty-days trial—

Only one thing good enough to stand such a long and thorough test—

That is our guaranteed rupture holder.

We'll make one especially for your case—make it to your measure—and let you try it sixty days—

We'll practically lend it to you that long—without asking you to risk a penny.

If it doesn't keep your rupture from coming out or bothering you in any way, no matter how hard you work or strain—if it doesn't prove every claim we make—then you can send it back and it won't cost you a single cent.

Made on New Principle

This guaranteed rupture holder—the famous Cluthe Automatic Massaging Truss—is so utterly different from everything else for rupture that it has received eighteen separate patents. It is far more than just a truss. Made on an absolutely new principle.

Unlike everything else, it is self-regulating, self-adjusting—instantly and automatically protects you from every strain so your rupture can't possibly be forced out.

And in addition to this constant holding, it provides the only way ever discovered for overcoming the weakness which is the real cause of rupture.

Just how it does that—entirely automatically—is all explained in the free book which the coupon below will bring you.

No Belt—No Leg-Straps—No Springs

Does away entirely with the curse of belts, leg-straps and springs. People who have tried it say it is as comfortable as their clothing. It is water-proof—will hold in the bath. Also perspiration-proof and easily kept clean.

Will Save You From Operation

[illegible]

It has completely cured hundreds and hundreds of people whose cases seemed almost hopeless.

HOTEL ON WHEELS

Montreal Man Has Last Word in Automobile Luxury

The private Pullman as a means of luxurious travel has a rival in an automobile "land yacht," equipped for Mr. U. H. Dandurand of Montreal.

There are sleeping accommodation for ten persons, telephone system electric lights, a kitchenette and a combination smoking and dining-room —in fact all the comforts of home from a refrigerator to a writing desk.

The body has five separate compartments. Immediately behind the driver's seat are quarters for the chauffeur. A room with sleeping accommodations for five women comes next. Another compartment, six feet square which is used as a combination smoking and dining-room, has berths for four. It is equipped with two extension tables, each three feet long by nineteen inches wide, and a folding desk.

Directly behind this compartment is a kitchenette, so designed as to make use of every inch of available space. A linen cupboard, a neat gasoline stove and a refrigerator make up the equipment.

GIRL FINDS GOLD

Owners to Honor Memory of Child Who Found First Nugget

It is just 100 years ago that a girl of 14, Katia Bogdanoff, while playing on the banks of the River Meihowka, found a glittering stone, which afterwards was found to be a solid gold nugget. Katia, whose chance find led to the discovery of extensive gold deposits in the Ural Mountains, had her nugget roughly snatched away from her, and received as a reward twenty-five strokes of the birch, administered by order of a foreman of the then existing Demidoff iron works.

This man, in his ignorance, feared that the Russian Government, to whom belongs by law all precious metal found in the soil, would on hearing of the find put him out of employment and permit only gold mining in the region. The news of the nugget could, however, not be entirely suppressed in this way, although the first gold washing operations in the Urals were not undertaken until ten years later.

Now the Ural gold mines produce more than fifty tons of gold every year. The mine owners have now decided, by way of tardy recognition, to erect a statue of little Katia on the spot where she found the first nugget.

GIFT OF MOUNTAINS

They Restored to Young Wife Her True and Loving Husband.

BY H. M. EGBERT.

When John Anderson, at the age of forty, married Miss Lucy Page, aged twenty-five, the gossips shook their heads and smiled. Fifteen years' difference in the age of husband and wife is not an insurmountable barrier, other things being equal. But Anderson was a bookish man whose sole hobby was botany, and Miss Page was the only daughter of a worldly mother who had suddenly been reduced from affluence to poverty.

For a year they lived happily, traveling as the needs of the encyclopedia dictated. They learned the habits of the rarer orchids in South America and studied the hardy mosses in Labrador. The volume on Alpine plants was to be the chef d'oeuvre of the great work, and thus their second summer found them in Switzerland. And here it was that the inevitable occurred. Lucy Anderson's emotional nature, which had concentrated itself upon flowers, found its attraction in Hubert Trench.

It was a commonplace affair, and, since both were persons of some character, the awakening came slowly. Anderson was taken with the younger man when the three met at the Hotel Anglais in Swingli. The professor intended to spend three months there, under the shadow of the frowning Col Saint-Jean, where rare species of the edelweiss flourish. Trench was a resident at the hotel, whither he had come to ward off a threatened pulmonary attack.

"Trench, I want you to take care of Mrs. Anderson while I am gathering my specimens," said Anderson frankly. "You two young people will amuse each other, and she cannot fairly be tied perpetually to an old fogy like me."

His Clothes Were in Rags.

So he left them there and went away, and lo! half way up the ascent he found what he was seeking, hidden in a tiny nook in the side of the Col. He hurried back with it triumphantly, eager to display his trophy.

There was a little window in the hut, and the professor, childlike as he was in many particulars, halted outside and peered in. It was his intention to fling his nosegay at his wife's feet. What he saw, however, arrested his attention. Trench was kneeling before Mrs. Anderson, who was seated in the little wooden chair. His head was raised and hers bent, and her tears fell on his face.

"I love you, Lucy," he said. "So I shall go away and never see you again. I am not ashamed of my love for you, though I tried to hide it. But before I go tell me that you will always love me."

"I shall—always love you." Professor Anderson heard his wife answer.

Half an hour later he came noisily around to the entrance, to find his wife and Trench, seated apart, talking with reckless gaiety. The professor showed them his specimens and seemed in a boisterous good humor. They congratulated him [illegible]. Then, at his suggestion, they roped themselves together for a descent.

The descent of the Col is harder than the climb. One false step in the icy slopes and the lives of all are endangered. The professor went first, Trench following him, and Mrs. Anderson bringing up the rear. Cautiously they proceeded until they reached the declivity where the Col falls in a sheer precipice to the hotel, a thousand feet below. Then Trench felt the rope tighten and was flung to his knees. He heard a cry from above. Next moment he became aware that the three were clutching for life at the slippery walls. And Anderson's legs dangled over the precipitous edge.

After five minutes they knew the issue. If the professor's dead weight did not drag them down they two could win to safety. With him, poised over the abyss, unable to move, held only by the rope, death from the cold would be inevitable. There was but one chance of safety, and that for two, not three.

Anderson glanced up. His wife lay upon the top of a little outcrop of rock, some distance away. Trench was almost at Anderson's side, for the rope was knotted and caught around a rocky [illegible]. He made a sign of secrecy and strained himself upward until his lips were almost in Trench's ear.

"Cut the rope!" he hissed, and saw the look of terror on Trench's face.

"It is for her sake," he continued. "Trench, I was looking in at the window this afternoon. I don't blame you! I was an old fool to ruin her life, and as long as I live she will be [illegible]. I ask only two things of you; that you will marry her and always [illegible] graves; and that you will publish my encyclopedia."

There was no thought of concealment at such a juncture. Trench bowed his head in shame.

"I can't cut the rope," he answered. "I am no murderer. I would rather die."

"For her sake," whispered Anderson, but Trench only shook his head and turned away.

Suddenly the rope quivered. The dead weight ceased. He looked around. Where Anderson had been was only the clean-severed edge of the rope, and he was not visible.

The searching parties failed to discover what they sought. Doubtless, they said, the body had fallen into the glacier. It would be years before it yielded up its dead. There was nothing to do.

Two days later Trench and Mrs. Anderson sailed from Genoa for America. Though no word of love had passed between them it was instinctively recognized that their lives could not be divided. But all during the voyage she kept to her stateroom and he to his, and hardly a word passed between them. After their arrival she went to her mother's house and Trench to his hotel. For three weeks she met his perfunctory visits with cold indifference.

The professor had been dead a month when Trench resolved to put an end to the suspense. He called again and for the first time brought up the subject of the future. He asked her formally to be his wife. But she who had been martyrized by her husband's life, now felt the shadow of the dead man between them. She felt no love for Trench.

"But why?" he asked desperately.

"I saw the rope," she answered.

"You saw the rope?" Trench stammered.

"It was cut through, not frayed," she cried angrily. "You killed him, Mr. Trench. Had it been otherwise—but in God's sight you are a murderer."

Then he told her. "It was he who cut the rope, Lucy," he pleaded. "He knew; he saw us that afternoon; he wished to sacrifice himself to make us happy. And he asked only that I would marry you and—and bring out his encyclopedia," he ended lamely.

"I shall never marry you," she answered, and left him.

The next week Lucy sailed for Europe. The Swiss season was over and the snow which always shrouded the mountains had crept down into the valleys.

The hotel was closed, but she found winter quarters at the home of a peasant guide. These simple folks remembered all the details of the tragedy. The body had not been found, they told her. Years might pass. Could one not explore the glacier? Undoubtedly.

She would go alone, she said. She would ascend the peaks in early winter, when the snow hid everything.

She remembered now that, in the excitement of that afternoon, she had left the professor's notes, which he entrusted to her, in the hut.

The journey to the hut was accomplished by midday. A heavy gale had sprung up, but, even through the driving snow she fancied that she saw smoke ascending from the chimney. Suddenly her heart began pounding wildly. She found the door closed and began hammering on it; and in the snow all round were tracks of shoes. And suddenly it swung open and the professor confronted her.

His clothes were rags, his beard hung down upon his breast; but his blue eyes shone clearly behind the thick convex lenses; and in his hand were the lost notes, now greatly amplified and a perfect volume in themselves. And the two stared at each other as though they had arisen from the dead. Then suddenly the professor's arms opened and he drew her to him and led her inside the hut.

"But you did not fall?" she asked him presently. "You planned to escape, so that I could marry that—that man?" She could not bring herself to mention his name.

"Well, I—I planned to fall," answered John Anderson in embarrassment. "But I didn't know there was a tree growing just under the ledge that would catch me and hold me. So, when I found myself safe, I said, 'Here's your chance to make three people happy, John!'"

"Three?" said his wife in unutterable reproach.

"Well, you and—and him," he corrected. "And I knew I could live here for three months, with the government provisions and fuel from the hills, though it has been cold, my dear; and since I hadn't anything else to do with myself I thought I'd work on the encyclopedia. And it's finished today!" He pulled out a huge bundle of notes. "Sixty-five new alpine specimens and four complete genera and—"

"And one wife," said Lucy, nestling up to him.

JOCKYES ARE GENERALLY PAID VERY LARGE SALARIES

That is, the Ones at the Top Earn as Much as Bank Presidents

The successful jockey has always been the object of a certain amount of hero worship, and in receipt of very substantial remuneration. In England, says a writer in the Birmingham Post, a jockey is paid not less than $25 for a winning mount and $15 for a losing mount, but these sums afford little indication of what is the aggregate income of a leading jockey, although it can easily be ascertained by adding up the number of mounts, successful and unsuccessful, that he is in receipt of an extremely good income, often approaching $10,000, and sometimes exceeding that amount to a substantial extent. The following return is interesting as showing the annual incomes, on mounts alone, of the older school of jockeys: S. Loates, $18,075; "Morny" Cannon $11,670; W. Bradford, $10,000; G. Barrett, $9,550; F. Allsopp, $8,000, and so on down the line.

The sums received for mounts however, do not afford any reliable indication of a jockey's income. Danny Maher earned something like $7,500 on his mounts alone in one season, but he could have dispensed with this sum and still have had a comfortable income to his credit. His retaining fees are large and he rides only for the leading stables and most prominent owners. The same might be said of F. Wootton and A. Whalley.

Big Retaining Fees

The jockey obtains, of course, his chief revenue from retaining fees. These are paid by the owners of racehorses for the right to the jockey's services when they are required, and there are several cases in which one jockey is in receipt of retaining fees from two or more owners amongst whom there is an understood order of preference. The retaining fees today, as in the case of Maher, are frequently $5,000 or more a year; $2,500 is quite a common amount for a second call, and a similar sum is often paid for the privilege of commanding a jockey's services in the event that the first and second claims are not made. In addition, many leading jockeys earn from $2,000 to $4,000 a year by riding "trainers' trials."

Fred Archer received prodigious sums when in the zenith of his fame. For instance, when he won the Cesarewitch on Rosebery he received from the owner $5,000, and on winning the memorable race for the Derby of 1880, when Bend Or snatched victory at the post from "Robert the Devil," his gift from the owner, the Duke of Devonshire, was $2,500. [illegible] that amount was doubled when [illegible] years later, Archer won the Derby a second time for his Grace.

Other Big Presents

John Watts got $10,000 from Mr. Abington for steering "Merry Hampton" to victory in the Derby of 1887, and a similar amount from Lord Rosebery when he won on "Ladas" in 1894. J. Daley received an even larger sum when he won the Derby in 1867 from 30 other competitors, on Mr. H. Chaplin's "Hermit."

The largest sum from one person is said to have been received by Wells —a native of Sutton Coldfield—when in 1868, after winning the Derby on "Blue Gown," he was presented by Sir Joseph Hawley with the whole of the Derby stakes of $37,250. Wells had twice previously won the Derby.

In recent years it has been the custom with owners to give a big cheque, rarely less than $5,000, to the jockey winning for them one of the chief events of the year. Tod Sloan had phenomenal success on the English racecourse, and his earnings in his first memorable season were probably not less than $75,000.

Gifts From Outside

Again, presents figure largely in the incomes of jockeys, and it is said that, during one week of brilliant riding Sloan received $5,000 in gifts from known and anonymous admirers. The outside public are extremely generous to jockeys who have been instrumental in landing for them big stakes. In fact, gamblers are proverbially good natured—liberal to a degree if money comes their way. Money comes and goes easily.

"TRIAL OF THE FYX"

The Assay commissioners reported to the Minister of Finance at Ottawa the result of the "trial of the Ottawa Pyx." The assays and trials were made at the mint and both gold and silver coinage were found to be within the legal "remedy" as to weight and fineness. Eighteen ten dollar and nineteen five dollar gold pieces melted together weighed within fourteen one hundred thousandths of an ounce of the standard. Of the silver coins, a package of four fifty-cent pieces, 24 twenty-five cent pieces, 12 ten-cent pieces and 18 five-cent pieces melted into an ingot weighed within one one-thousandth part of an ounce, of the standard.

THE FARM GARDEN

How to Have a Succession of Vegetables That Will Please

The ideal farm garden should be about 110 by 220 feet, the rows should run north and south so that each row will get full benefit of both the morning and evening sun. It should always be near the house on rich, well drained land. It should contain every vegetable and small fruit that can be successfully grown in the locality. Don't grow bushes or shrubs in the garden. Every farm should have these too, but not in the vegetable garden.

Keep every foot of the garden busy throughout the growing season. [illegible] corn, beans, tomatoes, celery, cabbage and turnips can follow such early crops as beets, lettuce, radishes and peas. The returns will be doubled and the land will be none the worse for the double cropping.

HUMANE RED MEN

Canadian Government's Gratitude to Good Samaritans of the Wilds

For their humane work and acts of great heroism, the Department of Indian affairs decided to grant substantial reward to Chief Woomanocockie and Sam Batiste, two Indians of the Barbine reserve in British Columbia. Woomanocockie cared for a white man who, having strayed from his friends, lost his reason when nearly 200 miles from civilization. The Indian supplied food to the deranged man, whom he often had difficulty in restraining, and nursing him with kindly patience till friends arrived from outside.

Batiste supplied provisions to two prospectors, Frank Rahner and W. H. Wrigley, who were wintering on the Indian hunting grounds. They ran short of food, and were taken into camp by Batiste, who, with his family, went without food for some days as a result of their hospitality to the strangers, who had been rescued when in the utmost extremity. The kindness of the Indians saved the life of Wrigley, but Rahner succumbed as a result of exposure and hardship. The Indian lost one of his children [illegible] the privation suffered in sharing [illegible] larder with the white men. [illegible] Royal Humane Society's rewards [illegible] also be sought for the red man.

VICTIMS OF CANCER

Increase in the Number of Deaths Last Year Compared With 1851

Cancer statistics by the Society for the Prevention and Relief of Cancer show that in 1851 17,305 persons died in the United Kingdom from cancer, a rate of 407 per million persons living. Last year the number of deaths was 42,134, or 900 out of every million persons living.

In 1851 the percentage of cancer deaths to deaths from all causes in England and Wales was 1.23; last year it had risen to 7.16. The highest percentages of deaths—12.3—occurred, in the case of men, between forty-five and fifty-five years of age. In the case of women it was between the ages of thirty-five and forty-five, and reached 15.6.

Cows That Pay

Grade cows yielding as much as 3,300 pounds of milk and 65 pounds of fat in thirty days are well worth keeping, as many factory patrons can testify. Too many cows in Canada, however, produce as low as two per cent. of fat. That is one good reason why it pays farmers to take up cow raising, for with the tests ranging as they frequently do in the same herd, from 2.1 to 4.3 with common grade cows giving almost the same weight of milk and handled under similar conditions, there is evidently plenty of room for considerable difference in returns.

As a matter of fact, cow testing was never more needed than at the present time, when farmers are complaining that it is hard to get good hired help. The time spent in taking a few weights and samples is saved over and over again, a hundred times over, when it proves to a man that he saves time by milking profitable cows only. Why waste precious time month after month, year after year, on cows that test only two per cent. of fat?

"Nothing made me so thankful that I was brought up in Canada as my visit to China and Japan," remarked Mrs. Ethel Cody Stoddard, journalist, of Vancouver when talking about a trip around the world. "The women in China work, work, work all the time. It is the land of the mother-in-law, and they keep them at it. All day long you see tiny, barefooted women carrying such heavy burdens as yokes loaded with bricks and doing such work as only men do in this country. The men do all the finer work there—embroideries and things like that.

"I was disappointed in Japan at first, for I expected to see all the brilliant colors in which Japan is usually pictured here in story and on the stage. Instead the streets were drab. The men wear grey or black kimonos and the women kimonos with dark blue and grey stripes or black and white stripes and dull dark parasols. Not a fan was in sight. Step into a tea-house though and you will see brilliantly-flowered kimonos. The Japanese are rather English in that they dress gaily in the house, but keep their sober colors for the street."

FIRST HUNGEF-STRIKERS

The hunger strikes of the suffragists represent the revival of a very old and once widespread custom, known in the East as dharna (or dhurna) baithna, or "sitting dharna." This custom was once very common in India, but is now almost obsolete. It was chiefly resorted to in order to force payment of a debt. The creditor would sit at the debtor's door and taste no food until his claims were satisfied. If the debtor allowed the creditor to starve it was believed that he laid himself liable to supernatural punishment, especially if the starver happened to be a Brahmin; accordingly, Hindus of lower caste would sometimes engage a Brahmin to starve for them. The custom was much abused, being used to levy blackmail upon persons who were not debtors at all. It also gave rise to various analogous practices, for instance, that of certain beggars in the Punjab, known as "strap-riggers," who twist a leather strap around the neck and throw themselves on the ground before a shop until alms are given them. Again, in order to obtain compliance with some demand a person would threaten to commit suicide or kill one of his own children unless his wish was granted. All such practices are forbidden by the Indian Penal Code.

An identical custom once prevailed in Ireland, and is frequently mentioned in the Brehon laws. It is recorded that St. Patrick "fasted upon" Laegaire, the heathen over-king of Ireland, until the latter embraced Christianity, and in accordance with the superstitions of the times the king and his family felt it incumbent upon them to fast at the same time until this test of endurance was won by the saint.

FUR BUTTONS ARE A NOVEL TOUCH ON A SMART SUIT

"Kitten's ear" is the name given one of the new pile fabrics, and well it deserves the name, as it is literally as soft and silky as a kitten's ear. The suppleness and velvety texture of many of these fabrics is really to be marveled at. A material of this sort needs very little decoration aside from a touch of fur or a bit of color for contrast.

In the illustration 7769-7705 is fashioned of "kitten's ear" cloth in one of the new rich shades of red and trimmed with black fur. An odd touch is given the suit by the large fur buttons which close it down the front. The coat has a long waisted effect and a fitted peplum. A four gored skirt slightly draped accompanies the blouse.

To make in size 36 (7769) requires 2½ yards of 42 inch material. 7705 may be made in size 24 with 2½ yards of 42 inch material.

The deep peplum is a feature of many of the afternoon gowns of silk. It aids often in bringing out the broad hip lines, now so fashionable. Blue crepe charmeuse was used for 7650. The vest is of figured silk in soft harmonizing shades, and the broad sash is of satin. Lace effectively trims sleeves and collar.

This design may be copied in size 36 with 5 yards of 36 inch material.

SCRATCHES ON HORSES

Common Annoyance That Can be Prevented by Proper Precautions

Scratches, also called cracked heels, or mud-fever, can be prevented by careful stable management. Cases are rarely met with in well kept barns, but are often seen in dirty, poorly-drained stables. Dryness and cleanliness of the floor of the stall are the two most important factors in the prevention of scratches.

Horses should not be allowed to stand in piles of manure and decomposing urine. These irritate and inflame the thin skin in the fold of the ankle, just below the fet-lock. The skin then becomes thickened, due to the inflammation, and breaks or cracks in it appear and if allowed to gradually grow worse. The affected area grows larger, the cracks become deeper, and the animal is in an unsightly and painful condition.

Owners of horses can prevent the trouble in the majority of cases by doing two things. Do not allow manure to accumulate behind your horses, and see that your stalls will drain away promptly. If your horses show any tendency toward the condition, apply a small amount of carbolized vaseline, boracicated lard, or zinc ointment, well rubbed into the affected parts. These remedies will soften the skin and protect it from external moisture and irritating substances. During wet weather, or when the roads and streets are muddy or slushy, extra precautions should be taken to prevent the condition. Do not wash cracked heels, as water and rubbing only aggravates the condition.—Dr. H. Preston Hoskins.

TALE OF THE SMOKING PINE

Indian Legend That Accounts for the Tree That Is Found in Maine.

When the chief, Ascalmo, who presided over the tribe of Indians that dwelt on the banks of the Bombahook, was struck dead by a thunderbolt, the people of the tribe buried him near the banks of that stream. And there today, near Hallowell, Me., over the spot of his grave stands the smoking pine. This is the story the Indians tell of the origin of this tree.

When the first white men came to inhabit this land they found the Indians a strong and sturdy race inhabiting this new country. To them the white men brought vice and disease, and soon the Indians' native strength and vitality began to ebb. They grew feeble, lost their former hardihood and vigor, and were soon unable to cope with the more powerful stranger in the land.

Chief Ascalmo saw this and warned his people that the Great Spirit had spoken their fate, which was to be that of destruction. He counseled them not to join in strife with the white man, but to call him into council and to smoke with him the pipe of peace.

"I am soon to die," added the old chief, "and where my body lies there shall arise a great pine which shall forever smoke as a token of eternal peace between the red and the white people."

The prophecy of the old chieftain was fulfilled. The compact of peace between the Indians and the English was made and soon thereafter Chief Ascalmo died struck down by a thunderbolt. Then it was that his tribesmen decided to leave the land and move on westward.

On visiting their beloved Chief Ascalmo's grave to bid him a last farewell, they beheld with awe and wonder the complete fulfillment of his prophecy. There stood a beautiful tall pine from whose leaves and branches a haze of smoky mist was constantly rising. Hence it is that from that day on this tree has been called the smoking pine.—Celia K. Hunt.

OLDEST LIVING THING

The Famous Cypress in the Churchyard of Santa Maria del Tule

In southern Mexico there stands the oldest living thing in the world—the famous cypress in the churchyard of the village of Santa Maria del Tule. The tree is situated in the intendency of Oaxaca, a few miles east of the city of that name. Experts judging by the gigantic bole of the Santa Maria del Tule cypress and by the slow growth of the species, have estimated the age of the monster to be between 5,000 and 6,000 years. These figures are staggering to the imagination. Taking the lowest computation, when the seed from which the tree sprang fell upon the earth, King Menes was reigning in Egypt—5,000 B. C. When Cheops drove his subjects with the lash to the labor of building the great pyramid, it was a slender stripling of 200 years. And it had reached a lusty youth of 1,500 years when the Hebrews made their exodus from the land of the Nile.

The discovery of America and the conquest of Mexico by Cortez would seem, in its life, things of only a few months ago. The last scientific measurement of the Santa Maria del Tule cypress was made by Dr. von Schrenk in 1908, a century after Humboldt discovered it, while on his famous tour of equatorial America. Dr. von Schrenk found that its trunk, four feet from the ground, had the astounding girth of 126 feet.

Before the broad and towering bulk of this one life, which has persisted without interruption since the date of the dawning of history, Dr. von Schrenk halted in awe. Had the foliaged creature possessed eyes and a tongue, what treasures of information could it have added to the annals of man. What revelations in Mexico it could have related, what rises and falls of monarchies and civilizations in tropical America.

But flights of fancy gave way to [illegible] scientific duties. Authorities on trees had declared the discovery of the approximate age of this cypress to be one of the most important problems in arboriculture. They had expressed a hope that the next scientist who should visit the ancient living monument would not fail to complete the evidence needed.

The Mayor of Santa Maria del Tule however, opposed a barrier of adamant. Measure the circumference of the tree? Surely. Photograph it? Indeed, yes. But to take an instrument and bore from the trunk a plug two feet deep and one-half an inch in diameter? Horrors, no!

In vain Dr. von Schrenk urged that this experiment had been made hundreds of times without damage to trees, and that by counting the rings shown on the plug he could learn the tree's average rate of growth and thus solve one of the greatest scientific problems of the world. The Mayor was all humility and submissiveness. Anything he possessed was at the disposition of the scientist. But touch the tree he should not.

So Dr. von Schrenk was compelled to content himself with measuring the bole and taking some photographs of the tree. He also observed a wood tablet which Humboldt 100 years before, had nailed to the tree the unimpaired vitality of which for all its fifty centuries, had been shown by a growth of bark covering the tablet.

In Doing Up Fruit

It is well to look at all canned fruit a week or so after it is put away. By that time air bubbles will have appeared if they are to appear. When these are evident, cook the fruit again.

In making marmalades or preserving it is well to put the fruit and sugar into the bottle in alternate layers. The fruit, of course, is put in first. Stir occasionally to prevent the mixture catching.

It is always a good plan to rinse the preserving bottle with cold water. The moisture on the bottom and side is a factor in preventing the fruit burning.

In making jelly let the fruit juice drip through the jelly bag. When no more drops come, the remainder of the fruit may be squeezed, but keep this liquid separate. Use it in making marmalade or a second-grade jelly. It will taste as well but will not be as clear as the drip jelly.

FOR POULTRY BREEDERS

Little ducks must have plenty of water to drink, especially at meal time, but it must be given in such a way that they can get their heads into it up to their eyes, but cannot get the water out to wet the pen or brooder.

After the hatch in an incubator is complete the trays and the unhatched eggs should be removed and the little chicks left in the incubator at least twenty-four hours, with the heat gradually reduced until it is about 9. at the chicks' heads.

A run on clean, green grass will make chickens, ducklings, goslings and poults grow faster.

A dirty brood coop, or an unclean brooder, will multiply disease germs which will endanger the health and life of the chicks.

Feed the little chicks separate from the older ones, or the older ones will get most of the food and the little ones suffer from hunger.

Annie Laurie was the beautiful daughter of Sir Robert Laurie, first baronet of Maxwelton in Dumfries, Scotland, and she lived in the old white castle set high up on the "bonny braes." Her window looked down on a sunny courtyard whose walls were so thick with ivy that it almost covered the marriage stones of her father and grandfather which were set over the doorway in the [illegible] tower.

In the last years of the seventeenth century William Douglas, of Fingland, came a-wooing, and so ardently wooed he that he gained from Annie Laurie her "promise true." Then with a light heart he went off to the wars in Flanders, and as he went he sang the song which we call "Annie Laurie."

Some have declared that brave Douglas was killed in battle, with the fair Annie's name on his dying lips, but others maintain that he came out unscathed and married another lady. At all events, when Annie Laurie was twenty-eight she went to live at Craigdarroch as the bride of Alexander Ferguson.

As the song was originally written, the first lines began:

Maxwelton's banks are bonnie
They're a' clad owre wi' dew.

But when Lady John Scott set them to the music so familiar to us all, she rewrote the stanzas in their present form.

What may have been the subsequent history of these two Scotch lovers of long ago, they struck a chord which has vibrated for over two centuries.

A Lakefield Turkey Trot

Lakefield News: The cold wave in the north appears to be affecting the domestic birds in this locality, for only a few weeks ago a Smith farmer and his good lady discovered one fine morning a large part of their fine flock of turkeys had mysteriously migrated south during the night. However, not being suited to their new quarters, and wishing to return to their former place of freedom, came back home a few days later "like Mary's little lamb," leaving their tails and the greater portion of their wing feathers behind them.

Another Case of Memory Cure.

At Saturday's police court Joseph Reynolds was greeted with "You here again?" He pleaded guilty to having been drunk as a blacklister. In the box, Reynolds said he got his liquor from a Lindsay man named Paddy Shea. A quart bottle of G & W. liquor was produced in court. He met Shea on Rubidge street. They went in behind All Saints' church and drank. He met Lavergne Killenbeck on Simcoe street. They went for a walk, the course of their itinerary being given. He got drunk on a bottle Shea had given him. He did not remember meeting Loos and did not give him money to buy whiskey. Shea gave him a partly empty bottle and a sealed $1 bottle. No charge was made by Shea for the two bottles. He did not see Loos. Joseph was given a week's memory cure at Castle Nesbitt.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

The last mortal remains of the late Patrick Sullivan, who died in St. Joseph's Hospital, were laid to rest Saturday morning in St. Peter's Cemetery.

Baby Huffman.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Huffman, Queen street, will extend heartfelt sympathy over the death of their infant, that passed away Saturday morning at Nicholls Hospital. It will be remembered that Mrs. Huffman was taken a few weeks ago to the hospital referred to, a week after her baby was born.

A Lesson in Etiquette

A gentleman and his wife residing on North George street, a few evenings ago were entertaining a couple of friends at supper. The hostess, who originally came from Boston and careful about her manners, whilst trying to cut the top off an egg, missed the hen-fruit which fell to the carpet. She exclaimed "John, I've dropped an egg on the carpet. What shall I do." John replied, "Don't cackle."

Thrifty mothers who are confronted with the problem of how to make just a few "greenbacks" cover several little white and brown backs, should inspect Mr. Wyatt's large stock of cloth which is on sale at specially reduced prices.

The Mark St. Methodist annual congregational tea to-night bids fair to be a great success. Rev. T. J. Mansell's lecture with lime light views on a trip to Palestine should draw a large crowd.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated Bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

HUERTA'S RULE NOW IS CRUMBLING WILSON STATES

President Reiterates Statement That Mexican Government is Going

Washington, Nov. 24.—President Wilson's belief that the Huerta Government is slowly crumbling was reiterated to-day at the White House. Discussing the situation generally, the President pointed out that the press in Mexico could print, uncontradicted, baseless statements as to the future intentions of the United States.

As evidence of the ability of the Huerta Government to spread any impression it pleased through the Mexican press, the president referred incidentally to optimistic predictions during the last few days in Mexican newspapers that recognition of the Huerta Government by the United States was forthcoming. The Washington Government, it is known, is irrevocably determined under no circumstances to recognize Huerta.

Last Word on Mexico.

There were no new developments to-day in the situation generally, according to White House officials, but added interest was developed in the President's forthcoming annual message which he will read to congress, when it became known that among the subjects to be discussed will be included a statement giving the status of the Mexican situation. The president indicated that he would keep his message abreast of developments in Mexico, so that his presentation of events would be up to the day of delivery.

Mr. Wilson expressed satisfaction to-day over the attitude of foreign Governments, and indicated it was wholly friendly and showed a desire to co-operate with the United States wherever possible.

As the conference between Sir William Tyrrell, private secretary to Sir Edward Grey, the British Foreign Secretary and President Wilson last night, it was stated at the White House that the meeting was for "mutual information."

AUTO WRECKED MEN ESCAPED

Sand Prevented Two Being Seriously Hurt

Toronto, Nov. 24.—Thrown so violently from his seat into a pile of sand that he was buried up to his neck, [illegible] Querrie, Elm street, miraculously escaped serious injury yesterday morning when his auto was struck by a westbound Bloor street car at the corner of Shaw street.

Querrie was driving down Shaw street, with Lucius Galbraith, 11 Shaw street, [illegible] as the street car travelling at a good rate of speed was returning to the Lansdowne barns. Querrie's view was obstructed by [illegible] at the corner of the street, and he drove straight in front of the car. Fortunately for him and Galbraith, there was a big pile of loose sand, taken from an excavation on the road side, and they landed squarely on it, or the results might have proved disastrous. As it was, Querrie was so badly shaken up that a doctor had to be called before he could be taken home, while Galbraith escaped with severe bruises. The auto was practically wrecked, one wheel being torn off, the others twisted and bent and the body of the car damaged beyond repair.

BIG PETITION TO MAYOR BRADBURN

A petition is out and is being largely signed, requesting Mr. W. H. Bradburn to allow himself to be put in nomination for Mayor for 1914.

THE SWING IN THE C. P. R. BRIDGE

Mr. Burnham, M.P., has handed out the following statement to the press:—

"Alderman Buller called upon me yesterday morning to my surprise to know why the Government had reported in favour of a swing at the western end of the C.P.R. bridge, and why the C.P.R. was ignoring that report. I replied to him that such a statement was the very reverse of the fact. No report was made by any representative of the Government at all. Mr. Grant emphatically confirms that statement. This is the history of it: The Mayor and I went to Ottawa to ask the Government to compel the C.P.R. to build a swing in their new bridge here. Previously I had tried out the Railway Commission and the Department of Railways and Canals, finding at last that it was the Public Works Department that had jurisdiction over the bridge. The Minister wired Mr. Wanklyn of the C.P.R. to meet us at Ottawa, which he did, and after a short conference he agreed to put in a swing. My duty ended there. As I remarked to the Mayor, he represented the city thereafter. I did not. The C.P.R. then made ready to put in a swing in the centre of the bridge. To this the Mayor and his Engineer objected. They wanted the west end span as a swing. To this the C.P.R. replied that such a swing was unnecessarily long, too expensive and also dangerous. Then the Mayor wrote the Minister, who said that he thought the C.P.R.'s offer reasonable, and declining virtually to interfere further.

The disagreement is, as I understand it, over the putting in of a swing, which is at least as wide as many of those on the canal, and the putting in of one as desired by the city. If the C.P.R.'s offer is no good that fact should be demonstrated by the city to the Government, not by the Government or its officers, or myself. But so far no such demonstration has been made. The point I wish to make, however, is that nobody acting for the Government will assume for one moment to act for the city. The city will see the necessity of acting just as any other claimant acts by putting in its claim to the Government and following it up by expert testimony, if necessary, in support of its contention.

I will be glad to assist it if it is right. But so far nothing has occurred to prove that the C.P.R.'s offer is not fair. The Government must be fair to all parties and if the C.P.R.'s offer is reasonable I understand why the minister refuses to interfere farther. If it is not practicable, show him. 'I have wired Mr. Wanklyn to see if he will put the same width of swing, as he offers in the middle, at the west end. I am informed that the width of swing offered by them is sufficient. There may be some doubt as to the place. About that I know practically nothing."

PRISON BOARD TO MEET IN TORONTO NEXT WEEK

Kingston, Ont., Nov. 24.—Members of the Prison Reform Association have returned home from their tour in the United States inspecting prisons and will resume their sessions at the penitentiary some day next week, but the date has not yet been decided. It is likely the commission will have a session in Toronto and at the prison farm in Guelph. The members of the commission report that the attitude of the American people toward the criminal is different from that which prevails in Canada. There is more optimism in his treatment and a stronger belief in the possibility of reformation. They do not regard the prison as merely a place in which lawbreakers are punished, but rather as a place in which to confine them until they can be set at liberty without endangering the public safety and a place in which an opportunity is given them to reform.

The commission was greatly impressed with the length to which the Americans have carried the reformatory proceeding toward [illegible] treatment of [illegible] who fall into the hands of the [illegible].

PRODUCTION OF CLOTHING TO BE INQUIRED INTO

Department to Find What Percentage of Price Goes Into Wages—Investigation to be Most Thorough

Washington, D.C., Nov. 24.—In his effort to vitalize the Department of Commerce, Secretary Redfield plans a comprehensive inquiry into the underlying economic principles of the various branches of American industrial life.

The first inquiry will deal with the cost of production of clothing. It will extend from the cotton fields to the retail stores. Particular attention will be given to the garment making establishments in Chicago and New York.

Secretary Redfield, in announcing this inquiry, says his department will not be used for the purpose of investigating individual business transactions, such as the closing down of mines, manufacturing establishments, and the like, but to inquire into the fundamental principles of production.

Secretary Tells of Plans.

"We are going to study the cost of production of clothing," the Secretary said, "and at the outset I want to say we are not going gunning for any one. We are going to study these facts in all their forms. There is a difference between an inquiry into the cost of production and an investigation of some particular industry.

"We have not the men nor the means to investigate particular concerns, even had we the desire, which I wish to say emphatically we have not.

"The purpose of this inquiry is to inform the people of United States, in a manner which they can understand, of the cost of making clothes. The Tariff Board studied the cost of cottons, worsteds, and woolen cloths, and to a certain extent the cost of knit goods. But they had not the means to go deeply into the subject. There have been all sorts of inquiries into the garment industries—particularly investigations of strikes, fires and working conditions for women.

"There has been much legislation affecting the hours of labor for women and children in the garment and clothing industries. There have been inquiries by civic bodies in Chicago and New York. There is a whole mass of altruistic effort dealing with the social side of these industries.

MARK ST. METH. CHURCH ANNUAL CONG'L TEA

This successful event took place yesterday between 5 and 8 o'clock, when more than 500 persons sat down to tea. The total proceeds was $144.50.

At 8 p.m. the church was crowded to hear Rev. T. J. Mansell lecture on his trip to Palestine, and to see the splendid stereopticon views exhibited by Mr. Fisk. The lecturer said he landed at the foot of Mount Carmel and travelled by train along the plain of Esdraelon to Damascus. Thence he returned to the sea of Galilee, and around it to Tiberias. He then travelled east and south through Nazareth and Shechem to Jerusalem. He visited Jericho and the Dead Sea, returning to Joppa. Views of sacred scenes were shown all along the journey.

An anthem by the choir and two solos by Mr. Pratt added to the pleasure and success of the evening.

BURLEIGH FALLS POWER LEASE CANCELLED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Valuable Asset Given Away by the Late Government Restored to the People

It is reported here amongst people who usually speak with knowledge, that the Burleigh Falls lease to a private company by the late government of the Burleigh Falls power, has been cancelled by the Borden Government. It is known that the government has forbidden any development under that lease. It will be remembered that this lease on most favorable water conditions was obtained by Mr. A. J. Calverwell, C.E., from the late government at a rental of one dollar a year. It was sold, it was reported, for a huge sum by him to a company. If the government has cancelled the lease and retained the rights of power for the people it will mean a big loss for somebody and a big gain for the people. The power will rent even at ten dollars a horse power, for over fifty thousand dollars a year. When the new lock is put in and the water raised the power will be not less than 6,000 horse power, which will net an immense sum to the public. The lease, it is understood, was assigned with the consent of the Department and the member prior to 1911, and has been the subject of much adverse comment. To cancel the lease it would probably be necessary for the government to return the dollar a year rental already paid.

PRINCE OF WIED IS NOW ALBANIA'S KING

Protestant Son of German Royal House Given the Post.

New York, Nov. 24.—A cable from Vienna to the Tribune says: It is expected that Prince William of Weid will ascend the new Albanian throne toward the end of January, and the question is now being debated whether he will be "King" or only Prince. Albanian patriots point out that their country has five times the population of Montenegro, which boasts a fullblown King and that it would never do for the new Balkan Potentate to be inferior in rank to his Royal neighbors.

Some doubt however appears to do for the new Balkan potentate to stow upon Prince William the kingly title, at all events, until the Prince has shown his worth and proved he can rule the country. Nevertheless the Albanians intend to call him King from the beginning.

Prince William of Weird is the sixth Prince of the line and was born at Neuwiend June 27th, 1872, the son of Prince William and the Princess Marie. He succeeded his father in 1910. Prince William married Princess Pauline of Wurtemberg in 1898. They have two children—Prince Hermann, who was born in 1899 and Princess Dietrich, who was born in 1901. The family is Protestant.

THOSE GRAVE-DIGGERS FIND EVIDENCE OF OLD MURDER

Men Removing Bodies in Cemetery Near Welland Uncover Tragedy

St. Catharines, Nov. 24.—Workmen engaged in removing bodies from the old Hodkinsoof burying ground in Grantham township to-day, believe that they have unearthed evidence of a tragedy which had it been discovered years ago, would have caused a sensation.

The remains of a body sex unknown, were found buried without coffin or box of any kind, merely thrown into a sack and covered over roughly. No attempt had been made by the parties who buried the body some sixty years ago, to lay it out. The head and knees were close together and all the possible evidence that could be expected of a hurried burial was found by those who are removing the bodies from the old burying ground to Victoria Lawn Cemetery, St. Catharines, to make way for the Welland ship canal.

There is no record in existance by which the identity of all those interred in the old cemetery can be traced. The bones are being moved with those of several others who's names are no longer known. The nationality of the victim is unknown and there does not appear to be the slightest possibility that the mystery will ever be unravelled.

JESSIE WILSON'S WEDDING WILL BE BRILLIANT EVENT

She Wanted to Have a Quiet Family Affair, But This Was Impossible

Washington, D. C., Nov. 24.—Before an improvised altar in the historic East Room of the White House on the same spot where Miss Nellie Grant and Algernon Sartoris took the vows forty years ago, and where Miss Alice Roosevelt and Nicholas Longworth plighted their troth in 1906, the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, pastor of the Presbyterian Church in Princeton, N.J., will to-morrow afternoon pronounce the words which will unite in marriage Miss Jessie Woodrow Wilson, second daughter of the President of the United States, and Mr. Francis Bowes Sayre, son of the late Robert H. Sayre, the builder of the Lehigh Valley Railroad.

The ceremony which is set for 4.30 p.m. will be witnessed by one of the most brilliant and distinguished assemblages ever gathered in the executive mansion. It was the early desire not only of Miss Wilson, who was most concerned, but of the President and Mrs. Wilson, that the wedding should be celebrated in a manner comparatively quiet, that it should be a family affair. This, it shortly was disclosed, could not be gratified.

The floral decorations will be more elaborate than any heretofore have been in President Wilson's administration.

2000 Beatings 30 Days.

Pittsburg, Nov. 24.—On complaint of his wife who declared her husband had beaten her once every week since they were married, a total of 2,000 times, Peter Edwards was sentenced to 30 days in the workhouse at a Sunday session of the Police Court here.

HEALTHY, WRINKLE-FREE SKIN EASY TO HAVE

(From the Woman Beautiful.)

A dull, drab, muddy complexion, or an over-red, blotchy, pimply or freckled skin, can by a quite simple, harmless and inexpensive method, be changed to one of flower-like radiance and purity. One ounce of common mercolized wax, sold by druggists generally, will remove the most unsightly complexion in from one to two weeks. By its remarkable absorptive power, the withered, faded or discolored layer of thin film-skin which hides the healthier skin underneath, is gradually flaked off in tiny, almost invisible particles. This is done so gently there is no inconvenience, and no trace is left on the skin except that of enhanced beauty. The wax is smeared on like cold cream before retiring and removed in the morning with warm water.

If the skin be wrinkled or saggy, a face bath made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pt. witch hazel will be found most effective. Combining both astringent and tonic properties, this tightens the skin and braces up its supporting muscles.

A NINE-FOOT REACH

Daubert Can Garner in Anything That Comes Near Him

In Jake Daubert the Brooklyn team has the greatest little animated telescope in baseball.

Six feet one inch in height, he can and does, reach out and get many a wild toss, and still manage to keep his foot on the bag, to the general discomfiture of the batsmen trying to get on the initial corner. It takes a very wild heave to draw Daubert from the bag.

It is figured that Jake can get a throw nine feet from the bag when the ball comes to the right, stretching his full length, and still hooking the station with his toe.

Having to reach across his body with his gloved hand when a ball is thrown to the left side of the bag, he naturally loses some distance in catching these throws, but he can get those that come within eight feet and two or three inches. Of course, if the worst comes to the worst, he shoves out his left hand, and, although bare, takes a throw with it in this way getting the benefit of a nine-foot reach.

When reaching into the diamond for a low heave Daubert has another telescopic trick. Of course, he does not have to stretch quite as far to get a low one, for he can judge his ball and take it on the bound if there is time to wait for it.

Going after a high one is his specialty. Naturally, when the ball is thrown some feet over his head he cannot keep his foot on the bag and get it, but he goes up like an aviator after an altitude record, and the ball has to be ten feet above the ground to get by him safely.

Some admirers think that he goes a lot higher than this, but a two-foot leap straight up with the body extended is a good leap when it is remembered that the athlete has to take it from a standing start and has not time to prepare for the spring.

DANGER IN ATHLETICS

Wide Difference in Healthy Exercise and Machine Work Says Physician

Athletic recklessness is a growing health menace, says a widely known physician. The enthusiasts for physical education have hitherto failed to emphasize the important distinction between those strenuous performances which tax the body to its utmost (comprehended in the term "athletics") and that exercise of the bodily functions more appropriately included under the designation "physical education."

Europeans have a happy expression for the employment of their bodily activities in the word "sport," which implies the combination of a healthy spirit of pleasure and satisfaction with which we call exercise. "Athletics" have long been under the dominance of so-called "trainers," frequently men of keen judgment and technical skill, but usually persons without any systematic acquaintance with physiological truths. Their sole concern is to turn out a winning team or a victorious athletic giant.

Universally athletics and the conduct of intercollegiate contests should receive a more serious consideration from those who assume responsibility for these features of college life. This is a most timely moment in which to inaugurate a campaign against athletic recklessness. If college athletics of to-day are a menace to health, they cannot escape the attack of those who are alert for every evidence of human extravagance and waste.

The best intellectual feature of rival contests—the encouragement for each man to put forth the best that is in him and to exercise his own ingenuity in the development and maintenance of an efficient, superior body—is suppressed by the advent of that guardian saint—the trainer. It can be freely admitted that the cultivation of physical intelligence furnishes a valuable asset to man in developing co-ordination and promoting health and happiness.

But when the results of vigorous sports or exhausting struggles are involved, something more than a "pardonable pride in an expanding chest and swelling biceps" should furnish the guiding motive. The obvious abuses of athletics must be threshed out.

Antiquated Tall Hats

During the hearing of an action at Longford Quarter Sessions by a draper's assistant for a year's salary against a draper who failed and was evicted, Mr. Delay (for defendant) said the assistant stayed on when there was no business being done, and when there was nothing to sell in the place. For months before the eviction the shop stock consisted of hundreds of handbones and [illegible] antiquated tall hats that nobody would buy. His honor gave a decree for salary for portion of the time claimed for.

Buttons in Church Collection

The Rev. Douglas Morgan, curate of Oswestry Parish Church, said in far-off lands like Australia and Canada the Churches were not sheltered by endowments, but because they loved their religion the people made tremendous sacrifices in almsgiving for the support of that religion. [illegible]

Collapse of a Hillside

The side of a limestone hill at Porthywaen, near Oswestry, slipped and at least 200,000 tons of rock fell into the quarry. Below the crest of the hill there is a bow-shaped fracture, about 500 yards in length, and nearer the cliff face of the hill is a fracture 200 yards long. The face of the rock has been thrown back fifty yards by the fall. The landslip is attributed to the heavy rain.

SCIENTISTS HOPE TO HARNESS THE MOON

Power Now Wasted Could be Put to Work Generating Electrical Energy

There is really no reason why the inhabitants of the earth should do any work at all. The moon would do all the jobs which mankind demands—if we could only harness her. Scientists are already engaged on the solution of this problem. Day after day and night after night uncountable units of power are wasted because the brain of man has not yet devised a scheme for utilizing the terrific motive activity of the moon's "pull" on the tides. Incredible quantities of seawater are piled up and withdrawn twice every lunar day (a lunar day is about twenty-four hours and fifty minutes), and if the lift and fall of this water could be caught and translated into energy, all the mills in the world could be driven without our burning an ounce of coal, all the electric light could be produced, all the railroads run, all the trolleys, all the subways, all the electric automobiles, all the factories, housewives' sewing machines, and other things of the sort could be operated, with nothing but a little attention from mechanics.

Plans have been mooted for the utilization of the tides in England. The idea is to build enormous docks or basins, off the Bristol Channel, where the sea is compressed into narrow confines and the tides are consequently high. The tide would flow up into these basins twice a day—billions of tons of water—but it could only escape through tunnels containing turbines similar to those at Niagara. There is no reason why, in time, the tide at the mouth of the Bristol Channel should not thus work the street cars of London.

Technical difficulties still stand in the way, but Mr. William Snee, an inventor, built a model machine to prove that these are surmountable. In his model, paddles give to the water in a tank a movement imitating, exactly, that of the ocean's tides, the water passing through a series of receptacles and round a horizontal water-wheel. In Italy another inventor, Captain Pirandello, is working on similar lines, but his machine is designed to utilize and store up only the power of the waves and not that of the tide. The motive power is supplied by a buoy which rests on the surface of the water, and, as that surface undulates, the buoy works machinery which creates electricity.

Love in the Home

The love which should exist between husband and wife includes devotion, kindness, unselfishness, respect and adaptation in one person for another. Where this exists in marriage the life, even if one of privation, is happy. No discords can arise, for the reverence of each for the other is so great that it gives the most perfect love. But sentiment, simple adoration, idle fancy, is not love. Love is more than this. It goes to the very core of the being, while the other is superficial, transparent, fleeting.

Sentimental Burglars

Sentiment is believed to have deterred burglars who broke open the safe in the station ticket office in Lachine, Que., from carrying off a handsome silver tea set in a silver-mounted case, which was part of the express matter stored in the safe. The police found that the case had been broken open, but that its contents had been left untouched. In it was a card showing that the tea set was a birthday gift to W. Walls of Lachine from his mother, and it is thought that even the temptation to take the silver was overcome by the message of love written by the mother on the card. They took 22 cents in cash and the station agent's watch.

SALT AND GOOD LOOKS

German Physician Advises Its Use to Whiten Skin

According to a German physician, salt taken with food has a whitening effect on the skin. This is accounted for by the fact that it is a compound containing the powerful bleaching agent, chlorine. At any rate, it is undoubted that white people eat much more common salt than dark races.

Fruit, on the other hand, darkens the skin, because it contains salts of [illegible].

Besides whitening the skin it is probable that abundance of salt in the diet makes the flesh and the whole body plump. When a person eats salt freely the result is that the blood, skin, muscles, etc., retain a great quantity of fluid. Hence the effect on the skin would be to make it full and rounded.

But it should be eaten with judgment and moderation. If a young girl eats a large quantity of salt and [illegible] her face plump, then the skin is [illegible] and, as she grows older and [illegible], wrinkles appear. But if she [illegible] while young, then when the wrinkles [illegible] she should be able to dispatch them by adding salt to her diet.

Our Point of View

The preliminary articles of peace have been signed by Greece and Turkey, which probably indicates that they are getting ready for another scrap.

A Philadelphia baby fell from a second storey window and escaped death by being caught on a beer sign. This incident of course is to be classed as another advertisement for the breweries.

Miss Jessie Wilson's wedding cake is to weigh 135 pounds, be two and a half feet tall and will contain nineteen ingredients. But as the recipients are to sleep on it and not eat it there will be no cases of indigestion to interfere with the best wishes for the bride.

CIVIL ENGINEERS IN DEMAND.

Civil engineers are going to be in demand. The recent act of the United States congress authorizing the valuation of railways opens up a work so large that probably about two thousand engineers will be needed to fill positions ranging from those of minor character in field parties to the responsible work in charge of divisions. All the positions are to be filled through civil service examinations. The salaries paid for this work will probably be at least as high as those paid by the railroad companies for similar work.

This, no doubt, will cause many of our brightest engineers to leave Canada and seek employment in the United States.

DEATH RATE FROM CONSUMPTION.

The most striking presentation of the case against tuberculosis ever circulated in Canada is that just issued by the National Sanitarium Association for the use of Ministers participating in Tuberculosis Sunday, on Nov. 30. The annual death list in Ontario alone is 2250, of whom one-third of the victims are in their prime, between the ages of 16 and 45. This means that from one-tenth to one-seventh of the mortality in the province is due to Consumption—a curable and preventible disease—or, in other words one person dies every four hours. Black as the record is, the other side of the shield gives Canadians something to hope for. By education, segregation of cases, cleaning up of the sources of the plague, and by curative methods, the present death rate shows a decrease of 1150 from that of 1889. This is in spite of the increase in population and the large influx of diseased foreigners who have managed to avoid deportation.

Strengthens the Throat, Assists Public Speakers

Catarrhozone is the Greatest Invention of the Age for Weak Throat, Hoarseness, &c.

Strongly Endorsed by the Clergy.

Because of its strengthening influence upon the vocal cords, Catarrhozone cannot be too highly recommended as a wonderful voice improver. It almost instantly removes huskiness or hoarseness, thus insuring clearness and brilliancy of tone. The most eminent speakers and prima donnas are seldom without Catarrhozone, and credit in no small degree their uniform strength and brilliancy of tone to its influence.

"For many years I have been a sufferer from that terrible disease known as CATARRH.

"Being a professional singer, you can readily understand that Catarrh would be a serious hindrance to my professional skill.

"One year ago I read in the "Progress" a convincing testimonial from one who had been cured of this disease through using your God-sent invention, Catarrhozone.

"Believing in the merit of Catarrhozone, I tried it.

"Catarrhozone cured me, and has been the means of my success.

"You are at liberty to use my name if it will help relieve some from suffering, and I will always remain,

"Bob Bixley, New Glasgow, N.S."

Mr. Bixley is one of the best known singers and entertainers in the Maritime Provinces. Everyone knows him and his testimonial for Catarrhozone is the best sort of evidence of what great benefit Catarrhozone is to those suffering from throat weakness or catarrh.

BATTLESHIP BUILDING

Two Thousand Men Can Work on One at a Time

Some interesting figures are given by Mr. Alexander Richardson in the "Naval Annual" regarding the number of man-hours required to build battleships in order to support the contention that two years is too short a period for the completion of the larger and more powerful ships of the present day. The battleship of fifteen years ago, having a length of 390 feet and a displacement tonnage of 12,950 tons, involved in the construction of the ship 5,272,268 man-hours; at 52 hours per week and 50 weeks per annum this required, for the hull alone, the employment for two years of over 2,000 workmen. The first Dreadnoughts required 5,400,363 man-hours, and the Iron Duke class, of 580 feet in length and 25,000 tons displacement, involved 7,300,000 man-hours, or about 3,500 men for two years. Only about 2,000 men can be engaged on a ship without getting in each other's way. The corresponding figures for the construction of propelling machinery are equally interesting. The reciprocating engines of the battleship of fifteen years ago, of 12,500 horse-power, required 1,750,000 man-hours, while the turbine machinery of to-day, of more than double the power, requires 1,850,000 man-hours. The small increase is explained by the fact that whereas in the case of reciprocating engines only some 55 per cent. of the cost was for material, the remaining 45 per cent. being for labor, the material for turbines, much of it machined ready to hand, absorbs 72 per cent. of the total cost, leaving only 28 per cent. for labor.

Pioneer Steamship Line

The Cunard Line was a pioneer in the evolution of ocean traffic. Samuel Cunard, the founder of the firm, was a Nova Scotian. It was in 1838 that Cunard and his associates obtained a Government subsidy for a fleet of four ships to carry the mails to and from England and the United States, but it was ten years later before the first ship was in commission.

THE DRUMMER BOY.

(Published by Request)

"Captain Graham, the men were sayin'
Ye would want a drummer lad,
So I've brought ye my boy Sandie,
Tho' my heart is woeful sad;
But nae bread is left to feed us,
And nae siller to buy more,
For the gudeman sleeps forever,
Where the heather blossoms o'er.

"Sandie, make your measure quickly,
Play your blithest measure true,
Give us 'Flowers of Edinboro','
While yon fifer plays it too,
Captain, heard ye e'er a player
Strike in truer time than he?"
"Nae, in truth, brave Sandie Murray Drummer of our corps shall be."

"I give ye thanks—but, Captain, maybe
Ye will hae a kindly care
For the friendless, lonely laddie,
When the battle wark is sair.
For Sandie's aye been good and gentle
And I've nothing else to love,
Nothing—but the grave off yonder,
And the Father up above."

Then, her rough hand gently laying
On the curl-encircled head,
She blessed her boy. The tent was silent.
Not another word was said;
For Captain Graham was reminded
Of a benison, long ago,
Breathed above his head, then golden
Bending now, and touched with snow.

"Good-bye, Sandie." "Good bye, mother,
I'll come back some summer day;
Don't you fear—they don't shoot drummers
Ever. Do they, Captain Gra—?
One more kiss—watch for me, mother,
You will know 'tis surely me
Coming home—for you will hear me
Playing soft the reveille."

After battle. Moonbeams ghastly
Seemed to link in strange affright,
As the scudding clouds before them
Shadowed faces dead and white;
And the night-wind softly whispered
When low moans its light wing bore—
Moans that ferried spirits over
Death's dark wave to yonder shore.

Wandering where a footstep careless
Might go splashing down in blood,
Or a helpless hand lie grasping
Death and daisies from the sod,
Captain Graham walked swift onward,
While a faintly-beaten drum
Quickened heart and step together:
"Sandie Murray! See, I come!

"Is it thus I find you, laddie?
Wounded, lonely, lying here,
Playing thus the reveille?
See—the morning is not here."
A moment passed the drummer boy,
And lifted up his drooping head:
"Oh, Captain Graham, the light is coming,
'Tis morning, and my prayers are said.

"Morning! See, the plains grow brighter!
Morning—and I'm going home;
That is why I play the measure,
Mother will not see me come;
But you'll tell her, won't you, Captain—"
Hush, the boy has spoken true;
To him the day has dawned forever,
Unbroken by the night's tattoo.

MOTHER! IS CHILD'S STOMACH SOUR, SICK?

If tongue is coated or if cross, feverish, constipated give "California Syrup of Figs."

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative," and mothers can rest easy after giving it, because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, Mother! A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

Fox and Shea were charged with collecting protection money".

SICK, SOUR STOMACH, INDIGESTION OR GAS

Take "Pape's Diapepsin" and in five minutes you'll wonder what became of misery in stomach.

Wonder what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sour, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented into stubborn lumps; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women today know that it is needless to have a bad stomach. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps this delicate organ regulated and they eat their favorite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless relief is Pape's Diapepsin which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it digests food and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Please, for your sake, don't go on and on with a weak, disordered stomach; it's so unnecessary.

J. M. BARRIE'S CLIMB UP FORTUNE'S LADDER

Much of Baronet Novelist's Early Life Told in His First Novel

J. M. Barrie's baronetcy is said to be the first conferred on any man of letters since Sir Walter Scott. Literary and journalistic knights are plentiful enough, but that a writer should gain the coveted honor of a baronetcy is a rare enough event to be sensational. Barrie is the most modest of men, and the very last whom one would suspect of having made any effort himself to gain the decoration. Ralph Connor tells how he was once invited to a reception at Free St. George's, Edinburgh, which was given by the young people of the church in honor of the rising novelist. Coming in late the Canadian met Henry Drummond. "Have you seen Barrie?" asked Drummond. "No, I should like to see him," was the reply. "Well," said Drummond, smiling "look round till you find a hole, look down in the hole and you will see Barrie." Ralph Connor found Barrie later in a quiet corner, evidently looking for a hole, and somewhat distressed at not finding it.

It was in 1887, when The British Weekly was still a new and struggling journal, that it began to publish some extraordinarily clever stuff written by a man who called himself "Gavin Ogilvy."

Sometimes it would be an appreciation of a Scottish preacher or professor. Another week it would be a column that it would be impossible to classify under any literary category. Anything or nothing would serve as an adequate subject.

To those who followed "Gavin Ogilvy" week by week as he let himself go with all the high spirit of youth, it was good news to learn that he was about to write a serial novel dealing with the journalistic life. "When a Man's Single" was the story. When the memoir of Sir James Matthew Barrie, baronet, comes to be written, the biographer will find ample material in this book. Barrie himself is largely a composite of two of its characters—Rob Angus, the lad who leaves a Thrums sawmill to take a reporter's job on The Silchester Daily Mirror, and afterwards challenges fate as a free-lance in London, and J. Noble Simms, the practiced London journalist, whose experience helps the raw countryman over many of the difficult places.

Silchester stands, of course, for Nottingham where J. M. Barrie found employment for two years on the staff of a daily paper after leaving Edinburgh University. But it is when Rob Angus takes the plunge into London that the main interest of "When a Man's Single" begins. Did Barrie himself, one wonders, know the lonely struggles of the novice—the acceptances and rejections, the ups and downs, the hopes and fears—that he describes so graphically in this story. It is at this point that we make the acquaintance of J. Noble Simms. At once we recognize in him a near kinsman to "Gavin Ogilvy." Before Angus meets Simms he hears an account of him from a fellow-Scotsman, Serrison. "You see this pipe here? He saw me mending it with sealing wax one day, and two days afterwards there was an article about it in the Scalping Knife. When I went off for my holidays last summer, I asked him to look in here occasionally and water my flowers. He forgot to do it, but wrote an article on 'Serrison's Flowerpots.' He has had my umbrella in the Scalping Knife. When I play on his piano I put scraps of paper on the notes to guide me, and he made three guineas out of that. Once I challenged him to write an article on a straw that was sticking to the outside of my window, and it was one of the best things he ever did."

"He must read a great deal," remarks Bob.

"He hardly ever opens a book," replies Serrison; "indeed, when he wants to consult a book of reference, I believe he goes down to Booksellers' Row and does all the reading required at a bookstall. I never saw him reading a newspaper. I don't think he was ever in the British Museum. I calculated once that he must have made at least fifty pounds out of me in the Scalping Knife, and then he went and wrote an article about that."

The presumption that a mine of autobiographical material is concealed in this book is confirmed when one finds Sir William Robertson Nicoll saying of Barrie as he first knew him: "You never caught him reading; he did not buy papers, yet in some mysterious manner he knew everything."

The will of Michael Kiely, who died in Jersey City possessed of considerable personal property and real estate, most of which he left to neighbors in that city, is being contested by Mr. James Kiely, of Bandon, Ireland, who claims relationship.

Cigarettes Popular

Canadian people are consuming more tobacco and drinking more beer and spirits year by year, but the increase is not remarkable save as regards cigarettes. About two hundred million more cigarettes were smoked last year than in the previous twelvemonth.

The inland revenue department in a statement showed that the consumption of tobacco, including cigarettes, was 2.812 pounds per head for the year and the number of cigarettes [illegible]

WAKING FROM SLEEP

State of Health Shown by Feeling When Rising

When a man is in perfect health he wakes up [illegible] when he has had enough sleep. What is enough sleep is entirely a matter of habit and of individuality. One man may have had enough when he has slept four hours.

The healthy man wakes up ready to get up, ready to [illegible]. This is because he is too [illegible] to lie idle. The man in perfect health must be active. But his awakening need not necessarily be [illegible]. Some men wake up gradually. Such awakening is pleasant and is often accompanied by the greatest mental activity of the day. Poets have found themselves composing their most beautiful verses, musicians imagining the most loveliest of melodies when in that condition of perfect physical rest, with the mind refreshed by a night of sleep.

Nor has a healthy man any recollections of his night. He may have dreamed and he may have in his mind some hazy recollection of his dream, but this passes away like a breath from a polished steel surface.

Sleep is to the healthy man merely a reviving process for brain and body. It annihilates the poisons of fatigue that have accumulated during the day, the poisons that make him feel sleepy at night. And when he wakes up he jumps out of bed vibrating with energy for the work of another day.

It does not matter what time you go to bed so long as you have a regular hour and stick to it. The old saying that an hour of sleep before midnight is worth two after it is not true, but it has this much of truth in it: That the early hours of sleep are worth more than the later. The man who remains healthy goes to bed about the same hour every night, and makes little difference whether this hour be 9 p.m. or 3 a.m.

HEAVES IN HORSES

Some of the Causes and Effects of the Disease—Also the Cure

The horse that "contracts" heaves usually is an exceptionally hard worker and has a hearty appetite. That is the sort of work-horse to own, but it is man's fault if heaves is contracted. He feeds too much bulky hay and fodder and works the horse too soon after a meal. The stomach is then distended and so presses injuriously upon the diaphragm, lessening the chest cavity and interfering with the natural action of the lungs. Dusty or moldy hay is especially injurious. Such food induces indigestion, an ailment always present in heaves.

Indigestion is supposed to irritate the pneumogastric nerve of the stomach and, in a reflex way, the branches of the same nerve which go to the lungs. The lungs of the heavey horse are abnormally large and distended with air. Myriads of small air-chambers in the lung tissues have broken down to form large air-chambers with weak walls, which cannot perfectly expel air. The abdominal muscles are, therefore, brought into play to help expulsion. It is for this reason that the horse is seen to have a double, bellows-like motion in breathing.

It is not dust in hay that causes heaves. It is the bulky, dusty, coarse, woody hay that is to blame, by causing indigestion and undue distension; but the dust aggravates the cough. Clover hay does not cause heaves, if free from dust and mold and judiciously fed. It is excellent horse feed and much more nutritious than timothy hay. Woody, moldy, dry, brittle clover hay that has been wet and heated in the curing process will, however, tend to cause heaves, and especially so if fed in large quantities just before working the horse. Farmers as a rule feed far too much hay, waste this feed and hurt their horses.

Hay is not digested in the stomach to any great extent. It passes through the stomach and is digested in the small and large intestines. Hay to be digested must be well chewed, and this takes time. The hard-worked horse gets insufficient time to chew hay at noon. He bolts his hay and grain. Then drinking-water is allowed in large quantities, and it washes undigested feed out of the stomach. Indigestion follows. Distension is present from bulky hay and the gas generated by fermentation. The horse now breathes with difficulty at work. Heaves result.

To prevent heaves, avoid the causes mentioned. Feed most of the hay at night, and none at noon in the hot, busy season. Do not work a horse soon after a meal. Give the drinking water before feeding. Allow as a day's ration about one pound of concentrate and one pound of hay for each 100 pounds of horse. Increase concentrates for the hard-working horse, and increase hay and fodder for the idle animal. Never allow a horse to stand for a single day idle in the stable. Heaves will then become a rare disease.

HOUSEWIVES LEAGUE

The Housewives' League of St. Paul, insists that its members plan their orders so that one delivery a day is necessary; pay cash or settle their accounts promptly; patronize only tradesmen who comply with the laws; refrain from handling goods that are exposed for sale and give preference to food-distributing stores which close not later than 7 p.m.

This shows disposition on the part of the women of St. Paul to help not only themselves, but the honest and clean grocer and his employes.

Glue Linoleum

Instead of tacking linoleum at edges and where widths are joined together, use prepared glue on wrong side. It not only looks better, but when taking it up it doesn't leave any holes, and no bugs can make a hiding place under the edge.

EUROPE'S COURT

Court life in Roumania is perhaps the dullest in Europe, although this is hard to believe of a court over which "Carmen Sylvia," the brilliant novelist and woman of letters, presides.

That the old friends of Queen Elizabeth seldom ask for an audience now is said to be due to the fact that the queen is surrounded by three old women who prefer to sit and knit and cannot understand why one should want to talk about books and art. But when the court is at Sinaia and the old ladies have gone to Wiesbaden for their annual cure, the old friends of the queen come back. But in Bucharest the queen sees none of them. Even when they ask for an audience she does not know of it, because her maids of honor refuse on the ground that her majesty is very tired.

The queen is a splendid needlewoman herself and makes many beautiful things for her invalid niece, Princess Elizabeth of Wied, who is so delicate that she has literally wrapped up in cotton wool.

BLINDED IN BATTLE

France Provides for a German Who Fought in Morocco

A German who was for years a member of the French Foreign Legion, and who lost the sight of both eyes when fighting in Morocco, has been provided for for the rest of his life by the French Government, in somewhat peculiar circumstances.

When the man, whose name is Haberthur, received his wound in Morocco he was sent back to France and was decorated with the Legion of Honor. A bullet had passed across his face blinding both eyes. His case became known in Germany, and an effort was made to induce him to leave France and to return to his own country, to be used in an agitation against the French Foreign Legion.

Haberthur was offered a sum of $10,000 if he consented. As he was very poor and blind, this offer was very tempting. But he declined the offer. As a reward, the French Government gave him a concession for a tobacco store, which will ensure him an easy livelihood for the rest of his days.

THE TREE OF LIFE

The banana is believed by some people to be the forbidden fruit which is mentioned in the story of the Garden of Eden.

In any case, it is one of the curiosities of the vegetable kingdom, being not a tree, a palm, a bush, or shrub, a vegetable, or a herb, but an herbaceous plant with the stature of a tree.

Although it sometimes attains a height of thirty feet, there is no woody fibre in any part of the structure, and the bunches growing on the dwarf banana plant are often heavier than the stalk which supports them.

No plant gives such a quantity of food in the same area as the banana. It yields forty-four times more by weight than the potato, and one hundred and thirty-three times more than wheat.

STATESMEN'S WIVES

Compliments have frequently been paid by famous statesmen to their wives. It will be remembered how Disraeli dedicated "Sybil" "to the most severe of critics, but a perfect wife," and when a certain wit, who never allowed good taste to wait on his humor, was rallying Disraeli on his marriage he received the cutting reply:

"I married from a motive which I do not expect you to understand—gratitude."

Mr. Gladstone, in old age, said to a friend, "My wife has known every political secret I have ever had, and has never betrayed my confidence," and others have borne tribute to "the tender vigilance which sustained and prolonged his years."

Lady Salisbury, with no aptitude or inclination for public life, was the stay, confidante, and social helpmeet of her husband.

At a dinner to Mrs. Lloyd George in London, at which she was presented with a replica of a portrait of her husband, a letter was read from Mr. Lloyd George expressing deep appreciation of the "great kindness which prompts my friends to present to the brave little woman who is my wife a portrait of the troublesome person whom she has stood by through good and evil report."

The [illegible] this tailored costume reminds one of the bonnets worn by the little old ladies of to-day. It's a Victorian bonnet such as the late Queen used to wear, without strings.

It is a great change from the hats women have been wearing as it sets back from the face and shows the hair almost back to the crown of the head.

Hitherto any woman who showed more than the tip of her nose and chin after she had adjusted her hat properly was very much behind the times.

Paper Garments

The best results yet attained in various attempts that have been made to produce a wearable cloth from paper are said to be those produced by a patented process employed in Germany. Narrow strips of paper are spun into yarn, which may be woven to form cloth. Better results are had by spinning paper and cotton together, and still better cloth is made by a combination of paper and woollen yarns. The fabrics do not, of course, possess the strength and durability of ordinary cloth; but useful clothing is made of them at a low price. They may be washed without injury.

The "A" in Cocoanut

How an error led to the accepted spelling of cocoanut was explained by Sir Everard im Thurn, in the course of an address to the members of the Royal Horticultural Society at London.

He said that in the course of its growth the nut which was now known as the cocoanut was similar to the face of a monkey, and as the Spanish and Portuguese word "coco," meaning a grin or grimace, was attached to it.

When Dr. Johnson was compiling his famous dictionary he had an article on the "coco nut," but a careless proof reader passed a mistake in the spelling of the word, the compositor having inserted an "a," and the word appeared as "cocoanut," a spelling which has been used ever since.

Policewomen in Chicago

Beginning the actual task of patrolling certain sections of the city, ten women in Chicago entered upon the work as much out of a purpose to show that there is a field there for women as to be profitably employed. They are helpers rather than enforcers of the law, but are clothed with all the authority of other officers. They observe the same discipline as the men, make definite rounds and report at stations with the required promptness.

DEVELOPER OF PITCHERS

Will Robinson Has Knack of Bringing Out Best in a Man

When he is not developing the Giant's young pitchers and teaching Rube Marquard how to keep his smoke ball under control, Wilbert Robinson, the old Baltimore catcher runs a cafe in Baltimore.

Robinson played on that wonderful Oriole team of 1894-5-6 put together by Ned Hanlon. He was one of the game's best backstops and in 1896 he tied with Clements, the Philadelphia catcher, with the splendid average of .982.

As a developer of pitchers, Robinson proved to Manager John McGraw of the Giants that he is able to bring out everything in a man, by turning Rube Marquard and making Jeff Tesreau worth while.

It was Robinson who gave the late John T. Brush some return for the $11,000 he invested in Marquard. In Baltimore Robinson took hold of Joe Corbett, after Joe had drifted from pillar to post, and made him one of the greatest pitchers in the land. Corbett was a wonder in his day and he owed it to the big catcher.

In addition to Corbett there were McMahon, Hawke, Esper, Hoffer, Pond and Hemming tossing curves to Robinson, and one and all felt more secure with him back of the plate taking their curves.

Although not a heavy hitter, Robinson was a consistent batter and broke up many games with his timely hits.

WILL ROBINSON

His best batting average was in 1896, when he hit .354. Robinson has a job with the Giants as long as he is able to use a big glove, and he is without doubt the most valuable lieutenant Manager McGraw has on his pay roll.

That Canadians are a war-like people when their home or liberty is threatened or when the Motherland requires assistance, has been amply evidenced by the part taken by Canadian militiamen in the war of 1812-15, in the Fenian Raids of 1866 and 1870, the Red River Rebellion of 1870, the Northwest Rebellion of 1885, the operations on the Nile and throughout the South African war. But in "the piping days of peace," when the Department of Militia and Defence issues its call to the rural regiments to muster for a two-weeks' training camp, the amateur soldiers are not so ready to respond to the stirring notes of the bugles. Well the officers of the rural battalion understand the effort necessary in recruiting for camp, and they have come to half-dread the annual training period. One of them is authority for the statement that approximately one-half of the members of a rural corps are sons of the farmers, farm hands, and [illegible] a legitimately recruited in the regimental recruiting area. The other half are men who, out of work through circumstance or inclination, and without prospect of immediate employment, are ready to shoulder a rifle and draw the Government's good money for two weeks, or four weeks if they can re-enlist with another regiment when the first camp breaks up, as some do.

When a recruit takes the oath and signs the muster roll of a company, he swears that he will turn out with the regiment on all occasions during a period of three years. Less than one-quarter of those enlisting every year ever come to camp again. New men have to be found to take their places in the ranks and the regimental drag net is spread out, bringing in a motley catch.

One reason, of course, for lack of enthusiasm is that the pay is small compared with what an average man can earn in almost any line of industry. The system of efficiency pay is another bone of contention. If a man cannot shoot he cannot get the entire money. Naturally in the eyes of the Militia Department this is a wise provision, but not so does it appear to the recruiting officer. The men whom he should have under his command, the steady, industrious citizens or workmen can earn more money at home and not take any chances of not getting it because they cannot shoot.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR HIM, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

Canadians as a nation, especially city dwellers, are developing short sightedness at an alarming [illegible] speed. Such is the startling [illegible] given by a number of the [illegible] Montreal oculists. There are numerous reasons given for the alarming increase in shortsightedness, practically all of which place the greater portion of the blame on the [illegible] made in recent years of civilization. Close work, the much [illegible] lighted offices, automobiling and the thirst for moving pictures are among the reasons given.

Dr. Samuel S. Grant, B.O.A., one of Montreal's most prominent oculists, in referring to the advancement of shortsightedness among Canadians, stated that unless something was done [illegible] would soon be few persons who would be able to work in offices. "It is astonishing how many people are becoming short-sighted," said Dr. Grant. "Many of the clerks and bookkeepers are to-day developing this big disadvantage, [illegible] unconscious of the fact. They are losing their eyesight slowly, and do not notice it until they can no longer do any close work.

"By close work I mean working over books or reading within eighteen inches of a book or paper. The eyes become tired and strained as a result of over-usage in close work, and gradually lose their sensitiveness. In Germany shortsightedness is much worse than in Canada, for the German letters are harder to read than the English. It is therefore very lucky that we have not the same letters to read in Canada as in Germany or the state of affairs would be much more alarming than it is."

"The thirst for moving pictures is also very hard on the eyes and advances shortsightedness. People go into the moving picture shows and their eyes are called upon to take in every little movement, and to do this they have to use their eyes very fast. Thus the muscles of the eyes become very much strained, and the eye itself loses its power."

Automobiling acts on the eyes in the same manner as the moving pictures, but is not quite so hard on the muscles, according to Dr. Grant.

DOGS AS SENTRIES

They Will Help to Make Gibraltar Impregnable

The British Admiralty instructed Major E. H. Richardson, a famous breeder and trainer of dogs, to send a number of these animals to Gibraltar to be used as sentries. The dogs selected by Major Richardson are described as a "mixed breed of Airedales," and as the Airedale is rather a mixed breed itself, the new guards have no great pedigree to boast of. Major Richardson also breeds bloodhounds, and trains them for ambulance service in time of war. Dogs of his breeding have been shipped to most parts of the world, and according to reports the Major has had of them they have proved very useful.

They played a prominent part in the Turco-Italian War, and on one occasion warned the Italian force in time to resist a sudden Turkish attack that might have destroyed the garrison.

Major Richardson says that a dog can hear a sound at least 400 yards further than a man. They do not fall asleep even when they have had a wearisome day, but are at all times alert. A dog is just as brave at night as by daytime, and on the slightest sound will sally into the darkness to investigate. He has this advantage too over a human sentry, that once he confronts a stranger he is not to be disarmed by any plausible story or excuse.

An unusual and interesting exhibit at the Provincial Museum in the Normal School, Toronto, is that of two mummified bodies which were exhumed in British Columbia. The bodies are in a hunched-up position with their arms clasping their knees. This illustrates one method of burial used by the Clayoquot Indians.

Other exhibits from the Pacific Coast province are Indian costumes on stuffed figures, life size, standing in a large glass show case which runs around the room. Behind the figures are many weird and grotesque dancing masks which bear strong resemblance to the gargoyles seen on old world cathedrals.

AN ATTRACTIVE KITCHEN

The Room Where the Housewife Works Should be Made Pleasant

Has it ever occurred to you that for the same amount of money an attractive rather than an unattractive kitchen can be made? This part of the house, where the housemother spends much of her time, receives little consideration along convenient or attractive lines. Why not have it pretty? There are so many ways it can be done.

The walls of the kitchen can be painted with a yellow or Delft blue. They can be finished in wash paint that is sanitary and requires very little effort to keep clean. The wood work can be white or it may be a darker shade of yellow, both of which take very little time to clean. The shelves may be covered with white enamel, or oilcloth, neatly put on with brass-headed nails. If the closet room is limited, the saucepans may hang from brass hooks on the walls, ranging from the smallest to the largest sizes. A series of brass hooks is placed over the sink like those at the sides of the shelves, and on these are hung different sizes of enamel spoons, dippers and measures. The dishpan and drainer are kept out of sight in the sink closet.

If the kitchen is finished in blue, which is very effective, a roller of white crash with a broad blue border may be placed on the door leading to the pantry. Dutch curtains of the blue and white crash on brass rods are placed at the windows. The kitchen table, when not in use, also has a blue and white crash cloth.

Underneath one of the windows two pine shelves may be placed and painted to match the rest of the room. They hold the cook books, which are covered with removable covers of the blue and white crash.

Window boxes can be fitted for the kitchen windows, one to hold parsley, which is most luxuriant, another to contain sweet alyssum, which blooms late in the spring, and at a third window a plain board shelf may be placed where a sewing basket, book or magazine may be laid. A large rocking chair, standing at this window, affords a restful place for odd minutes, especially on busy days.—Mother's Magazine.

THIS RICH YOUTH REFORMS BAD BOYS

Norris Attends the Milwaukee Juvenile Court and Nods If He Wants the Accused

Neil Wells Norris, Milwaukee, Wisconsin, with $4,000,000 has for some years been serving without pay, for the love of boys and humanity, as a volunteer probation and truancy officer, and he always attends Juvenile court to hear the stories told by the youthful culprits, having a tacit arrangement with the judge by which the judge, when Norris nods his head, paroles the boys under examination to the care of the young millionaire. One of the probation officers thus describes the millionaire's work:

"Young Mr. Norris is not only spending his time and money on boys who are paroled to him, but he is sending other boys to school. You see, there are many boys who want to go to school, but whose parents are so situated financially that they cannot be allowed to attend. Many of these boys are sent to school by Mr. Norris, who is paying their family the wages that the boy would earn." In a garage, which is probably the finest of its kind in Wisconsin, Mr. Norris has fitted up his 'bad boy office.' Here, on the second floor, is a room in which the lads report each week to the 'volunteer officer.' When the reports have been heard the boys are sent downstairs, where a gymnasium has been fitted up for their use. As he sat in his office above the garage Mr Norris was led to speak of the work he has been doing.

"How did I get into this work?" he asked. "Well, really, I don't know. I just sort of drifted into it. I am fond of boys and used to attend the sessions of the court, and have heard their troubles. I got the idea that maybe I could be of use, and so I just started out. The work is interesting and keeps my mind busy, and there is great possibility for good. I have learned many things. One is that the hardest thing a man who wants to help a boy has to deal with is the boy's parents. I suppose that if the home training was of the best the boy would never get into court, but it is surprising the amount of parental opposition the probation officers are forced to combat. If we could only get the coöperation of the parents the work would be comparatively easy. Another thing I have found out is this: We need some form of corporal punishment which can be administered to boys by officials of the city authorities. The average boy who comes before the Juvenile court does not mind reprimand. He thinks that it is sort of a joke to come to court and hear himself 'raked over the coals,' and then be allowed to go. If, however, we had some means of administering some sort of physical punishment I think the boys might not come to court so often."

PUFF OF WIND, BANK WRECKED

Playful Breeze Played Hide and Seek With a Stocking Safe Deposit Vault.

A strong wind, not content with carrying hats aloft, turning umbrellas inside out and swirling women's skirts about in cyclonic and embarrassing fashion, has become a bank wrecker. The bank conducted by Mrs. Robert Stadie of the Latham hotel has been ruined by the wind. Its lone depositor, Mrs. Stadie, has lost $100 in cash and a fine silk stocking as a result.

As the new custom of women having pockets in their coats and skirts has not yet been placed in operation by the dressmakers and cloakmakers, Mrs. Stadie utilized the banking facilities so well known to her sex, but never until Boreas came did she lose a penny from the trusty repository. It was as secure in the silken safe, apparently, as it would be in the steel and concrete vaults of a Wall street banking house.

When Mrs. Stadie entered the bathroom of her suite she placed the always faithful bank containing $100 on the window sill. The window was up just a little bit. The wind gave a little puff. Out went the Stadie bank into Twenty-eighth street. Mrs. Stadie could not afford the time at the moment to look out to discover the trail the wind would follow with it. When she did, however, it could not be seen. She is willing to relinquish her claim on the bank, but would be thankful for the return of its assets.—New York Telegram.

Lioness at Large.

A lioness, belonging to a menagerie visiting Athy, escaped from her cage and gave the attendants an anxious time while they surrounded the animal in the tent with boards and other articles. A woman connected with the show with a revolver succeeded in subduing the lioness by firing blank shots whenever there were signs of bad temper. Before the animal was got back to the cage she mauled a pony, which had to be destroyed.

Japanese Admire America.

In Japanese hearts America is by far the most favored nation on earth. They regard it as their mother country, even as we are at last coming to regard England. It is in truth the mother of their modern life. Commodore Perry today is enrolled among their national saints, the Fourth of July is observed as one of the chief festivals of the year, and the name of George Washington appeals to the youth of the land as does no other name in all history.—Atlantic Monthly.

Do You Feel Moody, [illegible], Depressed?

When That Languid, Loggy, Badly-Used Feeling Comes, Your Liver is Slow

Tells How to Cure Quickly.

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those fall feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in clearing up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all other, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect working order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mahaffy Gets Two Years.

At yesterday's police court, the young men Johnston and Mahaffy were charged with stealing a horse rug. Mahaffy pleaded guilty and the charge against Johnston was dropped as the owner of the rug lived some distance from town. County Attorney Wood appeared for the prosecution and Mr. Gordon for the defence. The two prisoners had been convicted of other thefts, a rain coat, a hat and a coat, etc. Johnston stole 17 hens. Mahaffy has a long list of convictions against him, for shop-breaking, getting money under false pretences, etc. Mahaffy was given two years in the Central Prison. Mr. Gordon spoke for Johnston. Johnston had 11 years ago been convicted of theft in St. Catharines but has since lived a good life until he met Mahaffy. Mahaffy, who has a wife and children was let go on suspended sentence.

Peterborough's First Postoffice.

A Times representative yesterday had the privilege of talking over old times in Peterborough with Mrs. Gage, of Mark Street, East City. It might be mentioned, incidentally, that this lady is related to the Marquis of Queensbury. Mrs. Gage noted that 60 years ago she remembered when the first regular postoffice was established in the then thinly populated village of Peterborough. The postoffice first operated, in her recollection, was situated on Hunter St., across from the present junction of Queen street. It was a frame building about 10 x 6 feet in size. The postmaster was a Mr. [illegible], long since deceased. Mr. Carver was the possessor of a [illegible] large nose. One day a villager caught Mr. Carver [illegible] and remarked, "Why Carver [illegible], I hope, pardon me, [illegible] nose for the door knob." DRAYTON REPORT ON FREIGHT RATES SHOWS LIBERAL DELAY

British Board of Trade Made Offer of Inquiry to Canada Two Years Ago

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—That the late Liberal Administration lost an opportunity to secure a thorough inquiry into the question of ocean rates on freight is shown in a statement of fact in the report of Mr. H. L. Drayton, chairman of the Railway Commission, on the subject, made public by Hon. George E. Foster to-day.

Mr. Drayton states that the British Board of Trade pointed out to him that an offer of co-operation in a joint inquiry was made to the Canadian Government in a letter from Lord Crewe as far back as 1910, but no reply to the communication was ever received.

As a result of Mr. Drayton's trip, The Dominions Trade Commission will be investigating the matter of shipping rates from the Canadian viewpoint in Canada early next year.

The chairman of the Railway Commission endeavored to obtain the establishment of a joint commission to make a thorough and complete investigation of the whole question of rates and charges of ocean carriers, the operation of terminal and port authorities and the ocean traffic generally, and suggested that the commission should advise as to what legislation, if any, should be passed by the Imperial Parliament or the Parliament of Canada in connection with the matter. In addition to discussing the matter with the Imperial authority, Mr. Drayton met the representatives of the five largest shipping companies.

To his proposal however, the British Board of Trade pointed out that the question of freight rates had been broached by them to the Laurier Administration as far back as 1910, but without any response from Canada to a request for co-operation in the investigation.

Mr. Drayton at the outset points out that the question is one which has already engaged the attention of the British Board of Trade, which in 1910 communicated to the Under Secretary of [illegible] [illegible]. In [illegible] communication the Board saw [illegible] difficulties in the establishment of a joint tribunal for the control of ocean freight rates, but expressed the opinion that it should have power to appoint competent persons to investigate the matter. They saw no reason why the Imperial Government should not discuss with the Canadian Government the question of holding a joint inquiry into rates charged and facilities afforded by shipping companies engaged in the trade between the United Kingdom and Canada.

With that object in view he endeavored to obtain the appointment of a joint commission to make a thorough and complete investigation of rates and charges of ocean carriers, [illegible] charges, the operation of terminal and port authorities and ocean traffic generally. He had also suggested that the commission should advise as to what legislation, if any, should be passed by the Imperial Parliament or the Parliament of Canada in connection with the matter.

THE NAVY QUESTION

In reply to a query from a Times reporter as to the present state of the Navy discussion, Mr. Burnham said: "The Liberal press is constantly demanding that Canada build and maintain a fleet on the Atlantic and another on the Pacific. To me this is simply a mad waste of money. I am against the increase of armaments policy. Let us make a serious effort to adjust international relations before we talk of making them worse by going into the Navy building business. It is true that if we are to go into the game for good we must prepare to build our own ships. We must not allow money to go out of the country if we can help it, even if we know that if Britain pursued that policy we wouldn't have any money for any of our great undertakings. But what I want to say most of all, and what I know to be the Conservative policy, is, that Canada should join with others, notably, her Mother Country and her sister dominions, in a serious attempt to cut down the number of navies—not to increase them. I believe that a great Imperial Navy would itself be a sure guarantee of peace, while another navy or two would be simply throwing oil on the the flames of strife. If Australia does not want to join us, then let Australia go on and spend her good money in making a show of herself. Canada knows as much as Australia any day, and if we display some moderation instead of Jingoism in our Naval ideas, we will know much more."

FEDERAL CHIEF WILL HANG TO POLE WHEN CAPTURED

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 25.—Sleeping on their arms under a downpour of rain after their night of victorious fighting against the Federal army, 7,000 rebel troops, under Francisco Villa, rested this morning. The rebels expect to renew the battle to-day and hope to capture the Federal General, Jose Ynez Salazar, who with his soldiers, is surrounded near Rancho Flores. The rebels say they are anxious to capture Gen. Salazar so that he may be hanged to a telephone pole in Juarez.

Though the Federals were repelled from their attack to gain possession of Juarez after eight hours fighting, Gen. Villa believes he must further [illegible] the enemy if he would gain [illegible] the territory south of Chihuahua City and deliver upon them such a crushing defeat that the Federal army of Chihuahua will be demoralized.

Gen. Villa said the Federal forces are a few miles south of Samalayuca but with one of their troops trains loaded with soldiers, surrounded by rebels. The General expects the Government troops to make a sortie to-day to rescue the train, and is making preparations to defeat them.

Stretched in a semi-circle for fifteen miles, the rebel troops present a formidable battle line, and so far the constitutionalist leader has been able to make all detached attacks become general engagements in which the whole of his army is employed. It was in this manner that he repelled the first onslaught of the Federals yesterday afternoon and forced them to await darkness for resumption of their main attack, which Villa, through a strategic move, turned into rout. With camp fires burning, and all signs of camp life evident at the main wing at Tierra Blanca, Villa marched his men forth to attack the Federals. Reinforcements were to meet him at a specified point from both left and right wings.

FIERCE BLAZE LAST NIGHT

Akey's Livery Stable Completely Gutted

Last night a fire broke out in the livery stables on Chambers street, occupied by Mr. James Akey.

About ten o'clock, an employe, Harold Graham, son of ex-Ald. Graham, went into the hay mow which had been just filled with hay. He was overpowered with the smoke, and was with difficulty rescued. With hair and eyes singed and hands burned he was taken to Dr. Carmichael who dressed the wounds, which were painful but not serious.

The fire brigade and police were soon on the scene, and the fire was prevented from spreading. The building is on the Bradburn estate and is insured. Mr. Akey has no insurance. The total loss is in the neighborhood of $3,000.

The fire is supposed to have been caused by defective electric wiring.

ALD. BULLER WILL RUN FOR MAYOR

Ald. Buller last night authorized the Times to announce that he (the people's candidate) is positively in the field for the mayoralty. The Times also has strong reason to believe that our present worthy Mayor, Mr. W. H. Bradburn, will not accept nomination.

THE MUNICIPAL POT BEGINNING TO BOIL

Mayor Bradburn Being Petitioned to Stand for a Third Term—Probable Men for the Council.

The municipal pot is becoming warm, and will soon be at the boiling point. Many new names are being mentioned for the Mayor's chair and for the Council Board. As stated in yesterday's issue, a petition is out asking Mayor Bradburn to stand for a third term. Mr. Bradburn has, however, said that he will not be a candidate against any member of the present Council, should one or more of the Aldermen seek the Chief Magistrate's chair. In the event of a contest, Ald. Buller will be a candidate and will be opposed by Ald. Gillespie, who is being urged to stand, should Mayor Bradburn retire.

In the Council, Ald. Buller retires in No. One Ward. The only new name we have heard of so far in this ward is Mr. Joseph Saunders.

No. 2 Ward, Ald. Gillespie retires, and the new men mentioned are Mr. J. B. McWilliams and ex-Ald. Joseph Metheral.

No. 3 Ward, Ald. Duffus retires. Mr. Worth, of the Bonner-Worth Co. and Mr. Joseph Lytle, contractor, are mentioned as probable candidates.

No. 5 Ward, Mr. Anderson's term expires, and ex-Ald. James Graham, Dr. Middleton, Ex-Ald. Harry Morgan and Mr. W. Scott may be persuaded to run.

THE WILSON WEDDING A GREAT SOCIAL EVENT IN WASHINGTON

The White House Crowded With Guests to Witness the Imposing Ceremony

(Special to The Times.)

Washington, Nov. 25.—Four hundred persons, senators and representatives, the member of the diplomatic corps and the personal friends and relatives of the bride and groom were witnesses of the simple ceremony in the East Room, which made Jessie Woodrow Wilson, second daughter of the President, the wife of Francis Bowes Sayre, of New York.

But so widespread was the interest in the thirteenth wedding in the White House, that many millions of people attended in spirit, and offered their good wishes and congratulations to the President's daughter and his first son-in-law.

A MAGNIFICENT SCENE

For the benefit of the lady readers of The Times I will give a brief description of the scene. Upon entering the collonad doorway your card of admission is handed to the smiling negro butler who guards its portals, and you nod a pleasant greeting to the portraits of Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft, whose pictures adorn the wide entrance hall; you enter the great east room, which has been cleared for the wedding ceremony of all the priceless tapestry and gorgeous vases which the governments of the world have presented to the United States, and you await the single moment when a triumphant burst of music will proclaim the coming of the White House bride.

THE MARRIAGE CEREMONY

Promptly at 4.30 the splendid orchestra burst forth in delicious harmony, when the wedding party entered to the strains of the wedding march, the bride leaning on the arm of her father. The ceremony was brief and simple, the officiating clergyman being the Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, of Princeton.

The bride was supported by Miss Eleanor R. Wilson, sister of the bride; Miss Mary G. White of Baltimore, Miss Adeline Mitchell Scott of Princeton, Miss Marjorie Brown of Atlanta, Ga.

Dr. Winfred Grenfell, of Labrador, acted as groomsman.

The maid of honor was Miss Margaret Wilson, sister of the bride.

The ushers were Benjamin B. Burton of New York city, Dr. Scovill Clark of Salem, Mass.; Dr. Gilbert Horax of Montclair, N.J.; Charles E. Hughes, Jr., of Washington and New York city.

In addition to the friends of the bride and groom there were present about 400 guests, including the ambassadors and members of the diplomatic corps in Washington. The wedding presents were magnificent, costing many thousands of dollars.

COUNCIL SAYS GOVERNMENT MUST ASSURE SWING BRIDGE

Committee Will Interview Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P. This Morning—Deputation May Go to Ottawa—"Got to Have That Swing" Say Ald. Johnston

The City Fathers sat in earnest council last night over the question of the swing that is so badly needed in the C.P.R.'s new bridge over the Otonabee river. They generally conceded that the responsibility is very much the Dominion Government's, and do not agree with our local member, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., that it is now Council's duty alone to actively engage in securing for Peterborough the swing in question. The Council is unitedly agreed that it is the Government's duty to see that navigation above the C.P.R. is properly taken care of now that the city has spent so much money in securing future wharfage along the river front south of Hunter street.

Mayor Bradburn and Ald. Johnston and Langford will interview Mr. Burnham to-day on this vexed question, and His Worship is authorized to send a deputation to Ottawa at once if necessary and, in Ald. Johnston's own vernacular, tell the Minister that "we've got to have that swing!"

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., sent in to Council the following telegram last night:

"Montreal, Nov. 25.
"J. H. Burnham, M.P.,
Peterborough.

"Telegram received. To move suggested hundred foot swing span from centre to west end of bridge would be most inconvenient and expensive. Two additional piers would be required and would narrow up west channel about twenty feet, costing $3,000 plus ten thousand dollars for the one hundred and twenty-five fixed span now ready to be placed in position. Would Government be willing to assume this cost.

"F. L. WANKLYN."

His Worship wired to Mr. Wanklyn last evening, asking just what the C.P.R. intends doing. A reply is expected this morning.

Referring to the inspired article in the Times yesterday morning re swing in the C.P.R., his worship expressed his surprise that Ald. Buller had interviewed Mr. Burnham on the question at all, and assured Council that he had not been laying on the task in his official office. In proof of this he read a bulk of correspondence between himself and Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Public Works, touching this swing, and also with the C.P.R. Co. In summary, at the insistency of negotiations Mr. Wanklyn of the C.P.R. had expressed his surprise to hear that there was any chance of navigation above the C.P.R. He (the Mayor) then explained the importance of a swing to facilitate use of wharfage along the river front, and Mr. Wanklyn replied that he thought the C.P.R. owned all the land outside their tracks. Subsequently Mr. Wanklyn had written that the C.P.R. did not wish any difference with their good friends in Peterborough, whose interests they would try and meet. Still he thought the company had not been treated fairly, the question of a swing only arising after an order had been placed for the bridge with the Hamilton Bridge Co. Finally the C.P.R. suggested a 33 foot clear waterway in the centre of the bridge or at east end, and the Mayor had replied that a 33 foot opening would not, he thought, be wide enough in a strong current: 33 feet is allowed at the locks where practically still water prevails. Mr. Wanklyn then wrote (as published fully before) that the C.P.R. must then abandon their new bridge scheme and retain the present fixed span. His worship replied pressing for the swing and also wrote Hon. Robert Rogers, who replied that the city was asking too much and should accept the company's proposal for a 37 foot swing. The Mayor then wrote Mr. Rogers that the C.P.R. were not proposing a 37 foot opening but one of 33 feet only.

His Worship here went on to say that he subsequently interviewed Mr. Burnham who suggested employing an expert to prove to the Government that the city's claims are just. "I did not suggest," concluded the

ENGLISH JOURNALS DEMAND JUSTICE FOR C. P. RAILWAY

Morning Post Follows the Lead of the Times in Austrian Affair

London, Nov. 25.—Other leading journals are following The Times today in pressing the Foreign Office to employ further influence to secure justice for the Canadian Pacific at the hands of the Austrian Government. The Morning Post in its first editorial, shows how completely absurd is the accusation that the Canadian Pacific railway intrigued against the military strength of the monarchy.

It says people are beginning to feel that the Canadian Pacific has been made the scapegoat for the misdeeds of others, especially the North German shipping pool, which previously enjoyed an emigration monopoly, and adds:

"The Canadian Pacific desires nothing better than that the charges be sifted to the bottom. They have the right to claim that if the suspicions are found baseless, full amends must be made for the injury and loss they have suffered. They are entitled to ask that they will not be subjected to differential treatment and will be insured from arbitrary interference in business as long as they abide loyally by the terms of their contract. We hope the Imperial Government will employ all its influence to obtain justice for this great English company."

SCHOOL COURSES FOR TOMMY ATKINS

Education Not Compulsory But Promotion From Ranks Depends on It

When a man joins the British Army he has not necessarily done with school attendance. While he may always go as a volunteer, in certain circumstances he is compelled to go, whether he likes it or not.

A good education is quite as important in the Army as anywhere else. Recognizing this fact, the authorities established well-equipped schools in every garrison town at home and abroad. No charge is made for attending them, and books and stationery, together with expert instruction, are supplied free of cost.

All recruits are examined as to their educational acquirements shortly after joining. No man is actually compelled to attend school, unless he wishes to become a non-commissioned officer. Still, he will find it advantageous to do so, as, until he acquires a certificate proving him to have a certain standard of knowledge, he will not get promotion. The result is he remains a private throughout his career.

Three different classes of educational certificates are recognized in Army schools. A first class certificate, which is necessary for promotion to sergeant-major, or a commission from the ranks, means a sound knowledge of history, geography, arithmetic, composition, and map-reading.

In addition to these compulsory subjects, a candidate for a first-class certificate can take up [illegible] languages, shorthand, and typewriting, together with fortification, tactics, and military law.

For second and third class certificates the subjects are fewer in number and the qualifying standards less advanced. Still, they are not to be secured without hard work. A sergeant or corporal must have a second-class certificate before his promotion is confirmed, and a lance-corporal must have a third-class certificate.

School attendance takes place in the afternoon, when the day's duties are finished and each session lasts for one hour and a half. [illegible] put his name down to attend, he is not allowed to withdraw until he has either attended for three months or else secured a certificate.

Army schools are directed by specially-trained men belonging to the Corps of Army Schoolmasters. On passing a competitive examination, they enlist in the corps for a term of twelve years, and are appointed to a garrison school. After a period of probation they are given the rank of warrant-officer. From this, if they persevere, they may eventually rise to an inspectorship.

They then receive honorary promotion as lieutenant, with a prospect of retiring as captain or major at the age of fifty-five. As such, they draw from $2.50 to $4.00 a day, and are eligible for pensions of [illegible] a year.

Army schoolmasters, like all other soldiers, wear uniform while on duty, and are always under military discipline. In the event of misconduct they may be tried by court-martial. Their pay begins at [illegible] cents a day, and rises to $1.00, with rations and quarters, and certain allowances.

The children of married soldiers are entitled to the benefit of free education in an Army school. They are taught by the same staff, and use the same premises, but at different hours from those given up to the adults.

Two members coming down from one of the Committee rooms decided to have tea together, and therefore repaired to the tea-room. A SKELETON FACTORY

Big One in Paris Has Almost Monopoly of Strange Trade

Making skeletons for a living does not seem to be a business that would pay very much, and yet there are a number of places where skeletons are made. In making skeletons it does not mean that they are made artificially by some composition resembling bone, but that they are "made" by removing flesh and ligaments, drying the bones, whitening them and assembling them, fastening them together with slender wires in place of the ligaments, which, of course, will not remain solid like bone, but disintegrate.

In these places skeletons of almost everything, from a common tadpole to a human being, are made. There are places where artificial skeletons are made for various purposes, such as theatrical productions and the like, but this is done along with other work where all sorts of things, from imitation ivory paper cutters to massive pillars, are made.

The real skeleton factory deals in nothing except the genuine skeletons, and they not only sell these and fill orders for them to all sorts of medical men and institutions and schools, but they are also willing to "rent them" for any period.

The biggest share of the skeleton trade is carried on in France, the biggest "factory" being located in Paris, where there is a complete equipment and stock for furnishing skeletons of everything, even extinct animals, skeletons of fishes and men or elephants and rabbits and everything to-day that has enough of a skeleton to put together. So great is the business in this place that it has branches in London and Berlin, and it gets out great catalogues, and sends them broadcast, showing lists and cuts of their choice lots of skeletons.

Most of the human bones employed in the French manufacture belonged, in life, to criminals or to unknown persons whose bodies were unclaimed after death in hospitals or almshouses. After being utilized in the dissecting room the remains were removed to this factory.

The proprietor of this factory practically monopolizes this industry. The preparation of the skeletons takes many months from first to last, and is a very expensive process. There must be a thorough chemical treatment of the bones in the first place, to insure their hanging together and remaining in an unaltered state.

The preparation of skeletons is really far more important than one would think, as it provides thousands of medical students and others with the means of making a proper study of the construction of the human frame, and helps in the constant work of medical and surgical advance.

A Royal Jewel Squabble

The jewels which the Duchess of Cumberland wears on state occasions recall a memorable Royal squabble which took place over them, in the course of which Queen Victoria, on one of the few occasions in her reign, made a mistake. When William IV. died these jewels were in England, having been brought over in the reign of George II. The pearls alone were valued at over a million dollars. The young Queen Victoria wanted them badly, and Prince Albert did his best to retain them. A commission of judges, however, in 1857 found against the Queen, and the pearls had to be returned to Hanover, much to the chagrin of Queen Victoria and her Consort. The Duchess of Cumberland is the mother of the young prince who married the German Emperor's daughter.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Referring to his imprisonment of the Mexican Congress, the Hon. Vic Huerta says it "was a noble act." The opinion of the men who are now in jail will probably be expressed later.

The Dominion revenue for seven months shows a gain of five million dollars over the same period last year. Times are not so bad—even though the divine right parliamentarians are out of office.

The Intercolonial railway under non-partizan management is increasing its efficiency and its earnings. In the Moncton shops over 14,000 men are regularly employed and they are unable to turn out cars swiftly enough to handle the growing traffic.

Christmas shopping is not shopping that should be left until the day before Christmas. Start your Christmas purchasing now. Take advantage of the wider range of selection available and get the presents into the mails before the last moment.

The latest "German peril" is one that affects Germany alone. It is the German birth rate, which is falling so rapidly as to cause genuine alarm. And yet the German birth rate is much greater than that of this comparatively young and sparsely settled province of Ontario.

Ugly stories are in circulation that lives were needlessly sacrificed in the recent terrible storms on the Great Lakes, because captains of vessels, under orders from shipowners, disregarded the warnings of storm signals. It is not a pleasing thought, but so long as prospects of fat profits are held out, men will be found to take risks in the winning of them.

Commissioner Roland, of the Winnipeg Industrial bureau, is seeking to interest British capital in the development of the flax industry in the Canadian west. It follows, as the night follows day, that present wasteful methods cannot continue forever. Economic law abhors wastage, just as nature a vacuum, and the time must inevitably come when the enormous quantities of valuable flax straw now burned in the fields, will be put to profitable use.

PRICES UPWARD.

The Department of Labour index number of wholesale prices stood at 136.8 for October, 1913, as compared with 136.0 in September, and 135.0 for October last year. Corn, peas, Ontario barley, hay and bran were higher, but wheat, flaxseed, western oats and barley were lower. Cattle and beef were higher, but hogs and hog products continued to decline. All dairy products were higher except cheese. Fresh Canadian fruits and potatoes advanced but imported fruits, beans, onions and canned vegetables were lower. Record prices for jute and the highest price for cotton since 1911 raised the level of textiles. Copper, brass and lead were up, but steel, tin quicksilver and silver were lower. Brooms were steeply up. Rope and raw rubber declined. In retail prices, meats, eggs, milk and butter were higher, but there was a general decline in potatoes as the crop came on the market. Beans, flour, rolled oats and sugar showed weaker tendencies, while evaporated apples and coal were upward. As above stated, the general effect of the month's changes was to send the level distinctly higher.

COMING OF THE PARCELS POST

Coincident with the definite announcement that the Canadian parcels post will be inaugurated at the New Year, comes intelligence that the United States parcels post for the first year of its operation has surpassed all expectations, both in the public use of the conveniences and in returns to the post-office department. The revenues, as a fact, are about twice as great as were anticipated. The experience of Uncle Sam will afford encouragement to Postmaster General Pelletier and to the Canadian public which is waiting with eager expectancy the inauguration of the system here. There is no reason to believe similar results will not follow the institution of the parcels post in Canada.

No legislation of recent years will touch the individual and the home so intimately as will the parcels post. It means not a lowering of freight rates to the merchant, the manufacturer and the middleman, but it represents a cheapening of transportation between the producer and the actual consumer. It will provide, moreover, a convenient and ready means of communication between the two. There can hardly fail to follow a noticeable effect on the cost of living.

Bronchitis Cured By Medicated Air

NO DRUGS TO TAKE — YOU SIMPLY BREATHE A HEALING BALSAMIC VAPOR

Every Breath Carries Healing Balsams to the Sick, Sore Places in the Nose and Throat.

Montreal this time gives splendid praise for the modern way of curing colds, catarrh and bronchitis.

Instead of taking sickening drugs into the stomach, or using an old-fashioned spray, the sensible person nowadays breathes the soothing vapors of Catarrhozone and gets well right away. This is exactly what Mr. Joseph Ducase did, and writing from his office at 87 St. Paul street, he says:—

"I suffered for years with the worst form of chronic bronchial throat and nasal catarrh. I tried all kinds of syrups, ointments, tablets and washes, but they proved ineffective. In fact I could get no relief. I read in the Montreal Witness of Catarrhozone and bought an outfit. In a few hours I got relief. The air passages of my nose were cleared out, and I was able to breathe freely. My throat was strengthened—my voice improved—and no longer gagged and coughed. The effect of Catarrhozone was wonderful. Now I am well—no bronchitis—no throat distress. I urge everyone with a weak throat, with a cough, a cold or a touch of catarrh to use Catarrhozone freely."

Get the Dollar outfit — lasts two months and is guaranteed. Smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. each, all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

COUNCIL SAYS GOVT. MUST ASSURE SWING

swing should be on the west side of Mayor, "to the company that the importance of one capable of taking care of future navigation."

When the Mayor found the C.P.R. had resumed work on the new bridge he again opened up correspondence with the company.

Ald. Butler explained that he had not interviewed Mr. Burnham with a view to overriding his worship, but simply in the interests of the community. The city's plans for a traffic bridge at Dalhousie street are matured; but it was not thought wise to submit a by-law for same this year. Council also had agitated that the street railway run over this bridge and, if possible across the new Auburn dam, but the company are holding out for a high level bridge at Hunter street. Then the kind of structure thrown across the river at Dalhousie street depends upon the new C.P.R. bridge; if a swing is not put in the latter there will be no need for one in the former.

Ald. Gordon concluded that as the responsibility for this swing is evidently thrown upon the city, the city should take some further action without delay.

On motion of Ald. Butler and Duncan, the Mayor and Ald. Johnston and Langford were named a committee to interview Mr. Burnham, M.P., this morning; his worship to send a deputation to Ottawa to interview the Minister regarding the swing in the C.P.R. bridge if necessary.

Mr. Langford thought Mr. Burnham had done all he could in the matter; "but governments are besieged by company lobyists in such matters."

The city fathers met in special session last night. There were present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson Langford, Johnston, Green Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Butler

MAY BUILD LOCOMOTIVE HERE

The C.G.E. wrote that they are constantly in receipt of orders for electric locomotives, but as they have in Peterborough no facilities for testing such locomotives they are obliged to transfer the orders elsewhere. If, however, they could arrange with the city for laying a mile of railway track on the Monaghan road these electric locomotives could be built in this city. (Their proposition is to lay rails on the Monaghan road from King street south to the C.P.R. track, on which to test locomotives.) This question was referred to the Mayor to arrange an interview between the Council and the C.G.E. people in regard to arranging for a track as suggested.

PETER HAMILTON CO'S SIDING.

The Dominion Railway Board reported in favor of the railway siding up Water street to the Peter Hamilton Co's works with the rider that once the siding is laid it must be permanent under all conditions. Council took exception to this order; the city's by-law in this respect granted the siding on condition that should the Peter Hamilton Co. cease business the siding should be taken up.

Ald. Gordon and Duncan moved that the Railway Board be asked to either have their rider amended in agreement with the by-law or to repeal the order altogether. Carried.

Ald. Anderson pointed out that the Peter Hamilton Co. did not now intend to have the siding run up Water street, but on their own property and across Sherbrooke street.

A NUISANCE.

Mr. Morrison asked Council to at once have the surface water at rear of Bolivar street lots diverted into a [illegible] which will relieve adjacent citizens of the nuisance therefrom. Mr. Morrison thought the Water might this year be carried across the road in a temporary trench and run down Sherbrooke street, pending more permanent treatment next spring.

Some effort will be made to relieve the situation temporarily this year.

Rev. [illegible], rector of St. George's church, asked that a fitting civic reception be given the Lieut.-Governor and other distinguished visitors to be present at the bazaar in the Armouries this week.

On motion of Ald. Butler the reception Committee will confer with Mr. Price as to what shape the civic reception next Thursday.

Permission was also given for hanging an advertising streamer across George street at a convenient spot.

SNOW PLOUGHING BY-LAW.

A by-law to authorize the execution of contracts with the contractors for this work passed council.

SALARIES OF WATER COMMISSIONERS.

A by-law to increase the salaries of the Water Commissioners passed its three readings. Their salaries from January 1st next for management of the waterworks and the light and power business of the city will be: Chairman [illegible] a year, the other two commissioners [illegible] a year each.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

VERY UNDESIRABLE CITIZENS AT LEAST TO FARMERS.

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly give me space in your Times to state some loss and annoyance we are subjected to by the swarms of young men with dogs and guns that come out of the city to hunt, steal, shoot and destroy all they can. I would like to give you a few instances of their doings. This afternoon (Friday, 21st) I was ploughing in a field beside my swamp and some young men were there with some hounds. I do not know the men, but one of the hounds was a large white dog with black ears. The other was white and black—black over the shoulders and black over the loins and black and brown head. They kept a continual howling, and the frequent shooting so annoyed and excited my horses that they became unmanageable, and going too fast the plough struck a large stone and broke a plough point and a double whiffletree. The loss, with my time, was $2.50.

About two weeks ago some young men were shooting in Mr. Wilson's woods. Our hens were in an adjoining field. There were two lady visitors on our lawn; they heard a shot and looking in that direction they saw a man run from the bushes and grab a white fowl that was tumbling on the ground, and run back to the woods. Well, our pure evil white leghorn rooster didn't come home to roost any more.

Now, the bank of the old Cobourg and Peterborough railroad is through our land, and there streams of young fellows go along it; they don't take the trouble to get over the fence, but throw the rails down. Four times this fall they threw down the fence and let my cattle and colts out. Some time ago they shot one of my year-old heifers dead. They go in the fields in summer and pick and carry away the peas in pailfuls. My neighbor, Mr. Joseph Redmond, raises pigeons. These birds light on the railway and pick up corn and wheat; these fellows watch their chance and shoot them. In the summer on Saturday afternoons and holidays they come in droves and their hounds chase the rabbits and they escape to the grain fields, the hounds follow and it is no uncommon sight to see from two to four hounds racing through the ripe grain.

Now, of course, this is fun, and gain for these fellows from town; but not for us farmers, and we do not intend to endure it much longer. We like sport but we have no chance to get a shot at a rabbit or partridge when we would have leisure in winter. These grainfields and woods, and fowl, and rabbits and partridges are ours, and these fellows who have no claim on us, we don't even know them, come from town and overrun the place as though they owned it all. As these men and boys and dogs belong to your city we would like your Chief Magistrate to take care of them or tell us how we can handle them.

We would also like our county magistrate to give us some advice, and oblige.

QUICKSAND DISCOVERED CLOSE TO THE OLD CATHEDRAL

St. Paul's, London, Upon Unstable Foundation and Shows Many Signs of Settling

Anxiety as to the safety of St. Paul's Cathedral, London, was heightened as the result of a report received by the Dean and Chapter from Sir Francis Fox. As a consequence of this report a committee of experts was appointed to consider remedial measures.

Sir Francis Fox ascertained from the city records that when excavations were made for the sewer proposed to be carried along the south side of the cathedral in 1831, quicksand was found at a depth of thirty-one feet below the street level, in close proximity to the south porch, and that in view of the grave peril in which the carrying out of the work would have involved the fabric, the project was abandoned. The same quicksand was encountered in the excavations for the warehouses on the south side of the street.

Plumbing of the dome and walls has been carried out on several occasions, with the result that they are found to be out of true in different places, generally in a south-westerly direction. "The amount of divergence," says Sir Francis Fox, "would be negligible were the fabric at rest, and the core of the walls and piers intact, but although the movement is not in itself serious at present, it is imperative that it should be stopped otherwise it is only a question of time when danger will be reached."

He further stated that in consequence of the tilting of the eight main piers of the dome, due to the excessive and unequal pressure on the foundations, these piers are seriously crushed; that twenty-three of the thirty-two buttresses to the drum of the dome are cracked, those to the south-west being very seriously disintegrated; and that both the outer and inner walls of the drum itself are also cracked, and have been pointed up in years gone by. Some ten years ago heavy iron tie-rods were fixed to overcome the motion, which, however, continues, as is proved by numerous "live" cracks in the cement—"telltales" which require constant fixing.

Sir Francis Fox concluded: "The Cathedral, although standing immediately, as I am informed, on pot earth, gravel, and sand, is underlaid by wet sand and gravel (the level of water depending, more or less, on the rainfall), for a depth of about five to six feet above the London clay. The strata of wet sand and gravel constitute an unreliable and unstable condition."

ST. GEORGES CHORAL SOCIETY CONCERT

The Autumn concert of the St. George's Choral Society was given in the Collegiate Institute Hall last evening. Under the enthusiastic conductorship of Mr. R. J. Devey, and accompanied in a skilled and splendid manner by Miss M. Flavelle, 70 or 80 performers, representing nearly every choir in the city, rendered one of Handel's choruses and two lighter pieces. Of the oratorio music "Lift Up Your Heads" and the minor [illegible], "Mourn ye Afflicted People," were most enjoyed by the audience. "The Village Blacksmith" and a "Fantasia on Scottish Airs" were well rendered. The soloists were: Miss Bessie Greenfield, Mr. R. Barclay, Mr. G. Harris and Miss Collins of Lakefield. The last named has a rich, sweet, clear voice and sang "When the Heart is Young," just as one imagines the song deserves to be sung. The fun of the evening was provided by the quartette, Mrs. R. Reed, Miss V. Alexander, Messrs. Jones and Dickson, who gave the old favorite "Peoplicoido Bean." The voice and manner of Peoplicoido Bean as himself were exactly fitted to the part; the entire piece was rendered with fine dramatic effect, and the last word was given by the ladies with a [illegible] that was quite true to nature.

• SIMPLE TREATMENT FOR SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS •

(Beauty Culture.)

A very effective and simple home treatment for superfluous hairs is as follows: Mix into a paste enough powdered delatone and water to cover the hairy surface, apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and every trace of hair has disappeared. This method is devoid of pain or danger, and leaves the skin free from spot or blemish. Best results naturally follow when the delatone is purchased in an original package because its strength and purity are then assured.

GIRLS! DRAW A MOIST CLOTH THROUGH HAIR

Try this! Hair gets thick, glossy, wavy and beautiful at once—Stops falling out.

Immediate?—Yes! Certain?—that's the joy of it. Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. A delightful surprise awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and just try it.

MR. BECK RAPS THE LIBERALS

Many Leaders of That Party Now in Line After Scheme is Success

London, Ont., Nov. 25.—That Liberal members of the Legislature, who have recently been professing themselves friends of the Hydro have by their record shown themselves the actual enemies of cheap power, was held here by Hon. Adam Beck at Hallring last night. The Minister of power declared emphatically that in all the record of the Hydro-Electric movement in Ontario he had no recollection of any Liberal member of the Legislature ever assisting in any way in the work of passing a by-law in his own constituency in favor of Hydro-Electric. On the other hand they had been ever ready to attack it, to propose other schemes to delay legislation favorable to this peoples' movement, and to further the plans of the corporations.

Some Liberals Helped.

It was not the rank and file of the Liberal party upon whom this charge rested. Hon. Mr. Beck made clear, for it was by the active assistance of Liberals in the various municipalities that the power by-laws had been carried. But these by-laws owed nothing to any assistance from Liberal members of the Legislature, nor did they owe any help to Liberal newspapers like The [illegible], The Stratford Herald and the London Advertiser, which had opposed the Hydro-Electric movement throughout.

SUGAR FROM SAWDUST

[illegible] Fed on Product [illegible] Under the Treatment

That it is possible to produce a valuable commercial sugar from sawdust was the declaration of a well-known scientific authority at London. He declared that though wood in its natural state contained no sugar, still it was possible, by a chemical process, to produce it from sawdust. He had succeeded in closing sawdust in retorts with a weak solution of sulphuric acid. A pressure being applied, twenty-five per cent. of sugar was produced. The production was a valuable fodder for horses, cattle, and sheep, and in a month's experiment with the feed given to the Durham colliery ponies and horses, it had been found to keep the animals in a fine healthy condition.

The Oldest Aviator

A gentleman named Clausen probably holds the world's record as the oldest aviator. He is eighty-three, and recently took his first flight on a Farman biplane at Copenhagen. Odor of New Linoleum

To a great many persons, sensitive persons, an odor which prevails any great length of time is very disagreeable and some odors are very obstinate. In order to get rid of the odor of new linoleum the following recipe is given in a recent issue of La Nature: Mop the linoleum with a sponge or a piece of old carpet wetted with diluted Javelle water (1 to 20). Leave over night, closing all doors and windows; next morning air thoroughly, and over the dried surface pass lightly a mop wet with water containing 10 per cent. sodic bisulphide. Leave again over night with doors and windows closed. Next morning wash several times thoroughly with water

A BULL-ROARER

Roaring During the Performance of Sacred Ceremonies

Describing the initiation ceremonies of an Australian, a writer in "Customs of the World" says the boys now see for the first time in their lives a bull-roarer. This is a piece of wood of a painted oval shape, to one end of which is attached a string. When the instrument is swung round it produces a humming noise. No women or children are ever allowed to see a bull-roarer; they hear the noise made by it, and are told that this is the voice of a supernatural being. The bull-roarer is [illegible] during the performance of sacred ceremonies, and is to be [illegible] while the Bora is in progress. When it is shown to the boys and explained to them, they are warned never to mention it to a woman, nor ever to let her see one. If a woman should inadvertently see one of these sacred objects she would be killed.

Playing With Live Cartridges

Reuben Rawlins, a boy living at Heath End, near Farnham, was seriously wounded by the explosion of a live cartridge. He and another lad were playing on Caesar's Camp, the training ground for Aldershot, when they found two live cartridges. Taking them home, they lighted a fire in a bucket and laid the cartridges on the top. As the fire did not burn very well one of the lads stooped down to blow it. Suddenly the cartridges exploded. Rawlins was so seriously injured about the head and face that he was taken to Trimmer's Cottage Hospital at Farnham in a precarious condition. The second lad escaped with slight injuries.

OPIUM DENS IN ENGLAND

A newspaper [illegible] ex-inspector of [illegible] dressed in the plainest of plain clothes, spent several days and nights in exploring the fashionable haunts where many Englishmen imitate the habits of the Chinese, and their researches proved that, without a doubt, the opium den is as well, if not better, patronized by the fashionable "West Enders" as it is by his more humble and poverty-stricken brother in the east end of London.

In the East end the Chinaman or his opium-drugged English brother lies in an open cubicle upon a none too clean mattress. For the privilege of paying a few pence he is allowed to squat in a grimy hole, where he rolls his opium into his beloved pea, lights it at the flame, plugs it into his pipe, and sucks until he is literally wafted into the opium maniac's heaven. But the difference between an east end and a west end opium den is almost as vast as the area which divides the North Pole from the South.

In a so-called fashionable West End den some sort of introduction is essential before a visitor is allowed within the sacred precincts of the "exclusive circle." Indeed it is safe to say that rarely, if ever, has a casual visitor effected an entrance on his own footing.

However, the detective stated that there are, not a hundred miles from Piccadilly, numbers of touts who act in the capacity of "introducing agents" to the proprietors of these opium palaces. Those who are familiar with the haunts of Englishmen infected with an insatiable taste for opium would, indeed, be amazed at the luxury

Sheep should be dipped a second time in about ten days after the first dipping. This is because the dip will not kill the [illegible] in the embryo or egg form. On any sheep there are likely to be a great many eggs and these [illegible] will make good foundation stock for another crop of ticks unless they are killed by the second dipping.

Not According to Fact

In his annual report to the Newport Education Committee Dr. [illegible] says that false information was supplied in many cases, notably as the child approached the leaving age and was useful for household duties. Close co-ordination between the medical and attendance departments, however, invariably detected such offences, but there was often an apparent desire that speedy recovery should not take place in the cases of sick children. "An illness such as ringworm is a stroke of fortune to their parents, because there is so much more time for work." One lad suffering in this way was too busy to attend the clinic for treatment, because he was delivering bread to the public. A couple of brothers, having contagious skin diseases, were purveying pastries.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Adeville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. [illegible] and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

LONG LIVED LEGEND OF DEMON BARBER

Sweeney Todd's [illegible] Fleet Street—Historic House Pulled Down

It is more than likely that the gruesome story of Sweeney Todd, the horrible barber of Fleet street, will cling to the famous London thoroughfare long after every one of the supposed scenes of his atrocities has been completely cleared away.

The actual building in which Sweeney Todd was supposed to have carried on his murderous trade was recently demolished, and once again the legend—for legend it is from beginning to end—was revived.

The house referred to was 186 Fleet street, next door to the famous old church of St. Dunstan-in-the-West. Here Sweeney Todd, as the legend has it, was wont to pose to the unsuspecting world as a harmless and even useful, necessary barber.

His barber's chair was supposed to have been fixed over a trapdoor, and no sooner had the customer taken his seat and laid back confidently for the "clean shave" guaranteed by Sweeney Todd, than the trapdoor would fall, the customer would disappear beneath the floor, and down below the work of darkness would be completed with a blow on the head.

Sweeney Todd was not a man—so the legend would have us believe—who wasted anything. He would not only take great care of any watches or jewels on the persons of his victims, but even their bodies were made to serve the ends of his [illegible]. What was more likely, to such a creature, than that the flesh should be served up [illegible] as pies?

Such was the legend. The truth, as unearthed not many years ago, showed that Sweeney Todd should really be classed with Mrs. Harris—there was no such a person. No barber was ever known, in Fleet street, who treated his customers with other than courtesy, and with all despatch, though of a different kind from that meted out by the "demon barber."

So completely had this story got hold of the public that even Charles Dickens makes use of it in "Martin Chuzzlewit." And when, in some excavations on the spot, a pile of human bones was dug up, it seemed that the seal of complete proof was set upon the story of the barber's butcheries. Nobody seemed to see that the bones were, of course, those of persons long buried and forgotten in the churchyard of St. Dunstan.

By some curious means this legend arose out of a true story from Paris. In this there was a barber, and there was a pie-maker, but it is not supposed that they joined forces in the manner suggested by the Sweeney Todd story. An ingenious writer was responsible for bringing the story over the Channel, and fixing it—apparently for ever—on Fleet street. A play was even written round the story.

Iron in Plants

Experiments are under way at the agricultural bacteriological station in Vienna to increase the quantity of iron carried in certain plants, with a view to the effect on the human system when these plants are used as food. Artificially prepared foods containing iron do not always produce the desired effect, because the iron is not completely assimilated. The difficulty, it is thought, may be avoided by causing plants to take up an increased quantity of iron during their natural growth. By adding hydrate of iron to the soil in which it was growing, the experimenters have succeeded in producing spinach containing a percentage of iron seven times as great as that found in ordinary spinach. It is believed that the process will prove successful with other ferruginous plants.

The weapon is a hand cannon, designed particularly for throwing bombs, which, when they explode, will fill a building or room with suffocating gases sufficiently powerful to overcome the occupants. The cannon, which is used behind a portable shield, which completely protects the user from bullets, looks like a piece of iron pipe, and may be carried in the hands or slung over the shoulder like a rifle. It can also be used [illegible] for throwing [illegible] into the upper windows of burning buildings, forcing doors open by hurling heavy projectiles, and throwing grenades in warfare.

MIXED MARRIAGES

The perils undergone by white women who marry coloured men were emphasized by Mr. Foster Fraser, a widely known Asiatic traveller, in an interview at London.

These dangers formed the subject of a warning recently issued by the Australian Government at the request of the Colonial Secretary. This warning primarily concerned marriage with the Pathans and others of the hill tribes of the North-western Frontier of India, but Mr. Fraser extends the warning so as to include Mongols and [illegible].

"It is extraordinary," he said, "to find the number of white women who are in the harems of Persia, for example. They are mostly English and American dancing girls who have met Persians who were travelling abroad, and, fascinated by tales of life in Eastern palaces, have married them.

"When I was in Persia I came across a typical case. It was that of a girl who had been an attendant at a stall at the Crystal Palace. There she was seen by a Persian in the entourage of Nasr-ed-Din, a previous Shah, when he visited England. She married him according to Roman Catholic rites, and with her sister went to Persia with him.

"Once in his own country, however, he immediately placed her in the harem, where she found herself but one of several wives, and was forced to live a life of seclusion, cut off from her own people. She met only the Persian ladies of the royal harem, to whom, curiously enough, she used to translate Conan Doyle's detective stories, in which they were greatly interested.

"Eventually her husband died, and she desired to return to England, but many difficulties were placed in her way, and it was only by the persistent good offices of the wife of the British Minister that she was able to depart, taking with her her son on the strict promise that he returned to Persia when he was sixteen years of age. Subsequently, I believe, she married an Englishman, and now lives at Peckham.

"Marriages between Chinese, Japanese, Egyptian, Siamese, or Persian men and white women are rarely happy. The men from these nations who travel are naturally wealthy, and women who become fascinated by them forget that they will have to live in a totally different atmosphere. An intolerable longing for home comes to them, and escape is impossible."

As an example of the danger of mixed marriages to white women a legal case may be cited, in which it was held that a white woman married in England was no longer the wife of a Siamese after she had been deserted for three months, this period being sufficient for a husband to end his marriage in Siam, and the wife was bound by the laws of her husband's country.

TRACES HIS ANCESTORS SEVERAL GENERATIONS

A Canadian Seaman Relates His Experiences During an Adventurous Career

Captain W. Wilbur, a native of New Brunswick, and an owner of tug boats in Vancouver, traces his Canadian ancestry back for five or six generations.

Born in Albert county, New Brunswick, Captain Wilbur was only fourteen when he took service as a boy aboard a coasting vessel at $[illegible] a month. In the course of the years which followed, young Wilbur held every position on board ship from cook to commander. At the early age of [illegible] Captain Wilbur was given his first command, and with this vessel he voyaged to the French port Havre. During the years that followed he commanded bigger vessels and he knows all the possible English ports intimately, as well as some of the inland towns. He brought the second load of rails from Cardiff to St. Stephen, New Brunswick, for the Grand Southern Railroad.

"One experience," he said, "I had about four miles from where the Titanic sank may interest you. Just there we ran into the iceberg zone one night shortly before dark. There was a thick fog, a light wind and [illegible]. We shortened the ship down to lower topsails and foresails. I stood on the topgallant forecastle all night and the roaring of the icebergs filled the air all the time. The sea [illegible].

"We just 'jogged' on all night. I had all our boats clear and ready to take to them any moment and my wife and kids fully dressed, and with everything packed. We expected to take to the boats any moment, but we weathered the night and early next day the fog cleared. As far as the eye could reach there were icebergs everywhere, some as large as good sized islands and others higher than the ship's masts. So strong was the suction from some of the icebergs that the ship would turn right round. There was a long narrow lane of water through the ice in one direction, so we got out the boats and pulled the ship into the lane, set sail and eventually got out safely."

The child was dead when it arrived at the hospital.

Stomach Always Bloated, Had Constant Indigestion

Smell of Cooking Made Him Sick—Bilious Two Days a Week.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Chapmans' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My bad seemed to commence in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Chapmans, of Northridge, P.Q. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a nauseous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition, advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man."

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, [illegible]

CANADIANS MOST IMPRESSED BY CEMETERY AT PAARDEBURG

Mr. Donald MacMaster Says Lesson of Boer War Not Appreciated in Canada

London, Nov. 26.—Mr. Donald MacMaster, K.C., M.P., presides next week at the dinner of the Canada Club in the place of Sir Percy Girouard, who is prevented from presiding by the death of his father-in-law, Sir Richard Solomon. Asked what impressed him most as a Canadian in the round-the-Empire trip, Mr. MacMaster said to-day:

"It was Paardeburg cemetery where Canadians lie who fell in capturing General Cronje."

"Canadians hardly appreciated sufficiently the services of Canadians in the South African war. Paardeburg Day should be a national day for the Canadians.

"Canadian initiative, after courage, ultimately found a key to the situation at Paardeburg, which was the turning point of the war.

"It opened the road to Bloemfontein and Pretoria. We Canadians visited the cemetery with profound sadness recalling the inscription: 'Tell England, Ye Who Pass This Monument, That We Who Died Serving Her, Rest Here Content.'

"Well might that be a message to all Canadians from the far-off cemetery of Paardeburg."

BOARD OF WORKS IN REGULAR WEEKLY SESSION LAST NIGHT

Must Get Along for the Rest of the Year With $1153 With a Few Other Credits--Will Come Out Even

The City's Board of Works met in regular weekly session last night, Chairman Ald. Buller, presiding. Ald. Gillespie, Duncan, Anderson, Johnston, Duffus and City Engineer Parsons were also in attendance.

A bill was to [illegible] the Fire Department for 500 feet of hose for Board of Works use. The amount asked was $375; 300 feet at [illegible], and 100 feet at 25c a foot.

The Board of Works has a contrary account against the Fire Department and the latter has another account against the former for 750 feet of old hose extending over a year or two. The chairmen of the two committees were authorized to meet and adjust their accounts.

In regard to the request for a coal cellar and elevator for the new Turnbull building, beneath the sidewalk, the city engineer reported that while most big cities permitted elevator and area privileges beneath sidewalks, they regret the policy. As cities grow space beneath sidewalks is needed for conduits. In view of this, he reported against the elevator scheme, but did not object to the coal bin with a chute in the sidewalk, with a right-of-way for conduits. On motion of Ald. Johnston and Anderson, the engineer's report was adopted; the beneath the sidewalk coal cellar, with chute, will be allowed, subject to an agreement, approved of by the engineer, but not the elevator. A rental of two cents per square foot a year will be charged by the city for the space beneath the walk thus used.

The Board has $1153 to carry them over the last 30 days of this year; there are other credits to come, however.

CAVAN CASE PUTS COSTS ON DEFENSE

The High Court was continued yesterday. Mr. Justice Middleton reserved judgment in the McBain-Municipality of Cavan case. Mr. Hellmuth, K.C., of Toronto, who with Mr. E. L. Goodwill represented Mr. George McBain, stated that there was a resolution passed by the Council of Cavan to keep the course of the stream open. In regards to costs Justice Middleton stated that the defendants' absolute denial of rights to the plaintiff turned the question of costs upon the defence.

DRILL HALL AT OMEMEE OPENED

Minister of Militia, and Many Prominent Men Address Gathering

The new drill hall at Omemee was opened yesterday by the Minister of Militia, accompanied by a number of members of Parliament. The hall was jammed to suffocation and a great afternoon and evening was spent. Music was rendered by the Omemee Choral Society and by the 45th Regimental Band of Lindsay.

The Minister remarked that he had no apologies to make for building drill halls wherever possible. They are an ornament and a necessity to villages, and he found that the people wherever they were built heartily endorsed his action. He spoke at some length on banishing liquor from military training camps.

Mr. Burnham said that these village drill halls were really public halls for the benefit of the masses of the people since they were to be used for all public purposes. He thought that the rich taxpayers might very well allow the mass of the people this privilege which would be of the greatest possible benefit.

Mr. Sexsmith, Col. Ward, Major Fee and many others spoke.

Warden Bottum, of Bobcaygeon, occupied the chair.

The Colonel was presented with a bouquet of roses by a charming little Miss of three years.

CITY ACCEPTS C. P. R. OFFER

The swing in the new C.P.R. bridge will be in the centre as originally offered by the Railway. But the opening on each side of the pivot pier will be 37 feet, not 35 feet as first suggested. It looked for a time as if the new bridge would go up without any swing, as the C.P.R. would not consider any other than a centre swing, and the Government seemed to think the C.P.R.'s position satisfactory and reasonable.

In view of the 37 foot opening and the fact that the Minister of Public Works seems satisfied with the C.P.R.'s offer, so far as the Government was concerned, the city decided last night to accept the Railway's offer.

Ald. Buller's query, which created such a stir, is answered.

Mr. Burnham took the position that the city should know what it would and what it would not have, first, before asking for it.

Apparently the matter is now closed.

NO TRACE OF MISSING MAN

Hamilton's Bay Searched--Coat, Hat and Boat Seen

Hamilton, Ont., Nov. 26.—A thorough search of the bay and the north shore had failed up to noon to-day to reveal any trace of Cecil F. Lavell, Professor of the State University of Columbus, Ohio, who rented a boat from Askew's on Monday afternoon, towed across the bay to Carroll's Point and completely disappeared.

Professor Geo. R. Chowen, Registrar of Queen's University, Kingston Ontario, a brother-in-law of the missing man, and Rev. A. E. Lavell, of Brant avenue Methodist Church, Brantford, brother, spent the entire day patrolling the bay in a motor boat and making inquiries of farmers along the north shore. They found the row boat, the man's hat and coat near the point where he landed, but Lavell himself had absolutely disappeared. To-day relatives offered a reward of $200 for information about Lavell's whereabouts.

Professor Chowen said that less than two years ago, when Professor Lavell was at Columbia University, New York, he had a lapse of memory, going to Kingston where he told his mother that he intended taking a few days' rest before going to Syracuse to lecture. Three or four days later he recovered his memory and told Professor Chowen that he had no idea how he got to Kingston.

Lavell's relatives can offer no explanation of why he should have got off the train at Hamilton. He was on his way to Toronto to see his wife, who was called there on account of her mother's illness.

FORMER LOCAL MAYOR AN HONORED GUEST

The Winnipeg Telegram of Nov. 20, contains a long article headed "University Club's Honor Inaugural of New President." This article, in speaking of a former Mayor of Peterborough, says that President McWilliams of the University Clubs, and his coadjutors are to be congratulated on their choice of the evening's speakers. There are 3000 students enrolled who come from both the east and the west. A strong tribute was then paid to the virility and intelligence of the members.

HURON SLAYER IS SENTENCED

Hugh Gordon to Spend Six Years for Killing Father

Goderich, Nov. 26.—Six years in Kingston Penitentiary was the sentence passed upon Robert Gordon at the Huron County Assizes this morning for the killing of his father, Hugh Gordon, a well known farmer of the township of McKillop. On the 23rd of April last the Grand Jury brought in a true bill for murder, but by agreement between the Crown Prosecutor, Mr. Dudley Holmes, K.C., of Wingham and counsel for the prisoner, the indictment was changed to manslaughter and the prisoner pleaded guilty.

Mr. W. Proudfoot, K.C., on behalf of the prisoner, related the facts and circumstances of the unfortunate affair, and pleaded for a lenient judgment, especially as the health of the prisoner is not robust. Judge Britton then passed sentence.

Robert Gordon and his father, Hugh Gordon, had been plowing on their farm on the day of the tragedy and on driving his team into the barn the younger Gordon struck one of the horses with a strap. This angered the father, who rushed at the son and the latter picked up an iron bar and dealt his father a fatal blow on the head. An aunt and two sisters of the young man are left on the farm without a male relative. Relations between the father and son had been quite amicable, and the family is highly respected.

EIGHTY FEDERAL OFFICERS SHOT ON THE BATTLEFIELD

Gen. Villa Has Been Executing His Enemies' Leaders by the Wholesale

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 26.—That the entire Federal force which opposed his army along a 20-mile battle front 15 miles south of Juarez, is now in a disorderly retreat was the claim made by Gen. Pancho Villa in a despatch sent early to-day to Col. Juan Medina, jefe d'armas at Juarez. He asserts that the victory of the rebels has been complete and that they captured several hundred prisoners.

Wounded officers brought to Juarez from the front confirm reports received late yesterday that Villa has been executing Federal prisoners of war by the wholesale. Some of them say that 80 Federal officers were ordered shot on the battlefield and that the orders were summarily carried out. It is not known whether this number is exaggerated.

According to Villa the rebels have taken three of the seven trains which brought the Federals to the battlefield, and all of their cannon and light field pieces have fallen into Constitutionalist hands.

A MOTOR CHEMICAL AND HOSE WAGGON

WANTED FOR THE FIRE DEPARTMENT NEXT YEAR.

Would Cost About $[illegible]—A By-law to Authorize This Expenditure Will be Submitted in January.

The City's Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night, Chairman Ald. Geo. A. Gillespie presiding. There were also present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Buller and Duffus, and Fire Chief Howard.

G. H. Bowman, city, applied for the position of wiring inspector; salary $600 a year.

A citizen wrote asking for lights on Romaine street, west to boundary—No action taken.

Committee discussed additional fire protection, either by a substation in South City or a motor combination chemical and hose rig. Committee were unanimously in favor of the latter scheme, and a by-law will be submitted at the January elections to authorize the purchase of a motor chemical and hose rig at a cost of $7,500.

On advice of Chief Howard, the chairman notified that there are some 750 feet of fire hose taken over by the Board of Works in the past for which the Chief has no acknowledgment. This matter said Ald. Gillespie should be cleared up in protection of the Chief. Ald. Buller replied that his Board [illegible] the debt and will [illegible] for and [illegible] of the [illegible].

COUNCIL ACCEPTS C.P.R'S PLAN FOR 37 FOOT SWING IN BRIDGE

Decisive Telegrams Sent to Both the Minister of Public Works and Mr. Wanklyn--This Necessity May Now be Looked on as Assured

The City Council met in special session last night, Mayor Bradburn presiding. There were also present Aldermen Gillespie, Anderson, Duncan, Buller, Green, Gordon, Johnston and Duffus.

Messrs. Wm. Langford, sr., ex-Mayor Morrow and Fred Might were a deputation asking permission to have excavated a coal cellar for the new Turnbull building, under the Simcoe street sidewalk, west end of building. An elevator for taking in goods, to rise even with the sidewalk was also embodied in the request.

On motion of Ald. Gordon, the matter was left in the hands of the chairman of the Board of Works, the parties interested to sign an agreement drawn up by the Solicitor on advice of the engineer.

The Swing Bridge.

Regarding this vexed question, his worship submitted the following telegram in reply to his of Tuesday night:

"W. H. Bradburn,
Mayor, Peterboro.

"Telegram received. C.P.R. willing to provide serviceable swing in centre span Otonabee River bridge, giving about 37 feet clear openway both sides pivot pier.

"F. L. WANKLYN."

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., wrote Council in this connection as follows:

"Gentlemen,—I had the pleasure of meeting your committee this morning with regard to the C.P.R. bridge. A telegram having come from the C.P.R. to the Mayor this morning, agreeing to put in a 37 foot swing opening in centre span has proved, I understand, acceptable to your committee. So far as the Government is concerned, we all must assume that what is to be done meets with their approval with regard to their own rights and privileges as guardians of the public interest.

"I am glad to find that your committee is content with the assumption that what suits the Government will do well enough for the city also."

The foregoing letter and telegram proved acceptable to the Council, and two telegrams were despatched as follows: One to the Minister of Public Works, stating that the C.P.R.'s proposition for a 37 foot swing opening is acceptable to the city, always assuming that the Government is content that such will serve the interests of navigation; another to Mr. Wanklyn, informing him of the city's acceptance of the C.P.R.'s proposition, the latter assuming that a 37 foot opening in the centre span has Government's endorsation.

NEW BRITISH DREADNOUGHT, WARSPITE, LAUNCHED TO-DAY

She Will Cost $14,000,000 When Complete--Carries Enough Oil to Drive Her Around the World

Devonport, Eng., Nov. 26.—The British super-Dreadnought battleship Warspite, an improvement on the Queen Elizabeth was launched here to-day in the presence of an enormous crowd. She is to be driven entirely by oil engines, and has receptacles for the storage of 4,000 tons of liquid fuel, sufficient to enable her to go around the world.

The armament of the Warspite will consist of eight 15-inch guns and several anti-airship guns. She was laid down on Oct. 31, 1912, and her estimated cost when completed is $14,000,000.

The London Globe claims authority for stating that the "all-big gun" era will come to an end with the completion of the group of vessels to which the Warspite belongs. It says the ships of the Royal Sovereign type, about to be laid down, will be of new design, and smaller than that of the battleships now under construction, and adds that the British Admiralty's decision in this connection was due to the lessons learned during the recent naval manoeuvres on the east coast of Great Britain, when the submarines demonstrated their ability to take such offensive action as to render battleships almost impotent.

UNITED STATES THANKS OTTAWA FOR STORM AID

Ottawa, Nov. 26.—Hon. J. D. Hazen has received a message of warm commendation for the prompt action which the Government took in the Great Lakes disaster from the Chairman of the Lake Carriers' Association.

The letter reads as follows:

As chairman of the committee of the Lake Carriers' Association from the States engaged in the recovery and identification of the bodies of the sailors lost in the great storm of November 9th, and which we feel is an international calamity, and we wish personally to express our thanks to you for the hearty co-operation which the Government and all its representatives have given us.

(Signed) E. O. Whitney,
Chairman Lake Carriers' Association

MURRAY ST. BAPTISTS AND MISSION MOVEMENT

Two hundred and fifty members of the church and congregation sat down to a banquet in the hall below the Sunday school last evening.

Rev. J. R. Webb introduced the guests of the evening, Mr. W. G. [illegible], of Toronto, organizer of Laymen's Missionary work for Canadian Baptists. Mr. [illegible] spoke of the five benefits of the Laymen's Missionary work:

(a)—It gave an awakening to a sense of Missionary obligation.

(b)—It meant enlistment in Missionary service.

(c)—Also it meant the injection of up-to-date methods, that is of the duplex envelope.

(d)—It [illegible] fact.

(e)—"It is you we are getting after."

Many of those present asked questions as to the details of the every-member canvass. Mr. Matthews and Dr. Scott moved a resolution asking the officers of the church to arrange for the every member canvass and pledging the co-operation of those present. A standing vote was taken.

A REAL PITCHER

Walsh a Tower of Strength, Hard Worked and Reliable

To Walsh belongs the title, "Ready Rescuer." No pitcher can honestly dispute his right to the honor. Ever since Walsh became valuable to the Chicago club, which, by the way, was in 1906, he was the salvation of the Sox. Managers Jones, Sullivan, Duffy and Callahan always called upon him in a pinch. Sullivan used him to less advantage than the others. A friend commented upon this one day during his reign as manager and his answer was truly Sullivanesque.

"I have caught Walsh in so many games that I realize the terrific strain it is to work as he is worked. I realize that the over-working of the spit ball has killed off many pitchers and I simply can't reconcile myself to calling on Ed. to suit the occasion."

ED. WALSH

In a way Sullivan sacrificed his career as manager to save his star pitcher. Being a catcher, he realized what Walsh was doing.

Honors fall to Walsh. Pitching before big Sunday crowds is always his lot. Rescuing faltering pitchers is his first duty. Doing the heavy work in all big series he dotes on.

More young pitchers are tried out against Walsh than against any other man in baseball. When he is right, managers know it is a task to beat him. Often the opposing leader starts a youngster against Walsh, admitting the chances of victory are slight.

"I've been beaten by almost every bush pitcher in the business," Walsh once said. "They start some phenom against me and he always works like a star, although he may never pitch another good game. These phenoms have been my Jonah."

To abolish the risk of infection through the use of a common cup for drinking purposes, a new system has been introduced at the new elementary schools of the Croydon Corporation at Norbury. A button is pressed and a small jet of water rises, to which the mouth is applied direct.

Arming Our Liners

The precedent set by the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company in placing two guns upon their vessel, the Aragon, will be followed in the case of other ships ordered from Messrs. Harland and Wolff. It is probable that on one or two new vessels provision will be made for mounting four guns, instead of two.

WITCH'S LOVE CHARM

Four women were condemned to six months' imprisonment each at Lucera, Italy, for bodysnatching and witchcraft.

It appears that Signora Antonia [illegible], living at Lucera, was determined that a railway signalman should marry her only daughter, and decided that the best way to bring this about would be to bewitch him. For this purpose she paid a couple of women to steal a corpse from a neighboring cemetery. This they then consigned to [illegible], who enjoys a great reputation in the locality as a witch. Mr. Du Maurier Finds the Only Novel Movement in Ragtime

Mr. Gerald Du Maurier had some amusing things to say of the stage at the annual dinner of the Playgoers' Club, held at the Hotel Cecil. After all, he went on to say, it was the playgoer who created the fashions in drama. If the state of the playgoer were healthy, then surely must the drama be healthy too. He was continually hearing and reading of the new movement in drama, but, personally, he had been unable to detect it unless it were ragtime. But that was not new. It was merely a good melody marred, or a poor one galvanized into life. The one-step was supposed to be a new movement in dancing, and the success of it was that it need not be learned. Anybody could do it; in fact, it was the first thing a baby did when it could walk by itself. All those new dances, such as the Bunny-hug and the Turkey-trot, were only forms of the oldest dance in the world—St. Vitus dance. As regarded the drama—the successful drama, that was to say—he could not see that it had changed much since the days of Shakespeare. A good deal of fuss was made nowadays about producing, but it was very difficult to spoil a good play or make a bad one. If a stone were good, what matter the setting. The greatest service the producer could do the author was to let the play play itself—that was to say, if the author knew his job. As a manager he believed in the play that was commercially successful.

A PERSIAN MIHRAB.

Stored almost tile by tile from the Mosque of the Market Place at Kashan, the greater part of a Persian Mihrab, to which every Mohammedan worshipper makes obeisance, has found a resting place in London.

Rectangular in shape, measuring 9 feet 4 inches by 6 feet, the antique consists principally of silver and gold lustre tiles for which the Persians were famous, and was built into the wall of the mosque, pointing directly towards Mecca.

The bulk of the Mihrab is in the hands of Mr. John Richard Preece, who was formerly Consul-General at Ispahan.

Mr. R. W. Ftainton, who was associated with Mr. Preece in forming his collection, says that in 1879 this Mihrab was intact, but on inspecting it again a piece had disappeared. Portions continued to disappear mysteriously despite the presence of guards, until it was nearly all gone. Probably the watchmen were in league with the robbers. One special guard was killed mysteriously at his post, and three others were drugged.

"In the early eighties a servant in the Government employ offered Mr. Preece a beautiful tile, but refused to divulge the source from which it was obtained and how. Through a period of nearly twenty years similar relics were brought to him and purchased. Then one day, being in the mosque at Kashan, he discovered that his pieces had been picked from the wall, and the Mihrab so depleted that the authorities were induced to sell the remnants to him."

There are parts missing, and the collectors holding them refuse to sell, so rare and beautiful is the work. The Mihrab comprises over ninety pieces, and the value placed upon it is from $75,000 to $100,000. The design is of a door within a door, and inscriptions in blue from the Koran are in three languages—Kufic, Karmati, and Naskhy. It was executed in the thirteenth century by one Hassan, and the art is not practised now amongst the Persians.

PRESERVING FENCE POSTS

Creosote Pays For Itself in Lengthening Life of Wood

Wood-rot, in all its forms, is due to the action of fungi working under suitable air and moisture conditions. In fence posts these conditions are most favorable at or near the surface of the ground and hence it is there that decay first starts. Some woods, like cedar and tamarack, are more resistant to fungus attack and may last, as fence posts, from eight to ten years. Unfortunately, however, the supply of these woods has grown very scarce, and one is faced with the alternative of importing durable material at a high price or of applying preservatives to the common non-durable woods which grow in the wood lot. The latter alternative is not only cheaper, but also much more effective.

Creosote, a "dead" oil of coal tar, is perhaps the best preservative for this purpose, as it does not dissolve out of the treated wood, when in contact with moist earth. It costs from eight to fifteen cents per gallon.

There are two methods of applying the creosote, but before either method can be applied it is necessary to have the posts well seasoned if the best results are desired. This seasoning is best accomplished by peeling the bark from the posts and then stacking them in loose piles in the open air for several months.

Then they can be given two coats of creosote with a brush or dipped to a point six inches above the ground line. In either case the creosote should be heated to the boiling point.

The annual statement of the Krupp armament and steel interests in Germany is an interesting document. The concern employs 800,000 men and last year earned a profit of $9,000,000 which indicates a profit of $11.25 per year on the services of each employe. The capitalization of the concern is in the neighborhood of $63,000,000 and the dividend this year is on a fourteen per cent basis.

Any Headache Cured, Tired Systems Re-Toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong With the Stomach.

A Prominent Publishing Man Says The Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callender, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as a tonic to the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headache, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease. all druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE LAW SHPULD BE CHANGED.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier in 1911 ran for two seats. One was Quebec East, which he has represented for a generation, and the other Soulanges. He was elected for both. It was well known that he never intended to represent Soulanges; his candidature there was a mere stop-gap in view of party dissensions.

By a peculiarity in the election law a member elected for a constituency cannot resign his seat while there is a protest against his return. The Liberals were apparently afraid to open Soulanges and a formal protest was lodged by their own party.

This protest has never been pressed, and was never intended to be pressed. But as the Liberals were afraid to open the riding for fear of defeat, it has given them an opportunity to hang on to the seat. For two years Sir Wilfrid himself has been improperly holding on to the two seats. This certainly reflects no credit on either Sir Wilfrid or his followers.

BUSINESS MANAGERS FOR MUNICIPALITIES

The letter which appears elsewhere in this issue regarding the proposition to permit municipalities to have business managers, is certainly novel, although not entirely new. The Newark, N.J., News says that the subject was brought up last winter by Assemblyman Porter, of Cape May, and it has met with success in places where it has been tried with benefit in every instance. At the beginning of the coming year Dayton, O., will put into force a new charter under which it will have a commission-manager government. The manager will take the place of a horde of officials and can undoubtedly save thousands of dollars every year. The system is an adaptation of one in Germany, where Mayors are appointed for their business ability, in the same manner as managers of corporations are chosen by directors. We fear the change might be too radical for our Canadian cities just at the present stage. That some change of the kind will no doubt be tried in this country, we have no doubt. In the meantime we will be only too pleased to hear from any of our readers Rho may have studied the subject.

PUPLIC OPINION

A FISH HATCHERY

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—For the life of me I do not see why our members whose ridings are contiguous to the Trent Canal, do not get busy and secure a fish hatchery for the propagation of bass and maskinonge in the lakes and rivers connected with the waterway.

Talk about reducing the high cost of living. If a good hatchery was in operation here it would increase the supply of fish so much that the prices of meat would have to be lowered. The Trent waters are the natural home of bass and maskinonge, and everybody knows, who has studied the habits of these fish, that a female will deliver as many as a thousand spawn every year. All we need to do is to protect these spawn in well equipped hatcheries before turning them loose. This usually requires from 3 to 6 months, when the young fry are able to take care of themselves.

I hope Mr. Burnham, M.P., who is always alive to anything and everything that is for the benefit of the people, will take this matter up, and I am sure he will be doing a grand thing for the people not only of his own constituency, but the whole district.

With thanks, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space, I am, etc.,

Izaak Walton.

CORPORATION BUSINESS MANAGER.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I notice in some cities in the United States, they have a business manager, who has charge of all expenditures, etc. It is full time that something of the kind was instituted in Canada and particularly in Peterborough.

A business manager would be expected to manage the municipality as a business concern. To make it effective all public servants would be subject to his orders and to his discipline, just as a manager of a joint stock company would exercise his authority for the purpose of securing dividends. The dividends in the case of a city like Peterborough would be in reducing the tax rate and giving us better roads, better street watering service, and better everything. Every official would then have to earn his salary.

I hope The Times will take this matter up, as it is one that I think might be discussed with very great profit. I hope some of your readers will air their minds on the subject.

CLERKS BESTED ROBBERS

Vancouver, B.C. Nov. 26.—A determined attempt to rob the Bank of British North America was made at Agassiz, seventy miles from Vancouver, and it was only through the pluck of the bank officials who discovered one of the robbers that the latter were foiled.

Two men entered the bank carrying rifles. As a preliminary they shot holes through the window, and then forced the door. One bank clerk welcomed, and in response to "hands up," grappled with the leader. The other robber fled and his companion followed after breaking away from the clerk's embrace. No money was taken.

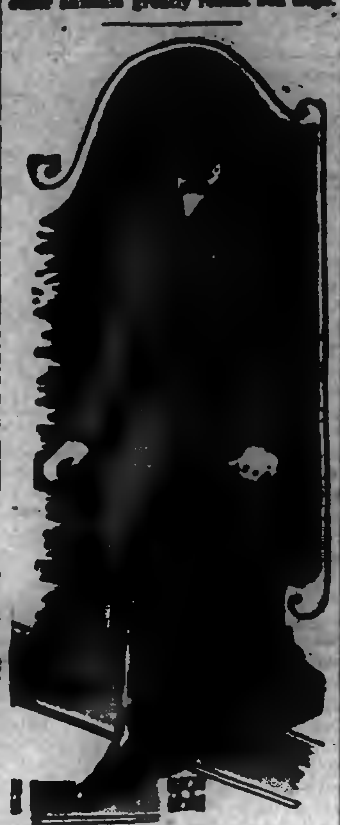
SEASICK ANIMALS

Probably many people have not witnessed the performance of animals when on a sea journey. Most animals make poor sailors. Horses and tigers suffer most of all; they whine pitifully, and their eyes water continually. Elephants, too, suffer greatly, but they are very amenable to medical attention. When the elephant falls seasick, a bucket of fresh water, containing seven ounces of quinine and three and a half pints of whisky, is supplied.

Birds, however, delight in sea voyages. The Polar bear, too, enjoys a sea journey; he is described as very gay while on board ship. But most other animals greatly resent sea trips.



Type of riding habit which has been proscribed by Queen Mary. Her Majesty objects to ladies riding astride even when wearing a divided skirt.

CENTENARIANS' SOCIETY

Old People of Japan Members of Curious Club

A curious society was formed by Count Okuma, the Japanese ex-Premier. It is called the "Hyakusai-Kai," or the Society of Centenarians. Count Okuma, who believes that under proper conditions we ought to be able to live for 125 years, is its first President. Persons of 80 years and over are eligible for membership. About 500 members met at its first assembly at the Count's house. The oldest person present was a woman of 112, who traveled a long distance to Tokio to meet her fellow centenarians.

Some of the aged members drove in carriages and jinrickshas, but many walked. They were all intensely interested in each other, and compared notes as to teeth, deafness and use of spectacles. Count Okuma delivered an address. It was observed, however, that most of the audience failed to catch his words, and, giving up making ear trumpets of their hands, fell into a pleasant drowsiness, lulled by sunshine and the voice of the speaker. The meeting was voted a great success, and they all look forward to many repetitions of it.

WRECKED ON DESERT ISLE

Sailors Lived For Six Months on Ice-Clad Rock

News reached North Shields of the safety of twenty of the crew of the sealing schooner, Sea Bird, belonging to that town. The vessel was wrecked and for six months the crew had to exist on a desert island which is frequently covered with ice and snow.

The Sea Bird struck a sunken rock in the neighborhood of Prince Edward Island, in the Southern Ocean, and speedily sank. The three boats were launched and provisioned before she went down, and for the next six months the crew, who numbered twenty-two, were marooned on a desert island.

Their sufferings were terrible, but they made a shelter of a marquee and a cave in a mountain-side. There was no wood on the island, but sea elephants were shot, and their blubber burned. The men's food consisted chiefly of penguins, albatross and seals. Two of the men died from the severe exposure, but the other twenty were rescued by a whaler and landed at Capetown.

EVER OF THEE.

Ever of thee I'm fondly dreaming,
Thy gentle voice my spirit can cheer;
Thou art the star that, mildly beaming,
Shone o'er my path when all was dark and drear;
Still in my heart thy form I cherish,
Every kind thought like a bird flies to thee.
Ah! Never till life and memory perish,
Can I forget how dear thou art to me.

Morn, noon and night, where'er I may be
Fondly I'm dreaming ever of thee;
Fondly I'm dreaming ever of thee.

Ever of thee, when sad and lonely,
Wand'ring afar my soul joyed to dwell;
Ah! then I felt I loved thee only,
All seemed to fade before affection's spell;
Years have not chilled the love I cherish,
True as the stars hath my heart been to thee.
Ah! Never till life and memory perish,
Can I forget how dear thou art to me.

THE ABERDEEN CLIPPERS ARE FAMOUS CLASS OF SHIPS

Famous Boats With Trim Lines are Now Only a Memory

A famous class of sailing ships, the clippers, is recalled by the passing away, in somewhat dramatic fashion, of one of the most famous of them, the Thermopylæ, formerly of the Aberdeen Line. She made many brilliant performances as a fast sailer, taking a leading part in the races from China with the new season's teas that used to be the great sporting event of the maritime world. But with the suppression of sailing vessels by steamships the clippers were completely effaced, and for several years past the Thermopylæ did humble duty as a training ship at the mouth of the Tagus. She became too old, as well as too small, for even this service, and so was discarded. The Portuguese Government, however, did not like to sell a vessel with her reputation, and decided to give her a "naval funeral." She was accordingly towed out to sea and sunk by two Portuguese men-of-war.

The clipper has been characterized as the highest development of the wooden sailing ship in construction, speed, and beauty. However much or little there may be in the suggestion that the name is derived from an old meaning of the word "clip," to run or fly swiftly, a clipper was at any rate a ship built expressly for speed, though latterly it was so constructed as to combine the greatest carrying capacity with the form best adapted for speed. Speaking generally, and avoiding technical terms, the clipper was longer and narrower than the ordinary sailing ship, was very sharp at the bows, and was gracefully fined away towards the stern.

The first Aberdeen clipper was built for an association of traders to compete with the paddle steamers to London. The firm of Alexander Hall & Sons constructed for these merchants a schooner of 140 tons, experimenting in the substitution of a sharp cutwater bow for the broad, bluff bow that was then common. This was in 1839, and the vessel—the first of its kind in Great Britain—was called the Scottish Maid. The experiment was successful, although the time it made on the trip to London—49 hours—seems ludicrous now. Other three schooners were built on the same model, and the "Aberdeen clipper bow" became celebrated.

While Aberdeen took the lead it soon ceased to have a monopoly of clipper-building. The Lord of the Isles, built on the Clyde, was a very noted clipper in her day, and other prominent Clyde clippers were the Sir Launcelot, the Taeping, the Taitsing, the Ariel, and the Serica, the last four taking part with the Fiery Cross of Liverpool in a remarkable ocean race in 1866. This was the last of the races at which premiums for first arrival were awarded, and with the opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 and the development of steam shipping the halcyon days of the clippers came to an end. The clippers by that time, however, had thoroughly accomplished the purpose for which they were designed, and had rescued the China freight trade from American dominance.

The Aberdeen clippers were remarkably immune from disaster, but one of the largest and very best built, the Schomberg, 2,000 tons, launched in 1855, was lost on her first voyage, being wrecked on the rocks at Cape Otway, 150 miles west of Melbourne.

THE DRAKE STONE

In a sheltered spot, outside the churchyard gates, in the village of Anwick, Lincolnshire, is a huge stone, oval in shape, known locally as the "Drake" stone, and an object of particular interest to the villagers on account of a legend attaching to it.

The stone, originally in an open field, was for time out of mind an object of great superstition; it was said to mark the site of a vast hoard of riches, and that it was guarded over by the devil who had a cave under it. Several attempts were made to secure the treasure, but every one was a failure. Then one, more courageous than the others, yoked a team of horses to the stone, but the chains snapped asunder, the devil appeared in the form of a drake and flew off in a cloud of smoke. The stone then became the haunt of imps, and was avoided by all who knew anything of its history.

One dark night the stone disappeared and daylight revealed a pool of water, which added to the superstition, but on investigation it was found that the constant digging for the hidden riches resulted in its sinking down so that it was lost to view. Eventually the stone was recovered and was removed to its present position almost under the shadow of the church.

PROBLEM OF TWINS

How Sarah Was Asked to Sing Elizabeth's Song, and Both Wept

How to distinguish between six pairs of twins, each pair being exactly the same in appearance, is a daily problem for the teachers of a children's school at Woodend, near Shipley, Yorkshire.

Five of the pairs are girls, and none of the twins are more than eight years of age. According to the usual plan of mothers the twin sisters are dressed similarly, with the result that confusion is frequent at school. For instance, there was a school concert, and each of one pair of twins, Sarah and Elizabeth Mounsey, had learned a little song for the occasion.

When the time came the sisters had changed places and the teacher asked Sarah to stand up and sing Elizabeth's song, at which the real little Elizabeth, thinking she was going to be robbed of her privilege, began to weep, and Sarah wept in unison.

It is a curious phenomenon with regard to the twins at the school that when one gives way to tears the other follows suit. One method of identification used is to allot each one a certain place, but sometimes the mites get into the wrong places, and this plan fails.

Even the mothers often find difficulty in distinguishing their own children, but the mother of Annie and Doris Denby hit upon the idea of ornamenting Annie with a necklace of blue beads and her sister with one of white beads.

UNKNOWN KING

Modest Parisian Rules Over Three Million People in Arabia

It sounds strange to talk of an unknown but mighty King, to speak of a monarch who is wealthy and owns huge possessions, but whose position is not recognized.

Such a man is Alfred I., King of Syria and Arabia, who still is a citizen of France. The fact that he is a King might have remained unknown even in Paris, where he lives in the crowded artists' quarter of Montmartre, had he not had a dispute with one of his neighbors over some monkeys to which both laid claim.

When the case was brought into court it was discovered that "Monsieur le Vicomte Alfred, German de Breuil," by the election by the twelve emirs of Arabia and Syria, ruled a territory six times the size of France. In Paris King Alfred I. lives high up in one of the modest apartment houses crowded with artists and artisans. His favorite pastime is driving in the parks and boulevards and visiting the open-air theatres and restaurants. He dresses in faultless taste, and makes it a point to follow the styles in men's dress.

He is a stocky man, not much more than five feet eight inches tall, but he looks much taller because he stands erect and is well proportioned. Despite his sixty years, his friends have designated him the "young cavalry officer."

Though he has the right to be called King of Syria and Arabia, he is indifferent about his title. His kingdom is bounded on the north by the Ottoman Empire, on the east by the Gulf of Persia and the Indian Ocean, on the west by the Red Sea and a strip of land belonging to Turkey, while the Indian Ocean and British Somaliland are its southern boundaries. King Alfred explains that he was given his position and title because these people could not find among them a man who was able to rule all of them without rivalry and jealousy. He rules over three million men and women, who call themselves Nazarenes or primitive Christians, men who follow the doctrines of Christ as they were understood and accepted 2,000 years ago.

That he is an able ruler is proved by the fact that when he was made King he induced a French company to build a railroad which runs from Port Said to Lawa, on the Gulf of Oman. It is not known how rich a man this strange and unknown ruler really is, but certainly he is worth many millions. For there are few riches that are not found in Arabia. His treasures include gold, silver, turquoise, pearls, horses, camels, sheep, goats, fruits, wheat, and zinc. Besides these possessions he is given a large salary every year, which is paid in the wealth of the country, 600,000 sheep.

KAISER'S PHRASES

Words That Have Now Become Household Expressions

Few monarchs of our time have made so many public speeches, says a German paper, as the Kaiser. His diction is vigorous and picturesque and during the twenty-five years of his reign he has enriched the language with a stock of household words and expressions of a remarkably clear stamp.

The first household word or phrase of which he is sole author was uttered in 1890, two years after his accession, when Bismarck had been dismissed. At that time he telegraphed to his friend, Count [illegible], at Weimar: "We are steering the old course." Since that time "the old course" has always been used to denote Bismarck's policy, and "the new course" the Kaiser's.

On Jan. 7, 1891, the Kaiser sent his portrait to the Secretary of the Imperial Post Office, Dr. Stephan, on his sixtieth birthday, with the inscription, in his own handwriting: "The world, at the end of the nineteenth century, marches under the banner of commerce. It breaks through the barriers that separate the nations, and binds them together in new relations." That message succeeded in introducing the expression, "Under the banner of commerce" into everyday talk as symptomatic of our age.

The phrase, "Blood is thicker than water," he has used several times—notably, with reference to our blood relationship with our cousins the other side of the canal, but the stock quotation was already common in English and Scandinavian literature at the beginning of the last century.

The loudest echoes of all were awakened by the Kaiser when, on Sept. 23, 1898, at the opening of the new harbor at Stettin, he cried, "Our future lies on the water."

SANITARY ASH SIFTER

[illegible] Claims That It Will Not Fill Air With Dust

Anyone who has ever sifted ashes knows what a dusty job it is under ordinary conditions. The dust flies [illegible] the air and gets into the hair as well as the lungs. A Chicago man has devised an ash sifter which he declares has none of these objectionable features. The sifter sits on top of the ash can and consists of a hopper and a hood, with a [illegible] [illegible] out of the opposite end of the hood from the hopper. The sifter is placed on top of the can, [illegible] it fits closely, and the scuttle of ashes is dumped into the hopper, [illegible] of which is quickly closed. [illegible] turning a crank at the side the ashes are thoroughly sifted, the worthless particles dropping into the can and the coal being carried out through the chute into the scuttle, which is [illegible] up in waiting.

EFFECT OF FEAR

The Response of the Body When a Emergency Arises

In a paper on the subject of fear and its effect upon the human body prepared by Dr G. W. Chile, a London physician, it is explained that under the influence of fear the organs of the body are divided sharply into two classes—those that are stimulated, and those whose work ceases temporarily.

Under the first classification come nerve systems, which cause movement—the mechanism for raising the hair, the respiration, the sweat glands and, it is found, the thyroid gland and the adrenal gland.

On the other hand, the entire digestive functions are paralysed. So far as we know, the organs stimulated increase the efficiency of the animal either to fight or flight. The increased action of the muscles of the heart increases the efficiency of the circulation; the secretion of the adrenal gland causes a rise in the blood pressure; the increased activity of the thyroid gland causes an increased activity of the tissues, and the production of glycogen is a symptom that the body is preparing fresh supplies of energy. Increased respiration is necessary to co-ordinate the supply of oxygen with this manufacture; even the sweat glands and dilated nostrils are playing their part. The digestive organs cannot help, they can only hinder; so the body does the best it can by shutting off the nervous current to them and saving the vital force which they would consume.

Thus, because fear first rose from injury, its phenomena are due to a stimulation of all the organs that add to efficiency in self-preservation, and a stoppage of those which are noncombatants. Fear takes many forms in civilized society, but nature has only one means of expressing it physically, and that does not alter.

FAITH IN THE NORTH

Peace River Man Looks for a Gold Rush Some Day

Big and bronzed, Sheridan Lawrence of Peace River, unfolded some interesting tales of the northland while on a visit to Winnipeg. For instance, he discovered to the world another Dr. Grenfell, another Dr. Lake of Labrador, in the person of a fine old man named Baldwin, who ministers to the people in the settlement and the Indians, who [illegible] what they can give in return, perhaps a load of wood or the carcass of an elk, but more often his services are free.

That there will some day be a gold rush to the Peace River is the prophecy of the northerner. In the sand bars of all the rivers there is gold, he said, but so far it could not be panned in paying quantities.

It is 600 miles by water from Edmonton to Fort Vermilion and measured by the map the distance between the two points as the crow flies is almost as great as between Moose Jaw and Winnipeg, but here is the word of this man, who has lived at the northern point for over a quarter of a century, that grain planted later matures at the same time as the cereals of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The summer days are longer in the north, with more sunlight, hence the result.

"The conditions in the country are practically the same as when I entered it 30 years ago," said Mr. Lawrence. "Fur trading is the chief occupation. Good prices are paid and there is no [illegible] among the Indians. Independent traders have corrupted the morals of the Indian to a certain extent and they are not accorded the same credit as in the early days when they dealt exclusively with the Hudson's Bay, but the Indians are being taught some bitter lessons and they are improving. So far as I can see the Indians are decreasing somewhat in numbers."

In answer to a question as to how he came to go away up into that country where the mail comes in two times a year, passing all the fertile lands of the west, Mr. Lawrence said that in the early days his uncle, E. J. Lawrence, was located at Fort Vermilion as a church missionary. This uncle induced his father to leave Frontenac county, Ontario, and go up there as farm instructor. They went via Calgary 36 years ago, travelling all the way in carts across an unbroken prairie to the Athabasca River.

A Stalwart Monarch

The new King of Greece is one of the tallest of monarchs, but those who ascribe his inches solely to his [illegible] blood on his mother's side forget his stalwart Danish ancestry. His grandfather, King Christian IX., was remarkable for his height, as are nearly all the Princes of his house. King Constantine's cousin, the present King of Denmark, has carried on the tradition, as he stands well over six feet without his boots.

A COOL PROPOSITION.

"Will some millionaire kindly give me a million pounds for two years, and in return I will write a diary of all I do with it?"

Shorn of all verbiage, that is practically the request of an advertiser in the London "Times." It is four years since he first published his petition to be made a millionaire, and as no lunatic came forward with the money he repeated his announcement. Heading it, "Notice to Millionaires," the advertiser says: "It has constantly been stated in the press that many millionaires have expressed views to the effect that their great wealth is a burden to them; that wealth does not bring happiness; and that, in short, they would rather be without it.

"The advertiser, a gentleman whose occupation has precluded him from 'making money,' but who would know how to direct its use sensibly and unostentatiously in a manner befitting the responsibilities of wealth, and who at the same time would derive pleasure and benefit from the handling of large sums, invites some disgusted millionaire to present him with one million sterling in order that the fallacy of 'the burden of wealth' may be proved.

"The advertiser undertakes to keep a daily Diary of his "investments, disbursements, thoughts and doings as a millionaire," the Diary to be produced at the end of two years before a selected Committee of Business Men for their opinions as to the success or otherwise of the venture.

"The advertiser must in the meanwhile have the sole and unhampered control of the money.

"It is against human nature to expect any genuine reply to this notice, but should anyone care to seriously consider it, the advertiser will communicate with principals only, whose letters will be regarded as confidential."

He promises to return the original capital at the end of the two years.

Rather a Self-opinionated Young Lady is King's Daughter

Princess Mary is said to be the most determined lady in the royal household. Her Royal Highness is fast growing up, and she is forming her own circle of friends and her own manner of life.

The one point of dispute between her and the Queen is her hair. Princess Mary dislikes to have it falling about. The Queen will not allow it up, but a compromise was reached. Princess Mary usually ties it back in a small thick plait doubled up at the neck with a ribbon.

The King is amused at his daughter's strong will, which seems likely to overrule even that of the Queen's.

Among her girl friends are Lady Rachel Capell, the elder daughter of the Countess of Essex; both of Lord [illegible] of Kedleston's daughters, and Mrs. George Keppel's second daughter.

A very special friend of the Princess is Lady Rachel Capell, of whom both Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra are very fond.

TANNING BY ELECTRICITY

Better Leather Is Produced In Much Shorter Time

A new electric tanning process, invented by the Swedish scientist, Dr. A. Groth, and applied on a practical scale in an English works, is attracting much attention, and one of the prominent electrical firms is to take it up for commercial use. With this method, the hides are put in special vats along with metal conductors, so as to carry out an electrolytic action, and this will tan the hides in much less time than usual, for instance, six weeks as compared to several months. Leather of better quality is produced in this way, and the method gives a [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible]. Various electrical devices in the shape of regulators, also safety appliances for overcurrent, make the process almost an automatic one.

Singe Frayed Linen

Instead of cutting the frayed edges of cuffs and collars, as many people are accustomed to do, take a lighted taper and just singe the frayed parts. It will be seen that the linen will last much longer. Cutting the edges has a tendency to loosen the parts, and singeing just takes the frayed edges off without injury.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR HIM, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE. TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first analysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. At the second month of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the analysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition is indeed very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, [illegible] largely in [illegible] high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I was well advised to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

MOST FAMOUS STREET

Identified With Financial Matters For Centuries

Someone has said that in the history of Lombard Street lies the history of London. This to a great extent is true. For centuries past Lombard Street has been practically the hub of the money market of London, and where the money is there one usually finds the people who make history.

The name Lombard is derived from Longobards or Lombards, who, about the thirteenth century, supplanted the Jews, who from the Norman conquest were the great moneylenders. The sign of the three golden balls was first used by the Lombards, the forerunners of the modern "uncle." It was the emblem of St. Nicholas, the patron saint of citizens, merchants and mariners.

It was with the Lombards that Edward III. and Henry V. literally pledged their crowns and jewels to obtain funds for the wars which culminated in Crecy and Agincourt. They were, moreover, the accredited financial agents to the Papacy, collecting and remitting to Italy the moneys due in respect of English benefices held by foreigners and of other ecclesiastical claims.

To them we owe a good part of our financial vocabulary—such words as "debtor," "creditor," "bankrupt," "cash," "journal," "ledger," and "diary." They also introduced the use of the letters "£ s. d."—lire, soldi and denari.

Among the famous goldsmiths who lived in Lombard Street were Sir Thomas Gresham, who built the first Royal Exchange and gave it to the City of London in [illegible], and also endowed Gresham College; Sir Robert Vyner, who made Charles II.'s crown at a cost of $105,000; and Edward Blackwell, who was chief financier to Charles II., to most of the nobility, and to the East India Company.

Among other curious facts, it might be mentioned that the first London directory was issued in Lombard Street by Sam Lee in 1677.

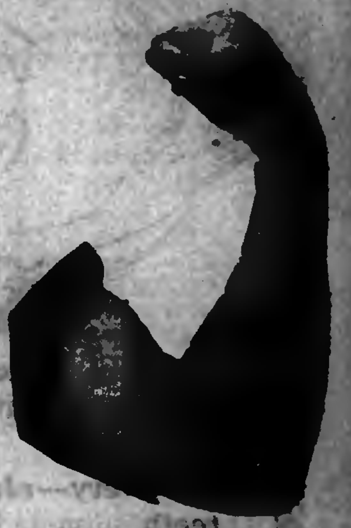
ATHLETICS DEMAND PLIABLE MUSCLES

For Quick Movements, Rapid Recovery and Freedom From Strain, Soft, Firm Limbs Are Needed

It is not the man with hard, knotty muscles who stars in athletics. Hard muscles mean muscle-bound arms and legs and to be muscle bound means lack of speed and elasticity, and speed and elasticity mean athletic superiority. Hundreds of young fellows are hopeful of some day becoming star ball players. These fellows, whose baseball life and usefulness depend upon the condition of their legs and arms, do not have bulging muscles. Their arms and legs are covered with long, elastic, pliable tendons that writhe like snakes as the players hurry through the thousand and one stages of training and playing.

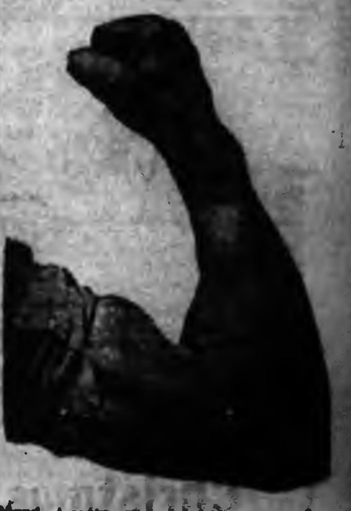
Illustrated here are the arms of a blacksmith and a ball player. Note the difference. The man of the forge shows a bunch of iron muscle. The player's arm is as round as that of a girl.



Rube Benton's arm

Years spent in swinging a hammer gave the blacksmith his powerful bulging biceps. For his work just such an arm is needed. But he could not do the work of the ball player. He is like a weight lifter or the man who works on a moving van—powerful as a Hercules, but unable to use his great strength to advantage save in his own line.

Take the player. His long, snakelike muscles allow him to throw the ball with terrific speed, to jump about, stoop, recover himself from an awkward position, and throw without strain. His muscles are not seen, but they are there, tough as hickory with the spring of split bamboo. Such muscles will do the maximum amount of work with the minimum of fatigue.



Hard, knotty and mighty arm of a blacksmith

The trainer of boxers, sprinters, jumpers, football or baseball players seeks to develop such muscles. The pitching arm shown belongs to Rube Benton. He has the biggest arm of the Cincinnati pitchers. His muscles are soft and spongy, and the powerful, searching fingers of Trainer "Doc" Hoskins sink deep into the flesh as he massages the pitching wing of the Red hurler. They would scarcely make an impression on the arm of the blacksmith.

NEW TYPE OF TRUCK

Chain Hooks Over Rim of Barrel and Into Handle Slot

Here is a truck especially for the transportation of barrels and kegs, but that can be used, of course, for boxes and other freight. The sketch shows the thick wheels, designed for heavy weight, and the short spikes in the upright supports that engage the barrel sufficiently to keep it from rolling off the side. The chief feature, however, is the chain. This chain has two hooks on one end and two in the other. From the top of the truck handle to a little below its middle is a vertical slot, in which are a series of crossbars. The double-hooked end of the chain is thrown over the rim of a barrel and the other end is hooked into one of the crossbars in the slot at whatever distance is required to make the chain taut. The barrel is thus held firmly on the truck.

EARLY POETS LAUREATE

Office Three Centuries Old But Title Assumed Much Earlier

It is almost three hundred years since "rare Ben Jonson" was formally appointed Poet Laureate, and during this lapse of time not a few of the illustrious names of English literature have been associated with the title. Jonson, Dryden, Southey, Wordsworth, and Tennyson are still names to conjure with, though many of their laureated predecessors are but pale ghosts in oblivion, and of many even the mere shadow of their names does not stand.

The term laureate is of hoary ancestry. It is probably as old as the art of poetry itself, for the custom of crowning the victor in a contest dates from very early times, and the wreath of the laurel tree, sacred to the god Apollo, was a trophy eagerly coveted by the poet or hero of the Greeks and Romans long years before any mention in history of our Druidic and early British forefathers. Spenser expresses aptly the idea: "The laurel, meed of mighty conquerors and poets sage," he calls it, and the word thus became closely identified with literary or military distinction. "Laureate letters" in old times were the despatches announcing a victory, and the epithet was officially bestowed by each university on the poet presenting the most brilliant Latin Ode.

The first of modern poets to be publicly crowned appears to have been the Italian poet and humanist, Petrarch, who was so honored in 1341. The office of Poet Laureate in England, however, was not legally recognised till 1616, when it was instituted by letters patent and given to Ben Jonson. Court-poets had doubtless existed before this; minstrels and versifiers were part of the royal retinue, and it is on record that Coeur de Lion had a special "versificator regis," Gulielmus Peregrinus by name. Chaucer is the first Englishman known to have assumed the title. This he did on his return from diplomatic missions abroad, and in 1389 he obtained the annual grant of a tun of wine for life. For the first two hundred years the appointments were irregular, their line only becoming unbroken and continuous from the creation of Richard Edwards in 1561.

When Jonson was appointed he was granted a yearly pension of $500, with the additional grant of one tierce of Canary wine out of the King's store. This latter allowance was commuted in favor of Pye for $135, but the emoluments varied considerably, as Dryden received $1,500 a year and then butt of wine, whereas Tennyson drew only $500 from the Lord Chamberlain, in whose hands the appointment had been placed, and $135 from the lord steward in lieu of the Canary.

Dairy stables should be well ventilated, lighted and drained. They should have tight floors and plainly constructed walls. Keep the stable and dairy room in good condition, and then insist that the dairy, factory or place where the milk goes be kept equally well.

Whitewash the dairy stable twice a year; use land plaster in the manure gutters daily. Use no dry, dusty feed just previous to milking; if fodder is dusty sprinkle it before it is fed.

Do not move the cows faster than a comfortable walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding.

Never allow cows to be excited by hard driving, abuse, loud talking or unnecessary disturbance. Do not expose them to cold or storms. Do not change the feed suddenly.

Feed cows liberally, and use only palatable feedstuffs; in no case should decomposed or mouldy material be used. Provide water in abundance, easy of access, and always pure, fresh, but not too cold.

An English-born Canadian, now growing apples in Nova Scotia, made successful experiments with growing the famous Carlile [illegible] in the land of his adoption.

Some of the apple trees in the wonderful apple belt of Nova Scotia are fully two hundred years old, and still yield their full quota of luscious fruit.

Women and Business Secrets

"There can be no doubt that women are far safer as clerks than men," said Miss A. M. Florence, secretary of the Women Clerks and Secretaries' Friendly Society. "A secret in business is rarely if ever divulged outside by a woman clerk. Unlike men, they do not, when they leave the office, indulge in long conversations about their work. They put it from them. Men babble to men far more than women do to women. Another advantage, though its importance has been exaggerated, is that many women clerks entrusted with confidential work are not as keenly interested in it as men—I mean, of course, that they are not so curious about it. They perform the confidential task efficiently and promptly and let it pass from their minds. More women clerks are now earning $750 a year than ever before, and the demand for women in offices is very great."—Weekly Scotsman.

Harbinger of Good Tidings Has to Chase His Man

How an agricultural labourer earning $3.75 a week at St. Osyth, near Clacton, tried to elude a solicitor's clerk who brought to him the tidings that he had been bequeathed [illegible] is told in British papers.

This fortune was left him by an old schoolfellow who emigrated to the United States years ago, and died there recently. A representative of a firm of solicitors made a number of inquiries before he could find any trace of the man. Eventually he went into an inn, the landlord of which knew the lucky farm labourer.

Shortly afterwards the man passed the inn, and the solicitor's representative shouted to him. Instead of stopping he walked on more quickly. When he was overtaken he explained that he thought the man was a detective, though why he could not tell, having nothing on his conscience.

Acorns as Human Food

Very little attention has been given to the utilization of acorns. It is well known that they are used as food for cattle, horses, swine, turkeys, and those of several species of white oaks also form the food of man. The acorns of white oaks are mostly large and the trees in general produce fruit very abundantly. The Indians in California always gathered the acorns of the Californian oak and years of great scarcity often caused much misery. Even the early white settlers of California relied on the crop of acorns as a part of their food supply.

This is Reynolds second appearance on a similar charge within a week. Chief Thompson noted that Reynolds had sworn he had not seen Lowes on the night the latter supplied him with liquor. IF CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH AND SICK

Look Mother! If tongue is coated, cleanse little bowels with "California Syrup of Figs."

Children love this "fruit laxative," and nothing else cleanses the tender stomach, liver and bowels so nicely.

A child simply will not stop playing to empty the bowels, and the result is, they become tightly clogged with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sours, then your little one becomes cross, half-sick, feverish, don't eat, sleep or act naturally, breath is bad, system full of cold, has sore throat, stomach-ache or diarrhoea. Listen, Mother! See if tongue is coated, then give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the system, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers give "California Syrup of Figs" because it is perfectly harmless; children love it, and it never fails to act on the stomach, liver and bowels.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

TO OVERCOME WINTER COMPLEXION TROUBLES

(From Woman's Tribune.)

If the chill air causes your skin to dry and scale or become unduly red or spotted, before you go to bed spread a thin layer of ordinary mercolized wax over your entire face. Remove next morning with warm water. This is the ideal complexion treatment for the winter girl. The wax gently absorbs the dead particles of surface skin, so gradually there's no discomfort. This gives the underlying skin a chance to breathe and to show itself. In a week or so the new and younger skin is wholly in evidence and you have a really matchless complexion. Naturally all the defects disappear with the discarded cuticle—tan chaps, roughness, blotches, pimples, freckles, blackheads, sallowness. Usually an ounce of mercolized wax, procurable at any drugstore, is enough to renovate even the worst complexion.

Wrinkles need bother you no more if you'll use this simple face wash: Powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in witch hazel, ½ pt. Just one application will affect even the deepest lines, and soon your skin will be smooth as a child's.

What are they?

Peps is the name bestowed upon a new scientific preparation put up into tabloid or pastille form, which provides an entirely new and effective treatment for coughs, colds and lung and throat troubles.

Did it never occur to you as peculiar that when you have a cough or a cold, or any chest trouble, you should apply medicine—not to your lungs, but to your stomach?

Look at it the other way round. Suppose you suffered from some stomach complaint—indigestion or ulceration. How strange you would think it if you were asked to take a medicine which had to be breathed in, and which went—not to your stomach, but to your lungs and breathing passages?

Peps—this newest remedy for coughs, colds, and lung troubles—go to the lungs and breathing-tubes, direct. Peps are really pine fumes, and certain highly beneficial medicinal extracts specially prepared by a new scientific process and then condensed into tabloid form. It is like making a breathable gas solid!

You put a "Pep" on your tongue and let it dissolve. As it does so, the healing essences it contains turn into vapor, and you BREATHE them direct to your lungs and air passages!

Just as the out-door treatment for consumption—the "breathing" treatment—is now admitted to be the only rational treatment, so the "Peps" treatment for colds and lung troubles is the only rational home treatment.

Peps cure catarrh, coughs, bronchitis, sore throat, tightness or aching across the chest, difficulty in breathing, night cough, hoarseness, asthma, laryngitis, smoker's throat, etc. Best for children, because free from opium, morphine, or any poison.

All druggists and stores sell Peps at 50c. a box or 3 for $1.25.

FREE TRIAL

Cut out this article, write across it the name of this paper, and mail it to Peps Co., Toronto, or 58 Princess Street, Winnipeg, enclosing 1 cent stamp to pay for return postage. A free trial packet of Peps will be mailed you by return. If you have a friend suffering from a cough, cold, or any throat or lung trouble, hand this on.

EAST MIDDLESEX BYE-ELECTION WON BY THE CONSERVATIVES

John McFarlan Elected to the Legislature by a Majority of 294

Special to The Times.

London, Ont., Nov. 27.—The East Middlesex bye-election, to fill the vacancy in the Ontario Legislature, caused by the death of Mr. George W. Neely, resulted in the election of Mr. John McFarlan, Conservative by a majority of 294, with two polls to hear from, which will probably increase the majority.

A bitter fight was put up by the Liberal-Temperance fusionists for their candidate, Mr. James W. Laidlaw, who pledged himself to support temperance legislation in the House, no matter by which party it may be introduced. The member elect is a straight supporter of the Government.

C. G. E. CO. HAS MANY ORDERS NOW ON HAND

General Manager Nicholls Tells an Encouraging Story of Peterborough's Largest Factory.

Citizens of Peterborough will be pleased to learn that the Canadian General Electric Co. has orders enough on hand to carry the works through next season. Mr. Nicholls denies a story that is current that the C.G.E. Co. is discharging a lot of men. Mr. Nicholls said, in part: "We now employ in our several factories and departments over five thousand people, and I try to consider their welfare as well as that of the shareholders, and give them steady employment."

NOW LORD HALDANE READS ENGLAND A SHARP LESSON

Could Learn a Great Deal From Closer Knowledge of Canada

London, Nov. 27.—Viscount Haldane, Lord High Chancellor, presided at an influential gathering of Peers and M.P's assembled at the Savoy Hotel to welcome home the British Parliamentarians after a tour of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

Many Liberal and Unionist members of Parliament were present, including Mr. Donald MacMaster, Mr. Hamar Greenwood, also ex-Governors, High Commissioners and Agents General from all parts of the Empire.

Lord Haldane humorously referred to his week-end visit to Montreal which he said he found much more pleasant than week-end visits to English country houses, in which British Parliamentarians were accustomed to indulge.

At this moment relations between the Commons and Senate of Canada were best discussed in whispers, (laughter), but where was the Canadian, who, nevertheless would exchange his constitution, founded on the best British traditions, for any constitution on the continent of Europe.

Learn Much From Canada.

"We in the Motherland are prone to imagine we are the embodiment of wisdom. I doubt that very much. I see things in my daily duties at the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which give me an uncomfortable impression that we have a great deal to learn from what is going on overseas."

FREEDOM OF PRESS BERLIN LIBRARY

At last night's meeting of the Protestant Federation, a strong resolution was passed from which we extract the following significant words: "That the action of the Public Library Board of Berlin, in banning the Sentinel and the Free Press be condemned as eminently dangerous to freedom and public rights . . . That this Federation also puts on record its request that newspapers of all religious faiths, whether controversial or not, be placed on the files of the public libraries for the people to read: since the suppression of discussion or controversy would have caused not only the suppression of the Reformation, but of Christianity itself."

Copies of the resolution were sent to the city of Berlin and the Ontario Legislature.

HON. G. P. GRAHAM WAS GLAD THAT HE SAVED HIS OLD PIPE

Special Train Returning From Laurier Banquet Hits a Shunting Engine

Toronto, Nov. 27.—A serious accident was narrowly averted in the wee sma' hours of this morning when the special train carrying the Toronto people who had attended the banquet to Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Hamilton, ran into an engine at the rear end of a long freight train near Waterdown station. The impact was fortunately not very heavy.

The special train which comprised an engine, baggage car, and two coaches, was proceeding at a fair rate. The passengers were still discussing the events of the evening when they were startled by the emergency brakes being jammed on. The passengers were flung from their seats. Fortunately the cars kept the track, but for a few minutes confusion reigned.

The engineer in his report of the incident, explained that his vision had been obscured by smoke for a few minutes prior to the collision. Then the smoke suddenly cleared and he saw right ahead of him the tail lamps on the engine ahead. He promptly applied the brakes, but he could not stop the train in time to avoid hitting the other locomotive. The pilot of the special's engine was badly damaged and there was two hours' delay. Five minutes after the collision another train came up behind the special and the brakeman only just had time to flag it.

After the first few minutes excitement, the passengers spent their time rubbing their shins, quieting their shaky nerves, [illegible] have been. Hon. G. P. Graham, who had been sitting in the smoking car congratulated himself on the fact that his favorite pipe was still in working shape.

"This is a fine thing to happen with a Minister of Railways on board," said some one in Mr. Graham's hearing.

"Yes, is it?" retorted Mr. Graham, "but you know it wouldn't have happened during my term of office."

PROTESTANT FEDERATION HOLD REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING

The Protestant Federation held their regular monthly meeting last night in the Sons of England Hall, opposite The Times Building, Hunter street there was a large attendance of members, and much enthusiasm prevailed.

The President, Mr. Kennedy, occupied the chair. After routine business was transacted, Rev. R. G. Peever, pastor of the George street church, who was the speaker of the evening, addressed the meeting.

Mr. Peever spoke on "The Citizen's Ideal and Duty." This ideal may be taken from the advice given by Bedouin Sheikh to Moses in Exodus 18th chapter, 21st and 22nd verses. We should seek to choose out from our people able men, who love truth and hate covetousness. These should rule for us in the municipality, the Province, the Dominion. In giving our votes we should remember that each is bound to the political situation in a three-fold way:

I. I am bound to myself. 'As Daniel O'Connell said, what is morally wrong can never be politically right. The franchise belongs not to party, but to the man himself under God.

II. I am bound to the party to which I belong. Party government is at present the form of government in the best states of the world. We should see that our representatives are loyal to party principles. A political platform should not be like a car platform, something to get on and off at. What makes the quality of the party is just the aggregate of the character of the men chosen. Every true party man must allow conscience to determine to what limits he should follow his party.

III. I am bound not merely to my party, but to my nation. God's hand is resting on the Canadian people, but we are bound to a larger country yet. Let us alter somewhat Abraham Lincoln's words and "keep step to the tramp of the Empire."

THE CAVAN CASE NOT CORRECTLY PUT

In our issue of yesterday a brief report was made of the McBain-Cavan Council case which came before Justice Middleton at the Non-Jury Assizes on Wednesday. We stated that the costs were put on the defence, which, it appears, is not correct, the matter being left over for the consideration of the judge. In justice to the parties concerned, we are glad to make this correction.

As on inquiry from Mr. Sherry, the Registrar of the Court, we learn that judgment was reserved on all questions including that of costs.

LOSSES IN MEN HAMPER REBELS AS FOE ESCAPES

General Villa Cannot Pursue Fleeing Federals Till the Army Rests

El Paso, Tex., Nov. 27.—Encumbered with wounded, lacking provisions and practically without ammunition those left of the 4000 Government soldiers who for two days fought to regain Juarez, for Huerta, continued their struggle to-day to reach Chihuahua City, where they hope to entrench themselves in the Federal Garrison.

In Juarez to-day Gen. Villa continued preparations to move against Chihuahua City which even now may be in possession of constitutionalists under Gen. Manuel Choa, who was known to have been in the vicinity of the capital when the fighting south of Juarez began. For another day at least, the commander of the rebels will permit his men to rest, while he assembles provisions and arms for an attack on Chihuahua, which if successful will give the constitutionalists complete possession of the State and will drive the Federals from their last stronghold in the Northern Mexico States

Gen. Villa said that he did not intend to execute the Federal prisoners whom he spared on the battlefield and brought to Juarez.

ITALY SAYS THAT STATE AND CHURCH MUST BE SEPARATE

Italian King Emphasizes This Point in Speech From the Throne--A Civilizing Mission

Rome, Nov. 27.—At the opening of the Italian Parliament Leonida Bissolati-Bergamaschi, leader of the Reform Socialists, Professor Enrico Ferri, Independent Socialist, and Carlo Dell'Acqua, Republican, took the oath in the presence of the King, a proceeding unprecedented in the Parliament, where Socialists and Republicans hitherto had always stayed away from the opening.

The King's speech from the throne was greeted for the first time by representatives of all classes of the nation, made possible by the introduction in Italy of universal suffrage.

His Majesty recapitulated the events of the conquest of Libya by the Italian army and navy, to whom he gave unstinted praise, at the same time expressing a touching tribute to those who had fallen in the fighting and the sacrifice of whose lives had rendered the Libyan land sacred.

A Civilizing Mission.

He said the conquest had given Italy a civilizing mission which it would accomplish with respect for the religion, the family life, and the property of the natives. It would also open a field for Italian emigration in the neighborhood of the Mother Country and so prevent Italian subjects from wandering away to distant foreign lands.

The King announced that many reforms were to be introduced in Italy, and alluded to the intention of the Government to give Italian women their rightful place.

THIS MAN HAD CHOICE OF 400 GIRLS FOR WIFE

He Picked English Girl Who Was in Canada Recently.

New York, Nov. 27.—Ernest W. a contracting mason of Patchogue, Long Island, celebrated this Thanksgiving Day by taking his pick of over 400 women who had offered to be his life mate. Darrow had been advertising for a wife since last May and the several hundred applicants not only besieged him by letter, by telegraph and telephone, but many visited him in person.

It was learned to-day that Miss Julia Stagg, an English girl who landed in Canada from England nine months ago, and went to live in Brooklyn, had won, and the couple will be married late this afternoon. According to the terms of his advertisement Darrow, who announced he made $30 a week, and that he had four motherless children, will turn over four-fifths of his weekly salary for the support of his wife and children, and household expenses.

WHAT GOOD ROADS WILL DO

From the "Official call for the International Good Roads Congress Panama-Pacific Exposition, San Francisco, February 22-27, 1915."

"When the agricultural production alone of the United States for the past 13 years totals nearly $100,000,000,000 (one hundred billion dollars), a sum to stagger the imagination—and it costs more to take this product from the farm to the railway station than from such station to the American and European markets, and when the saving in cost of moving this product of agriculture over good roads instead of bad would have built a million miles of good roads, the incalculable waste of bad roads in this country is shown to be of such enormous proportions as to demand immediate reformation and the wisest and best statesmanship."

President Arthur C. Jackson of the National Good Roads Association, when recently in Montreal, stated the foregoing estimate was based on careful calculations made by the Agricultural Department of the United States. In the same call for the Congress at San Francisco, it is stated "In the United States alone bad roads are directly responsible for the loss of a billion dollars a year." On about 85 per cent. of the total mileage, representing 97 per cent. of the entire traffic for which statistics are available, the steam railways of the United States in the year ended June 30th, 1912, earned from all sources $3,171,445,362, but they paid back again in wages, for supplies and other operating expenses, $2,200,991,281, in taxes $120,281,478, this left a net income of $840,873,263 or less by about one hundred and sixty million dollars than the waste of one billion dollars caused by bad roads in one year.

WAS BELOW ZERO AT COCHRANE, ONT.

Snow Flurries or Showers Expected To-day.

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Two degrees below zero was the temperature at Cochrane, Ont., this morning. This is the first time the mercury has got beneath the line in Ontario since last winter. The cold spell is general in that part of the country and it is also prevalent in the St. Lawrence Valley. In Montreal to-day the temperature is 18 degrees above and in Quebec 14 degrees.

Although it seemed quite cold in Toronto this morning the lowest temperature recorded during the night was four degrees of frost. The weather man said this afternoon that the chilly snap was not likely to last. He expects it will be milder to-night with snow flurries or perhaps some showers.

LIEUT-GOV'R GIBSON AND LADY GIBSON IN THE CITY

Distinguished Visitors Attend St. George's Church Bazaar at the Armouries

Yesterday one of the most successful undertakings ever held in the "sweet name of Charity," opened at the big Armouries building. This was a bazaar held under the auspices and for the benefit of Peterborough's most Southern Anglican church, St. Georges. The rector demonstrated the fact that he is not only a saver of souls, but a capable garner of coin.

This talented pastor, who has accomplished a great work in the South of the City, has increased his flock many hundred fold since the inception of his work.

Yesterday the bazaar was formally opened by His Honor Sir John Morrison Gibson, Lieutenant Governor of Ontario. With him was Lady Gibson, who was presented with a handsome bouquet of flowers. The presentation was made by little Mildred Moffat, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Moffatt.

The formal opening was made in the presence of a representation of the City Council and other local celebrities, comprising His Worship Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Duffus, Johnston, Gillespie and Butler. Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., Lieut.-Col. Clegg commanding officer of the 57th Regiment, were also present. The distinguished visitors occupied a position in the gallery at the western end of the Armouries.

A description of the bazaar was given in yesterday's issue

IS JAMES, NOT JOHN THOMPSON

Body of Man About to Be Waked Is Identified To-day.

Hamilton, Nov. 27.—The body of the man who was supposed to be John Thompson of this city and which was being "waked" over in the local home when the living John Thompson arrived home, was identified at the morgue here this morning as being that of James Thompson of Providence, R.I. Identification was completed by Mrs. Katherine Holland, an aunt of the man. The remains will be buried in the Holy Sepulchre Cemetery, this city. Thompson was a victim of the ill-fated James Carruthers, which sank in Lake Huron two weeks ago.

SIR AEMILIUS IRVING DEAD AFTER PROTRACTED ILLNESS

Veteran Bencher Passed Away To-day, Over Ninety Years of Age

Toronto, Nov. 27.—After lingering for a month in a state of semi-consciousness, Sir Aemilius Irving, one of the most prominent benchers of Canada, the oldest member of the Masonic Grand Lodge, and for 20 years Treasurer of the Upper Canada Law Society, passed away at his residence, Russell street, at 9.30 o'clock this morning.

Sir Aemilius' death will cause no interruption of business at Osgoode Hall, although the entire legal profession mourn the demise, as the courts only close in the event of the death of a chief Justice of the Province.

The funeral will be held from Osgoode Hall, the scene of his endeavor for nearly half a century, on Saturday. At the grave side a Masonic service will be held. Arrangements for the funeral are not completed.

A Nonogenarian.

The late Sir Aemilius Irving was born at Leamington, England March 23rd, 1823, coming to Canada with his parents at the age of eleven. His father, Hon. Jacob Aemilius Irving served as an officer in the 13th Light Dragoons at the battle of Waterloo, and became a member of the Legislative Council of Canada following the Union of 1841. His mother was a daughter of Sir Jere Homfray, Llandaff House, Glamorganshire.

The Irvings settled at Lundy's Lane, later removing to North York where they lived during the stirring events of the Mackenzie Rebellion of 1837.

WOMAN SMOKING SETS HER BED AFIRE A GETS BAD WOUND

Toronto, Nov. 27.—With her back and limbs seriously burned as the result of her bedclothing catching fire from the ashes of the pipe she was smoking while in bed this afternoon Mrs. Mary McCorrigan, 65 years of age, who was taken from her home at [illegible] Ryerson avenue, to the Western hospital where she now lies in serious condition. It appears that the aged lady had been an invalid for some time and when the fire occurred she was alone in her bedroom. Her shrieks attracted the attention of passers-by who telephoned in an alarm to fire headquarters.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Light falls of snow and a little milder.

Anybody Here Seen Smith?

An old lady, travelling for the first time in a large city, saw a glaring sign on the front of a high building which read, "The Smith Manufacturing Company."

As she repeated it aloud slowly she remarked to her nephew "Lawsy, mercy! Well, I've heard tell of Smiths all my life, but I never knew before where they made 'em."

SAYS HAYDEN USED MORPHINE

Doctor Testifies Man Who Left $30,000 to Mrs. McCabe Was Not Normal

Boston, Nov. 28.—Joel Hayden, Jr. whose will leaving $30,000 all his estate, to Mrs. George E. McCabe of 692 Huntington avenue, is being contested by his 79-year-old father, was addicted to the morphine habit, testified Dr. Harry H. Hartung of Huntington avenue at the trial before Judge Wait and a Suffolk jury yesterday.

Dr. Hartung treated young Hayden three times between 1904 and 1906, for the habit. Once, he said, he gave him an injection in the forearm of a quarter of a grain of the drug. Finally, he said, he told young Hayden he would give him no more of the drug.

"In my opinion, his was not a normal mind at that time," said the doctor.

The doctor said Hayden told him he took two doses of the drug every day, sometimes hypodermically, sometimes in the form of a pill. He said the young man was getting progressively worse when he saw him.

Dr. Charles G. Dewey, alienist, testified yesterday how morphine affects the user. He answered many hypothetical questions as to the use of the drug. He had never known young Hayden or seen him.

THE KING'S SHILLING

According to London recruiting sergeants reforms are urgently needed to encourage promising men to enlist in the British Army.

"For a long time complaints have been made in military circles," a recruiting sergeant said, "that the number of candidates for the 'shilling' is regularly and steadily on the decrease. But I, for one, am far from surprised, for the 'powers that be' seem to overlook the fact that at present no great inducements are offered—in times of peace, at any rate—to join the army. For instance, I feel sure that more men would speedily enlist if, after a number of years' service, soldiers were allowed to wear civilian clothes on their 'evenings out' so to speak. A large number of the best and most conscientious soldiers I have ever met have frequently complained to me that it seems unjust to them to have to wear uniform when going to the theatre, or to visit their friends.

"Again, uniforms should be made smarter than they are, for what invariably attracts the man with a much-depleted wardrobe is the prospect of getting a really smart, well-fitting red coat for the asking—that is to say, always providing the difficulty of passing the doctor is overcome. Moreover, from the standpoint of enlisting, at any rate, I think the fact that red coats will probably never be worn again in action has had a depressing effect on candidates for the 'King's shilling.' You see, the average class from which privates chiefly spring have, since their earliest days, heard tales of the gallant deeds of bygone wearers of bright red uniforms; and, therefore, although many people may laugh at the apparent paltriness of such a consideration, the prospect of going into action in khaki instead of scarlet is not so alluring to the enlister who has not quite decided whether to 'take the shilling' or not.

"And there is another point. I do not think the number of candidates for enlistment will increase to any great extent until better means of obtaining employment are found for soldiers when they have to leave the Army.

"Of course, it is the primary duty of a recruiting sergeant to make the prospect of 'taking the shilling' as alluring as possible, but many men come to them only as a last resource, when they have failed to earn a living in absolutely every other walk of life."

It is in the East End of London, in the poorest districts, that recruiting sergeants have, as a rule, the busiest time. "People who don't know what it is to want a meal would not believe how often men who haven't tasted food for hours, and sometimes for days, come to me and want to enlist," said a recruiting sergeant in the neighborhood of Bethnal Green, "simply to procure food to keep body and soul together. And very often these men turn out to be first-rate soldiers when once they have learned what discipline means, and what it is to be able to hold up their heads without fear of a policeman telling them to move on."

HOME DRESS-MAKING

Care and Accuracy Necessary in Fitting a Waist

There are a few things which should be remembered in fitting carefully, especially if it be the difficult matter of waist-fitting. Do not put the waist on the wrong side to fit it. Always try a garment on and do the fitting of it the way you propose to wear it. This suggestion is important for the reason that few women are exactly the same in shape of shoulder and waist on both sides. When the waist is fitted to the figure on one side and is turned over on the other, you may find a defect which is due to this very thing.

When putting on a waist to be fitted pin the bands underneath it and turn the shoulder and underarm seams toward the front. If there are other seams turn these toward the back. This is necessary in order to make the waist lie flat. In pinning the front or back together, which is one of the first things to do, have at least two [illegible] lines. The [illegible] line at the bottom may be one. The other might be a line which [illegible] with the "chest line," a line [illegible] with the [illegible] line, but only [illegible] from the neck and running about six inches across the middle front.

In making alterations by pinning be sure to pin securely. Otherwise the alterations will be of little use, as by the time the waist has been removed some of the alteration marks may have been lost through falling pins.

Battle Song of Failure

We strain toward Heaven and lay hold on Hell,
With starward eyes we stumble in hard ways,
And to the moments when we see life well
Succeed the blindness of bewildered days.
But what of that? Into the sullen flesh
The soul drives home the spur with splendid sting.
Bleeding and soiled we gird ourselves afresh—
Forth, and make firm a highway for the King.

—Amelia Josephine Burr

Likes Canada Best

Rev. Father Lebeau, of the Archbishop's palace, Ottawa, returned from a tour of France, England, Spain, Portugal, Switzerland, Egypt and the Holy Land and made this statement:

"After visiting all the European countries and the Eastern ones, too I find that I never appreciated Canada so greatly. There is a spirit of liberty here which I found in no other country I was in. There the rich are rich and the poor helplessly poor. Here in Canada we know how to enjoy life as they do not."

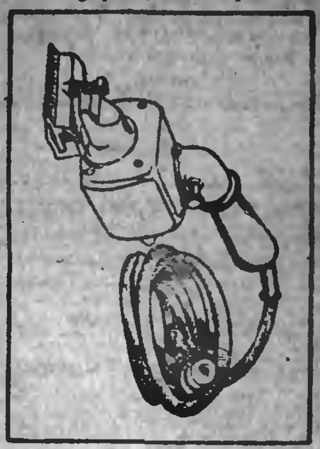
ELECTRIC CLIPPER

For Horses, Not Men, and Does Its Work Easily and Swiftly

One of the latest of electrical appliances is the electric horse clipper. The clipper has a long cord which is reinforced by a heavy string coil to keep it from twisting or breaking and no special wiring is necessary to use it. Just plug into a socket that has 110 volts and there you are. A thick handle affords a firm, comfortable grip and as the jaws work automatically all the user need do is guide the implement. The carbon brushes are accessible and easily replaced, adjusted or cleaned. The housing is dirt and dust proof, which prolongs the life of the motor contained within. Incidentally, this housing is of aluminum, which is strong enough for such a purpose, yet light enough to make easy handling. Furthermore, the motor is short and handy to clip the horse's foot.



ALL YOU DO IS GUIDE IT.

Our Point of View

Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey, when the price of eggs increases every day.

The United States senate is struggling with the currency bill, and the White House will probably now be struggling with the dressmaker's bill.

The New Orleans Sons of Rest have been strongly in favor of invading Mexico ever since they learned that a man can get as drunk as a boiled owl there on pulque for only 3 cents.

Eleven thousand Fenian raid veterans have received the sum of $100 from the Dominion Government, although only 10,000 actually fought in the campaign against the invaders. And there are 10,000 more requests for the grant, Nova Scotia claiming the majority of these. To us the Nova Scotians look in the same position as Roumania. Evidently they demand the lion's share for remaining neutral.

A GOOD RECORD.

Here is a succinct review of some of the things the present government has accomplished as outlined by Hon. J. D. Hazen in his speech at the banquet to him in St. John last week:

"The government, although it has only been in power two years, has settled the Manitoba boundary question and the question of the boundaries of Quebec and Ontario, and has done so on broad constitutional lines and in a way that has met with the universal approval of the people of the country. It has effected a trade arrangement with the West Indies that will undoubtedly prove of advantage to the Province of New Brunswick, in common with other parts of Canada. It has revised the Bank Act, and is preparing to introduce the Parcels Post System. It has made large provision for the development of the national ports of Canada, provided terminal elevators for our grain, and reduced the cable rates; has made the most ample and generous provision ever made since Confederation for carrying on the different public services of the country, and at the same time has reduced the public debt and maintained the credit of Canada at a high standard."

Old Folk's Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weaken all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bane of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

RUSSIA'S INVETERATE HATRED OF THE JEWS

The "ritual murder" trial has done Russia no good, but considerable harm, inasmuch as it has drawn public attention to the manner in which the Jews are treated by the subjects of the Czar. No nation has ever prospered which ill-used the Hebrew race—of that there can be no question. Russia and have been taught for generations to practice every sort of injustice upon their Jewish neighbors, and, as all know, Russia is regarded as on a low plane of civilization, and, generally speaking, is amongst the least respected nations of Europe. Whether this is the result of its treatment of the Jew, or whether Russia's attitude towards this ancient people is the result of the low plane on which it exists is another question.

Russia's unreasoning attitude towards the peace-loving Jewish people was reflected in the ritual murder case, where the intention was undoubtedly to arouse the people against a sect which were accused of abominable practices. The verdict of the Kiev jury in the case of Beiliss, charged with the murder of a boy two and a half years old, proves by its verdict of acquittal so quickly after the case was handed to the jury that there anything to it. The boy was not murdered by the man charged with the murder, though he was killed in a Jewish brickyard, and he was not killed for ritual purpose, or any other that the jury was able to discover. It had no religious motive.

No other case within years has so aroused the interest and sympathy of the civilized world as this one. The charge was instigated, beyond doubt, by Russian officials seeking to emphasize and persistent attitude of hatred that the Russian government assumes towards its own Jewish subjects and towards Jews at large. It is high time the authorities of Russia displayed a broader and more justifiable attitide towards the Hebrew race, as well as with regard to other questions.

HEADACHY, COSTIVE, BILIOUS--"CASCARETS"

Sick Headache, Bad Breath, Sour Stomach, mean Liver and Bowels are clogged—Cheer up!

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizziness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

A UNION STATION.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Some time ago a suggestion was made by a writer in The Times that the time had arrived when Peterborough is entitled to a union station for the use of both railways. Such a change would be of great advantage to the city, and if it is to be done at all it should be attended to at once, as the selection of a proper site will become increasingly difficult and expensive.

I think this is a matter the Council should take up at once.

A Knight of the Grip.

A "FOUL" ROAST.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Just a few lines to inform you that the annual fowl roast took place last Tuesday evening in a shack in N. Monaghan, near the river. It must have been a great success, as they had left some soda biscuits around where they swiped the fowl. I think the boys were real selfish that they didn't ask the neighbors who provided the fowl. From the appearance of fragments of turkeys, ducks and chickens, they had abundance for all.

I WANT TO GO TO MORROW.

(Published by Request.)

I started on a journey just about a week ago,
For the little town of Morrow in old
 Ontario;
I never was a traveler and really didn't know,
That Morrow had been ridiculed a century or so.
I went down to the depot for my ticket, and applied,
For tips regarding Morrow, not expecting to be guyed;
Said I, my friend, I want to go to Morrow and return
Not later than tomorrow, for I haven't time to burn.

Said he to me, now, let me see if I have heard you right.
You want to go to Morrow and come back tomorrow night,
To go from here to Morrow and return is quite away.
You should have gone to Morrow yesterday and back today,
For if you started yesterday to Morrow, don't you see,
You could have got to Morrow and returned today at three.
The train that started yesterday —
 now understand me right,
Today it gets to Morrow and returns
 tomorrow night.

Said I, my boy, it seems to me
 you're talking through your hat
Is there a town named Morrow on your line? now tell me that;
There is, said he, and take from me
 a quiet little tip,
To go from here to Morrow is a fourteen-hour trip;
The train that goes to Morrow leaves
 today eight-thirty five,
Half after ten tomorrow is the time you should arrive.
Now if from here to Morrow is a fourteen-hour jump,
Can you go today to Morrow and come back today you chump?

Said I, I want to go to Morrow, can
 I go today
And get to Morrow by tonight if there is no delay?
Well, well, said he, explain to me,
 and I've no more to say
Can you go anywhere tomorrow and come back today,
For if today you'd get to Morrow,
 surely you'll agree
You should have started not today,
 but yesterday, you see;
So if you start to Morrow leaving here today, you flat,
You won't get in to Morrow till the day that follows that.

Now if you start today to Morrow
 its a cinch you'll land,
Tomorrow into Morrow not today,
 you understand,
For the train today to Morrow, if the schedule is a-right,
Will get you into Morrow by about
 tomorrow night.
Said I, I guess you know it all, but kindly let me say,
How can I go tomorrow if I leave the town today?
Said he you can not go to Morrow
 any more today
For the train that goes to Morrow is a mile upon its way.

Finale.

I was so disappointed I was mad enough to swear;
The train had gone to Morrow and had left me standing there.
The man was right in telling me I was a howling jay—
I didn't go to Morrow so I guess I'll go today.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs which are connected together. They detach and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a bottle of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, feeding itself from the body of the person, and [illegible]

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible]

"The Petty Poet"

An unusual charge was preferred against Alexander Barron, a laborer, in Inverness Court. It was alleged that he stole three trees from the Battlefield Wood at Culloden. He denied the charge and said he was a journalist and a poet, and was known as "The Petty Poet." Sheriff Grant: "I suppose you mean 'Petty' geographically." The prosecutor: "Yes. It is the name of the district near Culloden." The accused was admonished.

TO MUCH CODDLING

Fitzsimmons Thinks Big Purses are Spoiling the Fighters

Too much money for too little fighting is taking the edge off the old sport, says "Bob" Fitzsimmons. When I first came to America very good men in all classes were glad to fight for anything from a hundred or a couple of hundred dollars up. Only the big champions got big money.

Fighting was a rough game then. It wasn't so much the money that drew men to the ring. Most of them fought because they'd rather fight than do anything else. Why, the old-time lightweights, Joe Gans, Dal Hawkins, Kid McFadden, Kid McPartland, and that lot—anyone of whom would be a world's champion to-day—used to fight for purses of $500, $600, or $700. And they'd fight winner take all, and be glad to get the chance.

Now look at the lightweights to-day, and what they get and what they expect. Ad. Wolgast is a good little fighter, but he isn't any better than a whole lot of the old-timers. Wolgast got into the habit of demanding something like $22,000 for his "end" whenever he was asked to make a match.

I know some of the old-timers who wouldn't have called off a match for a dislocated thumb, the way Wolgast called off his match with Dundee.

We didn't call off matches for anything less than a broken leg when I was fighting.

I beat Corbett with a dislocated right thumb, and fought Jeffries with two smashed hands. When I fought Johnson my right arm was twisted by Jeannette in training, and all the ligaments torn away from the elbow.

I fought Sharkey and Ruhlin when I was so full of malaria fever I didn't half know where I was, and knocked them both out. We didn't call fights off for little things in those days.

Child Hero's Effort to Save "Mummie"

Evidence was given by a boy of six at the inquest at Arundel on his mother, Mrs. Greenfield, and his four-year-old sister, who were drowned in the Arun. He said that he and his mother and sister were dropping stones into the water, when his sister lost her balance and fell in. His mother jumped in after her, and witness also jumped in. He could not see "Mummie," and so he scrambled out again. His father, a postman, said he could not understand how the boy managed to get [illegible] child said he swam out, but he had only [illegible] one swimming lesson, when his father taught him [illegible] a bath.

ROYAL WARDROBES

Queen Mary Has Many Gowns in Her Robe-room

Though Queen Mary is known to have excessively simple tastes in all matters relating to her dress, nevertheless Her Majesty's wardrobes are of necessity far more elaborately filled than are those of most of her subjects.

The Queen's gowns are kept in a large robe-room adjoining Her Majesty's bedroom in her personal apartments. The walls of this apartment are lined with large mahogany wardrobes divided into two sections, one for the State robes worn at Courts and other State ceremonials, and the other for the Queen's ordinary dresses.

The State section of the Royal wardrobes contains from fifty to sixty gowns, which are termed Court robes; two of the wardrobes in this section contain gowns worn only as a rule during a visit to England of a foreign Sovereign.

Apart from the foreign gowns, Her Majesty's State robes and dresses fill from eight to ten wardrobes. Each is "dressed" on a steel model and hung from a plated rail that runs lengthwise through the wardrobe at the top. The wardrobes are all satin-lined throughout. Her Majesty's ordinary dresses fill from five to seven wardrobes.

The wardrobes are in charge of the head robe maid, who has three assistants. Overnight the head robe maid receives instructions as to the gowns Her Majesty will require and the hour when each will be wanted the following day, and it is the robe maid's business to put out each of these gowns at the time mentioned.

More Drinking in Italy

Till a few years ago the Italians were among the most temperate peoples in Europe; but with the growth of industrialism and social luxury an enormous development has been witnessed of the bar system.

The marked increase in direct crime and insanity due to the abuse of intoxicating drink roused the attention of the Government, and a Bill for checking the evil was introduced in the Chamber of Deputies, prohibiting the sale of liquor to children and drunkards, limiting bars to two for every 500 inhabitants in the smaller towns, and one for every 500 citizens in the larger centres. The latest figures show one street bar for every 150 inhabitants.

WHAT IS A COOK?

She is a Bacteriologist For One Thing —Read This and See

Madame, do you know that you are a bacteriologist? The chances are you [illegible] every time a woman goes into the kitchen to cook she becomes a bacteriologist in proportion as she is a good cook. Perhaps she will not [illegible] but that is what she is, nevertheless.

It is well for people to understand that there is a lot of bacteriology [illegible] to study it as bacteriology [illegible], process of making bread rise is inoculation, pure and simple. Bacteria are introduced into the mixture of salt and water and flour in the form of yeast, and this bacteria gets to work right away forming a gas which causes the bread to rise. It is the heat and water that help things along. Mould and yeast belong to the same bacteriological families and there are a lot of others of the same sort.

Of course, most of us who cook don't know things by these terms. We do not know that when we put in the yeast we are inoculating the dough. And there may be a number of other forms of inoculation that we do not know, either.

But it is well for every woman to remember that she is the bacteriologist in charge of the family laboratory and inform herself in ways the best she can find to the end that in her inoculations of the food with heat and salt and other chemicals she doesn't introduce other things that will incubate into bacteria that are not nearly so healthful as the yeast that goes into the bread.

A clean kitchen and a clean cook make the finest sort of laboratory and bacteriologist for family uses.

HATRED OF CATS.

Aelurophobic means a positive [illegible] unreasoning hatred of cats. It comes from the Greek word meaning "tail wavers," and is being applied by scientists to that class of people who cannot stand the presence of even a most harmless kitten.

It seems that thousands of years ago Herodotus, the Greek historian, took a delightful journey through Egypt and brought back as many wonderful stories as any modern traveler ever collected, and he met cats in this Egyptian country and gave them a name of his own, "aelurophobic."

Not long ago a noted physician undertook an investigation of this subject and sent out a list of questions to all aelurophobes whom he could locate. Answers came from England, Germany, France and Russia. Much curious information was obtained. He found thirty-one well authenticated cases in which these aelurophobics could tell when a cat was near, though they could neither hear nor see it. He learned that cats cause asthma in some patients, that some people even suffer lockjaw in the presence of a cat, and temporary blindness, hysterical convulsions, and seasickness may also be ascribed to the same cause.

But why are people afraid of cats? Why is the hero who can face a tiger terror stricken at the sight of a cat? Why does a certain well known General grow pale, faint and unable to breathe when he knows there is a cat in the room? Why does an equally distinguished physician grow almost seasick in the presence of an innocent puss? These are all strong men.

His answer is not thoroughly satisfying. He says it is an inherited remainder of an animal instinct which we possessed in the days before we were humans, and probably used this instinct for our defense. That leads us to think that we were once birds or mice, for no one claims that the apes, our supposed ancestors, are afraid of cats.

Keep the Chicks Warm

Don't expect to be able to do justice to your chicks in [illegible] the kitchen stove; have plenty of brooder capacity ready, and don't be afraid of having the brooders too big if the chicks can go in and out at will. Keep a hen and her chicks in a dry sunny place out of the wind, letting her out only on warm days; give another one liberty to go and come at will, hustling for a living on cold, wet, windy days, the chicks following after chirping and crying to be cuddled; or try two hovers or brooders furnishing somewhat similar conditions, one a great abundance and one too little heat, and compare mortality. Placing a brood of chicks in a cold box is like putting twin babies in a cold bed and saying, "Now, kiddies, get warm;" they'll do it in time, but in the meantime, what?

Better Than Wireless

A French inventor claims to have discovered a substance more sensitive to wireless waves than any now in use and to have perfected receiving apparatus which does away with all outer wires and antennae.

Reducing the Glare

For reducing the glare of a tungsten lamp without lessening its light a globe has been patented with longitudinal corrugations on the outside which diffuse the light so that the entire globe appears in view.

Quaint medical remedies which were popular in bygone days were described at the City of London School by Dr. F. M. Sandwith, Gresham Professor of Physic, in a lecture on "Drugs Old and New."

After pointing out that herbs supplied the first drugs, the lecturer described how animal products were accepted as medicines, some even remaining in the first English pharmacopoeia published in 1618. Tiger's flesh and new-born puppies were among the old remedies. One book recommended a live spider to be rolled in butter and formed into a pill and then swallowed, as an antidote to jaundice. Vipers were held in high esteem, and a broth made from them was said to strengthen the sight. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries powdered mummies were prescribed.

In some of the older herbal works a striking fact was the constant recommendation of remedies for bruises, which gave some idea of the manners of the day. John Gerrard, who was chief gardener of Lord Burleigh's garden in the Strand, and had a garden of his own in Holborn, published a book in 1597 which recommended "Soloman's seal" for taking away in one night the blackness of bruises caused by falls "or women's wilfulness in tumbling upon their hasty husbands' fists, or such like!"

SOME INFORMATION ABOUT EVERGREENS

How to Tell the Different Varieties of Pine—the White a Giant Tree

To the observer and lover of Nature, the pine trees of Canada give infinite delight. From one end of the country to the other, they adorn the fields, the woodlands, and many a lofty hilltop. When many other trees of the forest are stripped of their glory, these, claiming all seasons for their own, provide evergreen foliage which protects the weary traveler from the hot suns of summer and the stormy blasts of winter.

The pines stand among us as representatives of an ancient race. They were known in Bible times, being mentioned in Sacred Scripture. There are several species of pine. Amongst the most important is the White pine, which grows to a height of about 200 feet, attaining an age of from two to three hundred years. From the stem of this tall tree project large branches, from which spring smaller ones, bearing the twigs, on the end of which are tassels, composed of green needle-shaped leaves of a feathery lightness and arranged in clusters of five. This tree flowers in the spring, and the fruit ripens into long, slender, woody cones within two years. The cones appear either in pairs or several together, and are found projecting horizontally from the branches, to which they often cling for several years. In color they are green at first, but later become brown, eventually falling, to remain for many years unchanged on the ground.

Beneath the scale of the cone, when opened wide we find nestled at the base two little seeds in twin boxes, each provided with a little wing so that it can sail off, with the wind to find a place to grow. The pine is one of the most useful trees, providing us as it does with the material for our homes.

Though found in poor soils, and in the same localities, the Red or Norway pine, is less common and less valuable than the white pine. It grows to a height of about 150 feet, having a large diameter, and can be easily recognised by its reddish bark. The long, slender needles, which grow in pairs, are half-round, and are more or less covered with a glaucous bloom.

The wood of the Red pine is used extensively for interior building purposes. This variety is valuable for planting as a landscape tree on account of its beauty of foliage and rapidity of growth.

Amongst the most valuable and best known of our native conifers is the Pitch pine. It usually grows to a height of 80 feet. The bark of the trunk has scales like the covering of an alligator. The color of the foliage is lighter than the White pine; the needles are stiff and coarse and in bundles of three; the cones are large and very much broader than those of the White pine, the scale being armed with a stout, sharp spike at the middle of the outer margin. The cones remain on the tree after the winged seeds have been shed, so that one of the easiest ways of recognising the tree is to look for those broad, short cones hanging from the older branches.

The Grey, or Jack pine, is a small tree quickly distinguished from all its neighbors by a dark reddish bark upon the trunk, and gray-green foliage clustered on short branches, giving a sombre aspect to the tree. After the seeds have been scattered from them, the small, short cones cling for several years to the branches. Under adverse conditions of soil and moisture the Jack pine is very hardy and thrifty.

The pines, which are the harps of the lonely places, are very susceptible to the wind. When stirred by the breezes, they send forth strains of music which delight the ear. When in a meditative mood there is no place more luring than a fragrant pine wood, filled with the musical undertone of its own soft and low murmurings, for courting that quietness, so essential as a preparation for the incoming of high and noble thought.

Setting aside the economic value of the pines their magnificent beauty should alone render them worthy of protection and preservation. Therefore we should use all our influence to save them from destruction, and should see that no tree is needlessly sacrificed.

Britons in the West

According to Government figures natives of the British Islands constitute 25.21 per cent. of the population of Victoria and 24.20 per cent. of Calgary. In the other cities of the west belonging to this class the proportion runs from 25.90 per cent. in Regina to 30.37 per cent. in Vancouver. The foreign born are over 30 per cent. of the population of Winnipeg, Vancouver, Calgary, Regina and Edmonton.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I was well advised to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

RHINOCEROS SHOOTING

The rhinoceros is a strange beast. When a bullet hits a rhino no one can say with any certainty what he will do. With most animals one has a very fair idea as to what will happen; but with the rhino, no. Some people go so far as to say that the rhino does not know himself. Sometimes he will spin round like a humming-top, but squealing like a pig; suddenly off he will go straight as an arrow. There seems to be some method in his madness, though, for when he does go he goes, or rather comes, straight for you. Then it is time for the tree, thorny though it be. At other times, when not knocked out of time by the first shot, he reminds one rather of an engine whose driver has turned on steam a bit too quickly, so that the wheels skid; this is simply his preliminary turn in your direction, and then, with as little loss of time as the engine, down he comes at you, snorting and puffing rather noisily. This is another case for the tree. Sometimes there is no tree, anyway not close enough, and then an anthill must do to get behind; it is as well to have one or the other. At other times the beast will simply make straight off as an ordinary well-minded animal should. All the same, it is this uncertainty that adds so greatly to the zest of the game.

UNTIDY ATHLETIC GIRL

Her Methods Sometimes Very Crude, Says a Colonel

The "athletic girl" came in for a "dressing down" from Colonel Sir Thomas Holdrich, in distributing prizes at the Princess Helena College, Ealing. Nowadays, he said, there was a tendency in sport to mistake the means for the end, and games now ought to be the whole end and aim of one's existence. The "athletic girl," for instance, was not altogether worthy of imitation, for if she did not wholly succeed in getting in the front rank she was too apt to show her disappointment. She was not always as tidy as she might be, her methods were sometimes exceedingly crude, and her manners—well, she had none. He did not by any means consider such a girl the most adorable of her sex.

Potato-and-Cucumber Salad

Boil potatoes in the skins, and let cool. Then remove the skins and cut the potatoes into small dice. Chop a medium-sized onion fine. Pare two fresh, crisp cucumbers, cut in four lengths, and remove the largest seeds. Cut into dice. Mix the potatoes and cucumbers together lightly with a silver fork. Pile in salad bowl, and sprinkle with the chopped onion. Pour mayonnaise dressing over all, and sprinkle with finely minced parsley.

Relics of Early Montreal

WATER DIVINERS AND THEIR RODS

Not by Any Means a Humbug Says Scientific Authority

There took place in Paris and its suburbs a series of experiments arranged by the Congress of Psychology and carried out by different finders of springs and seekers of metals using a hazel rod, a pendulum and a magnetized metal wire. If the results were not always conclusive, they nevertheless showed that at the bottom of it all there is something real which is worthy of being studied.

We cannot in fact ascribe to hazard so many lucky coincidences, says Camille Flammarion, the great French astronomer, although that is the way in which embarrassing questions are sometimes solved. We must therefore resort to systematic analysis and many controversies will doubtless arise before everybody is in agreement on the subject of the mysterious power of the rhabdomancers.

It really seems very difficult to explain the facts which were observed; such, for example, as these: In the Bois de Vincennes, diviners guided by their rods were charged with discovering some dry subterranean cavities. They explored the ground and their helm of wood or metal wavered here and there. One of them, Mr. Pelatrat, announced the existence of a cavity at sixty feet. The controllers examined the plan of the locality and certified to the correctness of the fact. Next, Mr. Probst, king of the rhabdomancers, with his bamboo sceptre, discovered an invisible quarry. He showed its limits, indicated its depth, its width, its length and noted the presence of four pillars near three ancient walls. This was verified and found to be correct.

Messrs. Probst and Ferven succeeded in recognizing the contents of sealed envelopes in which were inclosed pieces of silver, lead, copper, aluminum and zinc. There is something that seems to belong to sorcery, and, as in principle one has always a tendency to deny what one does not understand, more than one sceptic will smile on reading the results of these experiments. Let no one forget that in the fifteenth century the art of printing was treated as magic and that Louis XI. was obliged to protect the printers against those who believed them sorcerers, for no one imagined that writing could be reproduced all by itself and people supposed that it was necessary for the devil to mix himself up with it. To-day very many minds scarcely reason better in regard to the unknown forces of nature, which they would like to imprison in a nutshell—or, to speak more exactly, in the restricted limit of present undefined theories.

The experiments spoken of and the hypotheses which they suggest are very much older than is generally imagined. At the end of the seventeenth century the famous Malebranche showed these phenomena, attributing them to the devil and declaring dogmatically that if the rod turned it should do so in everybody's hands. The discussion begun in 1660 was still current in 1693, the year in which saw the Abbe de Vallemont demonstrate in his "Physique Occulte" that, all human persons not being endowed with the same nervous sensibility, there was nothing surprising in the fact that the emanations caused by subterranean waters should reveal themselves to certain temperaments and not to others.

Impostor's Six Months' Penance for a Round of Champagne Dinners

How a man worth nothing contrived to live at the rate of $10,000 a year was related by the chief constable at Lincoln Police Court, when Arthur Lionel Ashton, aged twenty-seven, was charged with obtaining food and lodging from the Waverley Hotel, Lincoln, by false pretences.

"I have never encountered a man before with such self-assurance," added the chief constable. "He is a man of considerable education and quite an accomplished criminal. He has defrauded twenty hotels at least in Liverpool."

The evidence showed that the accused invariably represented himself as Ernest Shand, the comedian. He arrived at the hotels in hired motor cars, had the best of everything, and gave champagne dinners to his acquaintances.

At one hotel he robbed the box for the Commercial Travellers' Children's School. He was first convicted in Ireland, and had been deported from Canada for false pretences.

Sentence of six months' imprisonment was passed.

"Undesirables" in Japan

In an article in a Japanese periodical, Nogyo Lasch, M. [illegible] Gentaku enumerated ten classes of young men who are useless for Japan. They are intensely interesting, as affording some indication of the ethical spirit of modern Japan. First in the list of "undesirables" come those youths who have received a complete education, and find themselves [illegible] able to cope with the difficulties of life. Second are those whose bodies are insufficiently developed and a prey to nervous disorders, owing to excessive intellectual labor. Third are the young men who have no education, and are stupid and narrow-minded. The fourth and fifth classes together comprise those who have not lived in the protection of family life and are thrown too early into the difficulties of the world.

A DUTCH PROPOSAL

In Holland a Suitor Goes Through a Curious Form

A curious old custom still exists in many provinces in Holland. If a young man is in love with a girl, and wishes to ask her hand in marriage, he goes about it in the following manner.

He buys a small, sweet cake and, wrapping it up in soft paper, proceeds to the house of his inamorata. Upon his arrival he is ushered into the midst of the family circle. Without a word he walks up to the young woman he wishes to make his wife, and he lays the cake on the table before her.

If she accepts his offer, she takes up the cake and eats it. Sometimes, though Dutch, she is coquettish, and tortures the young man by turning it over and playing with it before she decides to bite it, and then enraptures him by eating it to the last crumb.

If, on the other hand, she wishes to have nothing more to do with her admirer, she quickly wraps the cake in its covering and puts it back on the table. In this case a young man takes up the cake, satisfied with his refusal, and with a "Vaarveel bymman!" leaves the house. The matter is then kept a profound secret by all the members of both families, and the outer world never hears of it.

If, however, the affair progresses favorably and the suitor is accepted, the father takes him on one side to ask about his business prospects and if he can afford to take his wife for a wedding journey up the Rhine, the ideal wedding journey, of all Dutchmen. The girl, in a case of this sort, does not go into society for about six weeks. At the end of that time she reappears at balls and parties, and is not thought any the less of or shunned by young men who wish to marry.

The Kaiser's Son Startled Berlin With His Book

Something like a sensation was caused in Berlin by the publication by the German Crown Prince of a book called "Germany in Arms." The book, which is "most reverently dedicated to the German Emperor and the Prussian King," contains the following motto: "The world does not rest more safely on the shoulders of Atlas than does Germany on her army and navy."

The Imperial editor asserts that Germany, more than any other land, has to trust to its armaments, and that as its geographical position is unfavorable, and as all nations do not regard Germany with affection, the country has the sacred duty imposed on it always to maintain its army and navy in a state of readiness. "Only in this way, relying on our good sword, can we maintain that place in the sun which is ours, but which will not be voluntarily conceded to us."

The Crown Prince goes on to say that diplomacy may delay the conflict for a season, but those in responsible positions must know that once a gigantic conflagration is lighted it is not so easy to extinguish.

Speaking of the delight of riding to an attack, the Prince says there is one delight still greater—namely, that of meeting the enemy at the end of the gallop, and the fight for life and death.

Clergyman Buried in His Garden

The funeral of the Rev. John Clough Williams Ellis, of Glasfryn, Wales, a large landowner in Carnarvonshire and Merionethshire, was, according to the deceased's instructions, strictly private, and his body was buried in a lonely corner among trees in his garden, near the house. There were no fittings nor any inscription on the coffin.

AEROPLANE VS. AIRSHIP

The aeroplane has much greater elevation powers than the dirigible. It can climb to 13,000 feet, and then its endurance is about exhausted. The Zeppelin dirigibles can rise to 10,000 feet and then travel for twenty hours at that elevation.

The dirigible has an average speed of forty miles an hour, against seventy-five miles an hour of the aeroplane. But no aeroplane loade with guns and ammunition has yet travelled at a speed greater than sixty miles an hour. This is the speed of the Zeppelins being built for the German War Office. The aeroplane that runs short of fuel falls to earth. But when a dirigible has no more fuel it becomes a mere balloon.

This is the reason the Zeppelins are being built larger. They can then carry enough fuel to enable them to run 500 to 700 miles into the enemy's country and return without alighting.

Way back in the nineties Frank Chance thought his calling in the world was to be under the jurisdiction of the old Marquis of Queensbury rather than on the baseball field, and he didn't make such a bad showing, either. He succeeded in presenting his case so strongly that nobody in Fresno had any desire to stand up opposite him in the squared circle.

Frank weighed about 190 pounds then, was as active as a kitten and possessed plenty of skill with his hands. He used to add suits of clothes and athletic goods, as well as an occasional purse to his collection by taking on all comers at Fresno Hall.

One day there came to Fresno Hall a young giant from the Middle West who tipped the scales at 260 pounds, and who was heralded as one of the coming heavies. On the strength of the records he brought to town he was duly installed as constable.

The new constable had not become well acquainted with his star before Frank's friends got busy with a challenge which was promptly accepted. A purse was made up, an evening's bout arranged, and the tickets for the exhibition were at a premium at a dollar a seat.

The two went at it hammer and tongs for four rounds without either one having much of an advantage. In the fifth round the big fellow swung a vicious upper-cut that went wild and Frank swung one that took the constable on the point of the jaw. Nobody counted. Somebody yelled for a doctor, and seconds and referee worked over him for two hours before they could bring him to, while Frank sat over in his corner frightened into believing he had laid out his man for keeps.

That's about the last time that Chance ever handled a pair of gloves. One's enough for him now.

The game of poker is one always dear to a ball player's heart and Frank Chance was no exception. Frank, however, was always blessed with such an amount of luck that opponents were scarce. Now, it happened that Fresno, at this time, although a town of no large dimensions, nevertheless possessed a Chinatown. Here, often, with a crony or two, did Frank try his skill. But the "ways that are dark and tricks that are vain" succeeded in taking nearly every pot.

One evening Frank's companions scented a little "fixing" in the air and promptly hit one of the Orientals in the eye. It was a long way home, but Chance never made a better run around the sacks than the way he stepped it out in [illegible] of that mob of howling Chinese.

As a football hero, Chance made a great record, but he was on the injured list most of the time, as he took little care of himself in the scrimmages. A baseball knockout is not much worse than a gridiron [illegible] anyhow, and Chance seems to [illegible] in both.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders

In his home at Waldegrove, N. S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Cross, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of badly food, hard tack, and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a state that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y. and Kingston, Canada.

Her Goldfish Gone.

A well known lady living on Aylmer street, a few days ago bought a big glass bowl, filled it with water and put therein 17 gold fish. Yesterday she heard a suspicious silence on the part of her eight-year-old boy. Gentle reader pardon the "bull" about hearing a silence. The lady on arrival in her dining-room found a bowl full of water, a boy eight years old, with a piece of thread ending in a bent pin covered by raw meat and 17 gold fish lying on the floor. The lady then found a slipper and the boy found a spgie in his northern hemisphere.

Former Local Lady's Loss.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Barbour (nee Miss Stpishell, of the local Normal School staff) will regret to learn that their home was totally destroyed by fire on Wednesday evening in Toronto. The electric iron, which was the cause of the fire, had been left on a table in the kitchen with the switch turned on, and when Mrs. Barbour left her apartments for a visit, it escaped her notice. It soon burned through the table covering and then ignited the curtains on the windows close by. The contents of the Barbour apartments are a total loss, while practically all the rest of the fittings and furniture of the flat are damaged by smoke and water. The loss as given by the fire department will possibly amount to $5,000.

FALLING HAIR MEANS DANDRUFF IS ACTIVE

Save your Hair! Get a 25 cent bottle of Danderine right now—also stops itching scalp.

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf.

There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which if not remedied causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast. A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application your hair will take on that life, lustre and luxuriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

ANGLO-CANADIAN FARMERS.

Mr. Miller told them to call again on Saturday and he might place them.

An Old Business Episode

Yesterday a prominent local business man, in conversation with The Times recalled a rather amusing episode of past business history here. The business man in 1880 was working for a local confectioner, now retired. He had two other boy friends who were delivering parcels for, respectively, a George Street dry goods store and a hardware company. One day the wife of a local doctor bought a spool of thread at the dry goods store. A gentleman living a little west of the city bought three cream puffs at the confectionery store and a man living near Auburn bought, at the hardware emporium a rake handle. The latter purchasers were also ordered to be delivered. The three boys met. In front of Cavanagh's hotel, where the Bank of Commerce now stands, was a big delivery van. The boys pooled their small change and hired the van. On it was a heavy plank. Arrived at the doctor's residence, the plank was placed from van to sidewalk and the spool of thread carefully rolled down the plank and delivered. At the house of the cream puff buyer the plank was used to carry in the 15 cent purchase. When the van got to Auburn, the three shouldered the rake handle and carried it into the house of the purchaser.

BOURASSA TALKS IN LONDON ON DANGERS TO BRITISH EMPIRE

Thinks the Hindu Problem One That May Spell Disaster to the State

Special to the Times

London, Ont., Nov. 28.—Henri Bourassa's speech at the banquet given by St. Andrew's Society, in answer to the toast of "The Empire," was characteristic of him. He said that the various troubles and cares which engross the minds of rulers and thinkers in the various British possessions, they of the United Kingdom have their ample share. They may be forgiven if they rather think of saving the State from its perils within, rather than encourage patriotic colonials to rush to their rescue and help them out of dangers far more distant and unreal. The Irish question, social unrest in England, perilous economical adventures, class hatred pauperism, are among the few matters which the British statesmen have to look after, and, seemingly, to settle in a very short time.

They are called upon to rule the Empire of India, with its population tenfold larger than that of Great Britain, and twenty times more numerous than the total population of all the self-governing colonies put together. Whilst the Hindu crisis in South Africa is not more grievous for that colony than the labor question in England, its repercussion upon India may mean rebellion in that mighty Empire. When the stalwart prime minister of British Columbia declares emphatically that the doors of his province will remain shut against Hindu immigrants, he increases the troubles of Imperial statesmanship to a degree which is not alleviated by his fiery denunciation of the "disloyal" Senate of Canada.

I have referred especially to the problem of India, because it may prove to be the stumbling-block of the Empire. The people of India are bound to migrate in growing numbers every year. They have been educated in the idea that their British citizenship carries with it equality of rights in every land over which floats the UNION JACK. They therefore seek shelter in other British possessions where they think they may take root and prosper.

On the other hand, the white inhabitants of Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and British Columbia are deeply imbued with the conviction, right or wrong, that they cannot resist the competition of Hindu labour. They therefore keep their doors shut against the British Hindu, as closely as against the Chinese or the Japanese.

A Local Fish Hatchery

In reply to our correspondent, The Times wishes to say that some time ago Mr. Burnham, M.P., took up the question of fish fry and hatcheries for our lakes, and got some fry, but the department at Ottawa said it was the duty of the Provincial Government to provide fish hatcheries for provincial waters.

From the above it would appear that the matter rests with the Ontario Government whether we are to have a fish hatchery or not. We hope our local member will insist on one being constructed for the Trent waters.

MAYOR BRADBURN NOT IN THE FIELD

Editor Morning Times.

Dear Sir,—Will you kindly permit me to reply through your columns to the ratepayers who have, by written requisitions and personally asked me to be a candidate for the office of Mayor of the City for the year 1914. I appreciate deeply the kind things that have been said to me and the expressions of confidence conveyed in the requests, but under the circumstances I regret that I cannot comply with the requests. It has been usual in Peterborough for a Mayor to occupy the position for two years, and earlier in the year I stated to members of the Council that if any Alderman wished to be a candidate for the position when my second term had expired I would recognize the custom and would not oppose him. I therefore will not be a candidate for the office for next year.

I desire to heartily thank those who have requested me to be a candidate. I have endeavoured to give good service to the ratepayers while I have been a member of the Council, and it is gratifying to know that my efforts have been appreciated, and I hope those kind friends who have written and spoken to me will accept my thanks for their kindness.

Yours very truly,

W. H. Bradburn, Mayor.

CANADA'S IMPORT OF BUTTER INCREASES

Most of it Comes From New Zealand Exports on the Decrease

Ottawa, Nov. 28—Some of the reasons why Canada, a great agricultural country, still continues to import butter in increasing quantities every years are given by J. A. Ruddick, Dairy and Cold Storage Commissioner in his annual report just published.

"Canada," he says, "has imported more or less butter for over 20 years but the quantity has been significant until the last year or two. After all is said it is a question of population in relation to productive areas. The United Kingdom produces more milk than Canada, and yet the value of butter and cheese annually imported into that country is practically double that of all other countries combined."

HOW TO RAISE THE WIND IS NOW THE TOPIC OF LIBERALS

Hon. Mr King Impresses Necessity Upon the Ontario Reform Association

Toronto, Nov. 28.—Big men in the Liberal party from all over the Province are in Toronto to-day to attend the ninth annual meeting of the General Reform Association for Ontario. There are 650 members of the Association and usually about one-third of that number are at the annual meeting, but this year the attendance is lighter. The gathering is being held at the Foresters Temple.

The glad hand was liberally extended to R. E. Truax, M.P., who was among the early arrivals and received congratulations on his recent achievements in South Bruce, which was one of the two bright spots in the party's existence since it was put out of power. Hon. Geo. P. Graham, who provided the other ray of sunshine, when he was returned for South Renfrew, was also present, looking remarkably well. There was no sign of Mr. C. W. Laidlaw, who got "his" in East Middlesex yesterday. "He will not be here," said Mr. Summerhayes who with Fred Ross was conducting the reception preliminary to the meeting.

Spoke Too Loud.

The reduction of the majority in East Middlesex was made the cause of some rejoicing, but nothing was said about "Abolish the Bar," until Louis Gurofsky popped out of the elevator and in a loud tone sang out "Abolish the Bar" several times as he strolled down the hall. "Sh, Sh!" said Mr. Summerhayes, patting Gurofsky on the back warningly and the noisy one subsided.

There was a general sprinkling of defeated candidates in the gathering.

Last night the fine Collegiate Institute Assembly room was a scene of activity and beauty. The hall was daintily decorated with palms and bunting. The entertainment which pleased those present was given under the auspices of the Girls' Athletic Club. The patronesses were the wives of members of the Board of Education. Various articles were for sale, including paintings, calendars, cushions, etc. The booths were gaily decorated with appropriate colors. The candy booth was draped in white and blue; the ice cream parlour in red, white and blue.

A good musical program was presented, including selections by Miss Mignon Telgmann, Miss Eunice Girvan, Miss Kincaid and others. Mrs. Noble was presented with a bouquet of flowers. The affair was a success throughout.

The "Trial Scene" of the Merchant of Venice was well rendered.

St. Paul's church will have 50 men out, with the George street Methodist a close second in point of numbers.

Song—"The Bonnie Brier Bush," Mrs. A. McArthur.

Song—"We Parted on the Shore," Mr. R. Hendry.

Toast—"Our City"—proposed by Mr. D. Webster, responded to by Mr. J. McKenzie.

Song "Lochnagar," Miss Rowan.

Song—"The Soor Milk Cairt," by Mr. J. McKenzie.

Toast—"The Ladies," proposed by Mr. A. Black, responded to by Mr. W. Houston.

Accompanist—Miss Jean Girven.

Each number of the above programme was well rendered and was roundly applauded by the gathering.

The spacious hall was then cleared and dancing was in order, when all the Scotch lads and lassies tripped the light fantastic till the wee sma' hours of the morning.

There were about one hundred and fifty present.

HUNDREDS ATTEND ST. GEORGE'S BAZAAR IN THE ARMOURIES

Mr. N. W. Rowell the Guest of Honor Last Night--Gave an Interesting Speech

Last night the official re-opening of the very successful bazaar held under the auspices of St. George's church, was celebrated at the Armouries. The ceremonies included a "fan-fare" by the 57th Regt. Band.

The chairman, E. A. Peck, M.P.P. introduced Mr. Rowell, leader of the Opposition in Ontario, who made the opening speech. A vote of thanks was proposed by R. R. Hall, ex-M.P. Sheriff Hall seconded the vote of thanks.

The St. George's Choral Society then sang a chorus.

Mr. Rowell pleasantly referred to Mr. Peck's statement that he himself was a less prominent member of Parliament than Mr. Rowell. One in 84 occupies a less conspicuous position than one in 20. If Mr. Peck would cross over to Mr. Rowell's side of the house he would become much more distinguished. He (Mr. Rowell) was glad to be there because it was represented to him that Rev. Mr. Price was laboring in a Mission church among new arrivals from the Old Country. We all love the Old Country. One of the speaker's most interesting experiences was a visit paid to the Mother Land this summer. He had walked beside the north country streams where his father had fished, and over the moors where he had learned to shoot. Those who came from that Mother Land are our brothers. We must surround them here with the same religious influences to which they have been accustomed. The great corporations give them transportation; the financial institutions and manufacturing industries supply material wants; but it is left to the churches to contribute most largely to the making of the highest type of citizenship. If our task in the church be but simple and humble, the spirit in which it is performed may render it real service to our Lord and Master. It was His hope that the bazaar would be successful, and that the work of the St. George's church would prosper, to the blessing of the whole community of the City of Peterborough.

EARLY BLAZE PROVES COSTLY

Vancouver Warehouse is Burned With All Its Contents

Vancouver, Nov. 28.—Damage to the extent of $150,000 was done by a fire that broke out early to-day in the electric warehouse of Hesten and Gillis, in the centre of the business district. The warehouse is situated on the top floor of the building in which are a number of other concerns which also caught fire in a short time. A hundred men were engaged several hours handling the outbreak.

On the third floor there were five loads of pianos, all damaged by water. In the basement a vast quantity of rope belonging to Messrs McGowan, was more or less damaged. There were also in the basement half a million dollars worth of agricultural implements and produce, part of which was also destroyed, while the Taylor and Belding Company are also heavy losers. Several smaller firms will also suffer.

JUDGE CLEMENT IS FOUND GUILTY, HE MAY LOSE JOB

May Start Impeachment Proceedings Following the Conviction To-day

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—As a result of a decision of the Exchequer Court this morning ordering Judge Clement, of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, to pay back $4,000 traveling expenses wrongfully obtained, with interest, the Government may institute impeachment proceedings. He was accused of having charged up traveling expenses from Grand Forks to Vancouver while living in Vancouver. The court has upheld the charge and ordered the money paid back.

In the judgment handed down today Judge Cassels decides that Vancouver and not Grand Forks was the defendant's residence during the time in question, and that being so the defendant must repay to the Crown the same charged for per diem allowances while in Vancouver, viz.: $4,200, together with interest thereon. On the point as to whether Vancouver was the defendant's "residence," under the Judge's Act, the learned trial judge says:

Legal Fiction No Use.

"In my opinion there can be no reasonable doubt on the question. The words, place of residence must be taken in their plain and ordinary sense. The Judge's Act is a statute as I have mentioned of indemnity for outlay. It never in my judgment, could be twisted by some legal fiction to mean that a judge should be paid for expenses never incurred.

"Personally, I find it hard to understand how a learned judge could come to any other conclusion. The defendant states that he consulted Mr. Justice Morrison. This learned judge was a witness in the case. He is not asked any questions as to this advice. It shows that the defendant must have had a doubt in his mind, and I would have thought, having regard to the previous correspondence passing between himself and the Department of Justice, he would have laid the whole case before them and asked for their view. He did not do so."

Finds Fraud Was Intended.

On the allegations of fraud against the defendant in the information the learned judge says:

"I would have gladly closed my reasons for judgment at this point, but having been pressed by counsel, both for the Crown and the defendant to express views on the second question, viz.: Whether the defendant intentionally endeavoured to deceive the Department of Justice, as to his real place of residence, I must to the best of my ability, give my opinion on this question.

"Since the trial I have perused and reperused the evidence and exhibits, and very reluctantly that the contention of the Crown is well founded, and I am unable to relieve the defendant from the charge."

CONSUMPTIVE AS LODGER

The Housekeeper Was Awarded Damages by the Court

Judgment for the plaintiff was given at Monaghan Quarter Sessions in a case in which Eleanor Gwynne, a boarding-house keeper, sued Mr. Thomas Clarke, merchant, Monaghan, executor of the will of the late Benjamin Clarke, to recover damages for injuries to her premises caused by Benjamin Clarke, when residing as a lodger in the house of the plaintiff, in that he infected the house and furniture with a contagious disease—pulmonary consumption. Judge Johnson quoted a number of decided cases, showing that a person who, knowing that he is suffering from an infectious disease, succeeds in gaining admission as a lodger, either by falsely representing that he is not suffering from an infectious disease, or by warranting that he is not suffering from some particular infectious disease, renders himself liable in damages. The plaintiff was entitled to the full amount of her loss through the disinfection of the room and the destruction of some of the articles, [illegible] and to £20 for the loss of lettings.

Tombstones in Garden

Digging in his garden at Cardiff, a local resident, Mr. D. Evans, unearthed a series of tombstones bearing the date 1876. Mr. Evans was not in occupation of the house, and apparently the garden had not been thoroughly dug up for years. It is believed that the stones are simply memorials, and that the bodies repose in one of the Cardiff cemeteries.

According to Professor W. Stirling, who lectured at the Royal Institution, London, that eccentric individual "Punchinello" is an acromegalic.

This description he applied to persons with certain parts of the body developed to gigantic proportions. Their state was brought about by a tumour in the brain, and as this enlarged so the person grew.

Describing the disease, the professor stated that an acromegalic in most cases could be identified by his large hands and feet and jaw. In some cases a person's tongue grew so much that it became too large for the mouth. Acromegaly did not affect all its victims in the same way, however, for giants abnormal in every proportion had lived at different times.

It was a curious fact, added the professor, that the bones of all such giants remained in their infantile state till their usually early death. It very often happened that, after reaching a certain state of abnormal growth, they became hunch-backed and had a protruding chest. Hence the description of "Punch" as an acromegalic.

A Remarkable Fact

What strikes the man in the street as the most remarkable development of the times is the disclosure that there is a great deal of unclaimed money in the banks.

Collapsible Tubes For Butter

They want butter in collapsible tubes in India. The heat is so intense there that it is almost impossible to pack butter in tubs or tins, as it is fluid almost from the moment it is made. Then, again, it spoils rapidly when exposed to the hot, moist air. This seriously retarded the efforts of the Government to stimulate the dairy industry. So the Director-General of Commercial Intelligence opened negotiations with the makers of machinery for the manufacture and filling of such tubes as are used for dentifrices, vaseline and tooth pastes. One of these manufacturers says the tubes would have to be made of pure tin, as the volatile fatty acids of the butter would act upon lead and copper and form poisons. And such parts of the filling machines as are now made of copper would have to be of porcelain.

A Remarkable Case

A remarkable case has been treated in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary. A married woman, who was a patient there, was operated upon, when no fewer than seventy-three ordinary pins, eleven hairpins, and a small piece of steel wire were found embedded in the bowel. The woman is unable to account for their presence there, the only possible explanation being that for a considerable period she had, during sleep, extracted a pin from her clothes and swallowed it. She is stated to be recovering.

Buttermilk is one of the best of drinks. It should not be taken too cold nor too fast.

As much care ought to be observed in buying buttermilk as in buying sweet milk, as there is just as much likelihood of impurity and dirt.

Chinese in Canada

Altogether there are now about 30,000 Chinese in the Dominion, of whom a little over 20,000 are in British Columbia and some 3,000 in Ontario. The Immigration Department reports that the money to pay the poll tax is being advanced to Chinese either by labor organizations in the Chinese Republic or by relatives who have accumulated a thrifty bank account.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to [illegible], the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1912, [illegible] nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls [illegible] children as in-patients, and [illegible] as out-patients, a total of [illegible], or an average of [illegible] per year. Of the [illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were from Toronto, and [illegible] from other parts of the Province; [illegible] of the total in-patients were cured, and [illegible] were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the [illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were treated for deformities, [illegible] [illegible]

In this Department in [illegible] years nearly [illegible] boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and [illegible] corrected. Most of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Our Point of View

Good-bye, goose! It is now the hen that lays the golden egg.

Two cars of strawberries, the "first of the season," have been shipped from Florida to Chicago. They netted the growers seventy-five cents a quart, and the berries are likely to cost the consumers about that much apiece.

Ontario cabinet officials may claim the title "Honorable" only while in office. The Toronto Globe observes that "it may afterwards be said of them that they were Honorable once but not now."

It is said that the Liberals in Parliament will again obstruct the Navy Bill. If so, Sir Wil-Wilfrid and some of his followers will have ample opportunity to get some more speeches out of their system.

If we are to believe the news from Mexico City—and that is not easy—when the speaker of the Chamber of Deputies does not want that body to transact any business he "looks the deputies straight in the eye," saying there is no quorum, and—well, there is no quorum.

The baseball world is now agog over the round-the-world tour of the famous White Sox of Philadelphia and Giants of New York. There are seventy people in the party. They reached Victoria, B.C., from Seattle on Wednesday, November 19th via Grand Trunk Pacific steamship from whence they sailed the same day for their trip across the Pacific.

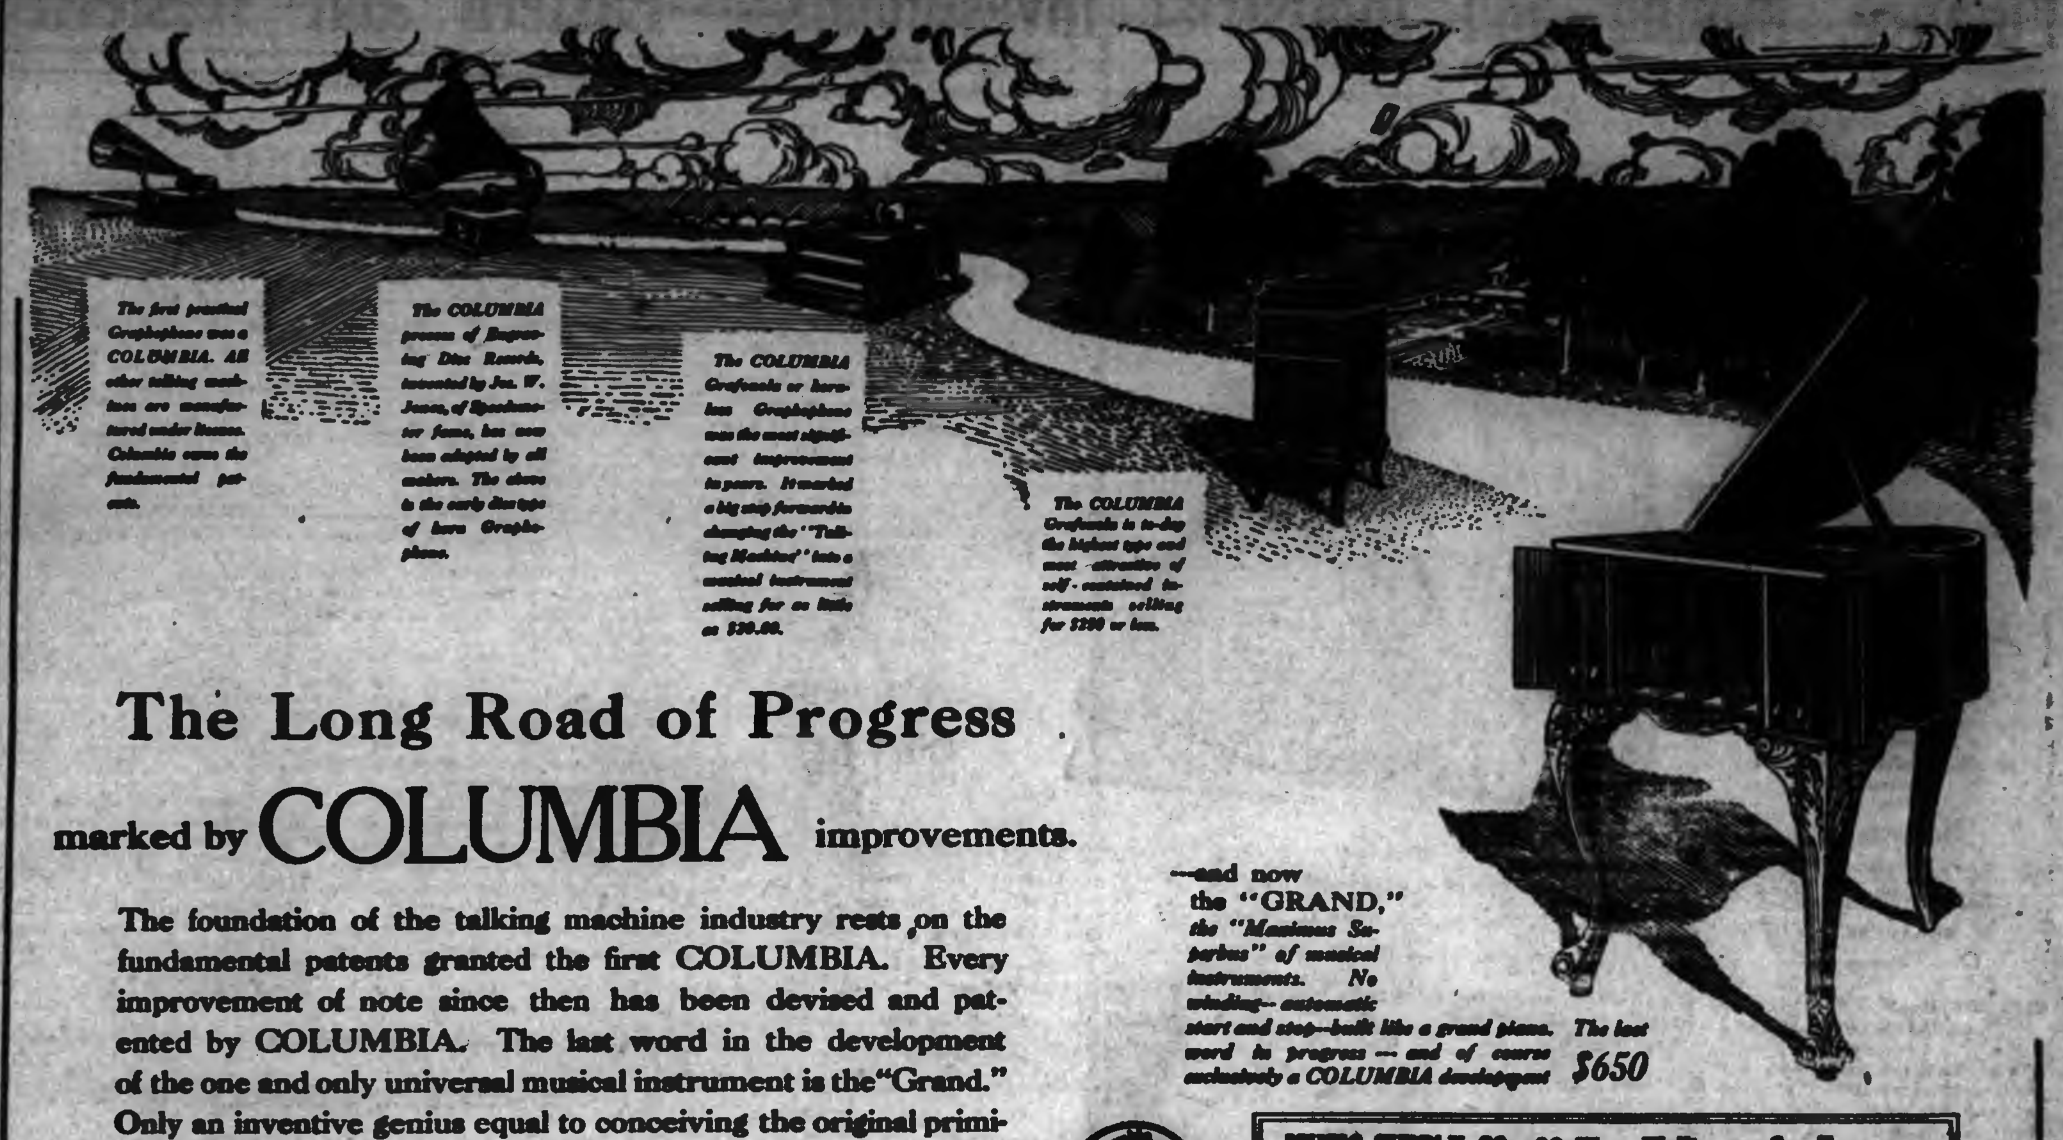
FIFTY BUSHELS OF WHEAT PER ACRE.

Various reports of large crops of wheat in Western Canada are frequently reported, but the last and best that have been made is that reported by Mr. Arthur Broasdon, a farmer at Rutan, Saskatchewan, a point on the Prince Albert branch of the Grand Trunk Railway. Thirty six acres of Red Fife Wheat yielded forty-nine bushels to the acre, and forty-eight acres of Marquis yielded fifty-two bushels per acre. The success is all the more remarkable from the fact that Mr. Broasdon when he came to Canada from England eight years ago was quite inexperienced in farming, and had lived all his life in the heart of London.



The first practical Graphophone was a COLUMBIA. All other talking machines are manufactured under license. Columbia owns the fundamental patents.
The COLUMBIA process of Engraving Disc Records, invented by Jos. W. Jones, of Speedometer fame, has now been adopted by all makers. The above is the early disc type of horn Graphophone.
The COLUMBIA Grafonola or hornless Graphophone was the most significant improvement in years. It marked a big step forward in changing the "Talking Machine" into a musical instrument selling for as little as $20.00.
The COLUMBIA Grafonola is to-day the highest type and most attractive of self-contained instruments selling for $200 or less.

The Long Road of Progress

marked by COLUMBIA improvements.

The foundation of the talking machine industry rests on the fundamental patents granted the first COLUMBIA. Every improvement of note since then has been devised and patented by COLUMBIA. The last word in the development of the one and only universal musical instrument is the "Grand." Only an inventive genius equal to conceiving the original primitive machine and this latest elaboration of it can hope to devise further improvement. That means that when it does come it will be marked COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA.

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These conditions are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to [illegible], of [illegible] River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had sour stomach and indigestion. At night I would often waken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation. I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised.

NOTHING HELPED.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

UNITED STATES TO INVESTIGATE HIGH PRICES.

Apparently the complaint of the National Housewives' League, to Attorney General Reynolds had a quick response, for already it is stated that he has started an investigation of charges that eggs, poultry and dairy products are heaped into cold storage warehouses with purpose to maintain high prices and to force them higher. If evidence of a conspiracy for this purpose can be found criminal prosecution will be instituted. Also restrictive federal legislation is probable. A bill is pending in the house of representatives to prohibit interstate transportation of any food products kept in cold storge more than ninety days.

The cold storage system can be, of great economic value, helpful for the even distribution of otherwise perishable food supplies, beneficent in its legitimate effects. Unfortunately, however, it has offered much temptation and inducement to monopolize or "corner" necessaries, with result of increasing the cost of living. Many of the states have adopted laws to regulate cold storage, but they seem to be insufficiently radical, or else are not forced adequately.

Another congressional investigation of meat prices is also proposed. The navy department has been buying Australian fresh beef in large quantities at a lower price than the American packers would sell it, and corned beef at eight cents a pound less than it can be had in the United States. If the navy department can procure good meat so cheaply, why should not the public have the same advantage? Congress will be asked to determine this interesting question. Here is a lesson or two for Canada.

PUPLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

NOAH UP-TO-DATE (?)

Editor Morning Times

The old gentleman who writes the editorials for the Examiner thinks because he came out of the Ark, that he knows something about canal barges and swing spans. I hope he is satisfied now that Mr. [illegible], the well known barge builder, and all the other river men, have pointed out that the centre span is the proper span for a swing. Let me tell the Examiner also that an opening that is too wide is worse than an opening that is not wide enough. The worst thing that could happen is a swing that is large enough to allow barges to bump from side to side.

Mr. [illegible] truly points out that the Grand Trunk swing at the locks which is just a short distance above the dam, is only [illegible] feet in width. This is the proper width for canal barges, especially in a current.

Yours truly,

Reader.

"THE MOTHER."

(Published by Request.)

(The Westminster Gazette offered a prize for the best poem on women, awarding it to the writer of the following strong and beautiful verses, entitled The Mother. The author is Ethel Fortescue Moresby.)

I had to stoop to do the tasks—the tasks of love,
The bread to break, the suckling babes to softly fold,
The little feet to guide, the little hands to hold.
My thoughts were ever busy and mine eyes looked down.

I had to kneel for all the toil—the toil of love,
But glanced sometimes to [illegible] my dreams made ever rose.
To where my dazzling white outskyed the Alp of snows.
My hands were ever busy and mine eyes looked down.

The toil was very heavy for love's sake—for love's.
Myself, my thoughts, and all my longings were enthralled.
No more to me, in dreams, the old voices called,
My hands were ever busy and mine eyes looked down.

Wayweary, bent, I 'neath my cross—my cross of love,
Nor glanced I more at skies my dreams made ever rose;
My summit Alp of dream that other Alp outsnows,
Of me love asked so much, love bore me faintly down.

My daily toil possessed, I sang no more of love.
At last the little feet could run—could run alone,
At last the little hands withdrew from out mine own.
Perhaps the travail for them — eyes that once looked down.
[illegible]
I can arise, a little faint, love's tasks all done,
And once again do I possess mine own—mine own,
I hear the voices and the witchery windblown,
I can look up once more and see the sun—the sun!

Nothing on Tariff Affairs.

Washington, Nov. 28.—Mr. Borden is here to-day visiting President Wilson and Secretary Bryan.

To an inquiry as to the possibility of negotiations between Washington and Ottawa regarding changes in the Canadian tariff or the renewal of efforts to secure reciprocity arrangement between the United States and Canada, Mr. Borden said that he had no such purpose in mind in his present visit to Washington. He did not care to make any prediction as to what was likely to happen in advance of a formal consideration of the subject by the Canadian Government.

Mr. Borden paid a visit to President Wilson at the White House at 11 o'clock in company with Secretary Bryan, who called for him at the British Embassy.

Statue of Lord Mount Stephen for New C. P. Ry. Terminal

Lord Mount Stephen had no desire to see his statue erected in Montreal and at first refused to give Mr. Lecsore, the sculptor, sittings, saying that the monument of a great man should be the work he himself had done. His Lordship only consented when Sir Thomas Shaughnessy personally assured him that there was a general desire on the part of the C. P. Ry. to thus honor him and that he, Sir Thomas, insisted on the work being done and asked him to give sittings. Several sketches and studies of Lord Mount Stephen were then made and have been exhibited at the Montreal Art Association Galleries.

Lord Mount Stephen was so pleased with the result that he had several replicas made for himself and his family.

The statue, which is nine feet in height, is the largest portrait of its kind, being of a living man, that has ever been sent over to Canada from England; it shows the first president of the Company standing in an easy and natural position in the clothes he habitually wore and with the slight stoop of the shoulders that is so characteristic of his Lordship. Being done in 1913, it is a portrait of him as he now appears, but though many years have now elapsed since Lord Mount Stephen was actively connected with the C.P.R., and even with Canada, his appearance has but little changed and the expression of his features is as kindly natured as ever.

From the marble pedestal at the end of the waiting room the Figure will look down on the passengers waiting for the moment of departure of the train, and perhaps serve to remind them of the great obligation they are made to the man whose genius and integrity brought the Canadian Pacific Railway safely from ocean to ocean.

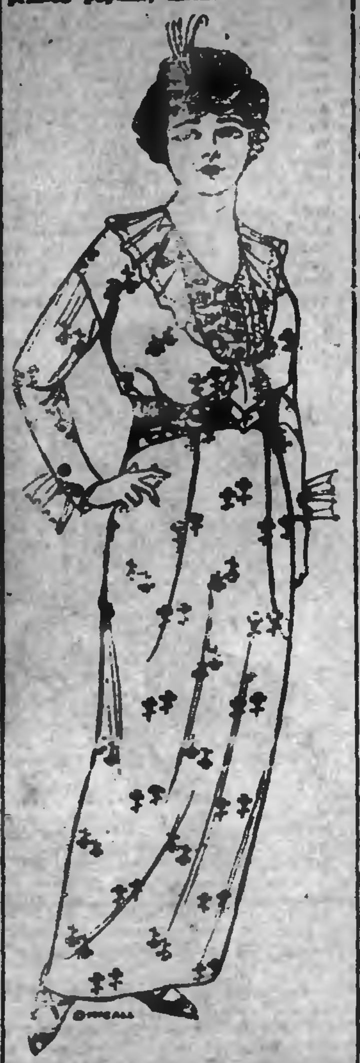
FASHION CORNER

Quite as we might have expected, there is on foot a revival of prints. The quaintness of pannier styles, of flounces, and ruffles, simply demand for expression these delightful "old-timey" textures. Here and there has cropped up in Fall importations a gown made of printed silk or muslin hinting broadly of styles which will not really arrive until Spring. Manufacturers, quick to grasp the possibilities of this obvious trend of fashions, have prepared to meet the coming demand materials of rare charm. Printed crepes, crepons, charmeuse foulards, chiffons, marquisettes, printed poplins, linens and muslins, are among the lovely materials, with which merchants will pile high their shelves once the heavy serges and satins, fur-cloths and plushes of the Winter have been disposed of. Even now at your favorite store you may find one or two examples of printed crepe or crepon forecasting the fashions to come. If you are choosing the material for a dancing-frock or afternoon gown, either of these will be a wise selection, as it can be absolutely depended upon to remain in fashion during the Spring and Summer.



A Figured Poplin Gown Typifying the Revival of Prints.

The new prints, while resembling to a marked degree the textiles of "mother's" and "grandmother's" time, do not duplicate them. Old-time prints, if you will recall, were more or less connected in design. The little blossoms were brought together by an abundance of foliage or by the intricacies of tracery. Quite on the contrary, the new prints show prim little nosegays or lonely little bloom scattered far apart on a plain ground. The foliage is in every instance reduced to lowest terms; some of the flowers being without foliage of any kind, others showing one small leaf precisely placed on one side or the other of the short stem. The colors of the flowers are vivid, and the general impression created quite in accord with the decorative idea now so pronounced in dress.

Our first illustration shows an afternoon gown made of printed poplin really a Spring fabric, but one which an enterprising merchant recently placed on sale with a view to stimulating business. The ground is white, and on it are scattered in series of two, highly conventionalized daisies, dark blue and rose colored, with short black stems, having a little black dash on each side to simulate leaves. The fabric was almost ridiculously small in price, fifteen cents a yard, yet remarkably smart and effective. The blouse has the fashionable drop shoulder and long sleeve, finished with a short vertical frill at the hand. The vest is of lace, and the deep neck frill of chiffon. The simple drapery of the skirt is well adapted to the unassuming character of the fabric. About the waist is loosely drawn a girdle of blue and rose silk.

Another fabric in which marked interest is manifested, if so airy a tissue can be called fabric, is tulle. This is being used, principally in black, for neck trimmings for tunics and flounces, and for wide pleated collars [illegible] a [illegible] flaring bow directly at the back of the waist. A model lately imported showed a large, bow-[illegible] arranged [illegible] of tulle just below the waistline in the back, [illegible] the [illegible] and [illegible] a new [illegible] which [illegible] with us in another season. Tulle is used for theater wear, [illegible] and [illegible]. The [illegible] in the second picture is the [illegible] of the agaric which fashions the blouse. It is called the "candy stripe" and is not unlike the stripe which wound around the candy stick of our childhood days. The material comprised stripes of blue, white, brown, rose, lavender and green, irregular in width, and arranged in various color successions. Trimmed with black fur, and worn with a plain green velvet skirt, the effect was unusual and charming. The model represents a simple Russian blouse, worn with a two-piece skirt—a style which, for all its smartness may be safely essayed by even an amateur dressmaker.

The skirt, you will note, is somewhat short. Shorter skirts, have, by the way, become an established style. Fashionable women are having their garments made to clear the ground by full three or four inches, and sometimes considerably more. This affords an excellent opportunity for the display of the fancy footwear, of which many attractive types are shown. Boots made to order, with cloth tops, matching the fabric of the skirt, are the most recent of high novelties.

As early as last August, we heard rumors of the possible revival of capes. At the French races gaily-lined capes were introduced as a trimming motif with some of the most attractive gowns, but it is not until this moment that the cape has actually crossed the seas. Last week we noted a very handsomely-gowned woman who had completed her toilette of rough black silk crepon with a short black velvet cape. It accented the low neck-line of the gown, and was finished absolutely flat. Coming just below the elbow, it sounded a very new and distinctly chic note. This is another style which will probably await Spring for fruition, since the cape as it is now presented is not a practical garment for cold-weather wear.

The fantastic tendency so pronounced in woman's apparel is gradually extending to children's wear, and little boys, strange to say, seem to be the greatest sufferers at present. The extremes to which manufacturers—most of them foreign, we are glad to record—have proceeded are evidenced in garments recently displayed by the exclusive shops. Little waistcoat suits were shown with short, tight trousers and semi-fitted coats closing in sharp backward-sloping lines over realy-and-truly waistcoats made of plain or fancy pique. Seaman suits, also with old-fashioned tight trousers, were fully rigged with rows and rows of brass buttons. The height of absurdity was probably reached, however, in soueve suits of white bengaline. These had close trousers ending in narrow black satin bands, which finished at the outside of the knee in fairly large black satin rosettes. Over the soft, beruffled, white silk blouse was worn the regulation souque jacket of white bengaline braided in black. The only saving feature of these suits was that they were too expensive ever to become popular. Less extreme was a straight-hanging, black velvet dress for a very small boy, which was girdled just under the arms with a wide black silk sash ending in a big bow at the left side-front. The Oliver Twist is a quaint suit, seemingly, however, somewhat inappropriately named, as poor Oliver never boasted of [illegible] or luxuries. It has short, close trousers, buttoning with large buttons very high upon a waist, and blouse [illegible], but without any [illegible]. Usually both trousers and waist are velvet or [illegible], and a sash is sometimes [illegible].

ORDER OF THE THISTLE

Knighthood Conferred by the King on Lord Haldane

The King directed that Lord Haldane of Cloan be appointed a Knight of the Thistle, in succession to the late Earl of Crawford.

The Thistle is one of the most coveted orders of knighthood, and dates back several centuries. Its Knights number twenty-three. They include the King and the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Argyll, the Duke of Buccleuch, the Marquis of Zetland, Lord Aberdeen, and Lord Rosebery.

The Poteen "industry" in Donegal, which it was thought had been stamped out, would seem to be revived. Two captures of stills have been made by the Inishowen police. The last was discovered in the mountain district of Glengad. All engaged in the "industry" made good their escape.

MADE THE JOKE COMPLETE.

Mrs. Brown Took Advice That Was Good, and Also Had a Little Fun Out of Incident.

Mrs. Brown, telephoning to a friend one morning, happened to say:

"I have such a bad sore throat. I'm afraid I cannot go to that dinner party tomorrow night."

Just then something went wrong with the connection, and she heard a strange voice break in:

"Gargle your throat with baking soda, and I think you will be able to go to your dinner."

"Who is this speaking?" asked Mrs. Brown, startled.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered the voice.

Mrs. Brown was greatly amused, and decided to try the remedy. Her throat improved and she went to the party. During dinner she chanced to overhear the gentleman opposite say to his neighbor:

"I had an amusing experience the other morning. I was telephoning and the wires became crossed. I suddenly heard a lady's voice say: 'I have such a bad throat I shan't be able to go to that dinner party.' Just for fun, I broke in and said, 'Gargle your throat with baking soda and you'll be all right.' The lady's voice in reply sounded rather surprised. I wonder if she took my advice."

Mrs. Brown was greatly tempted to reveal her identity as the heroine of the episode, but she decided that she could get more fun another way. She made careful inquiry of her hostess as to the gentleman's full name and address, and next morning called him up. When he answered she said:

"I just wanted you to know that I took your advice, gargled my throat with baking soda, and was able to go to the dinner."

"Who—who is this speaking?" came an astonished voice from the other end of the wire.

"Oh, that you will never know," answered Mrs. Brown, laughing, and rang off.

A new flying record was made by the French aviator Gilbert. In less than eight and a half hours he flew from the north of France to Vittoria, in Spain, a distance of 512 miles, without once alighting. From Paris to Bordeaux, a distance of three hundred miles, he travelled at an average speed of 74 miles an hour, and during the latter part of his journey he flew at an altitude of 10,000 feet in an endeavor to avoid a strong contrary wind. After covering in under eight and a half hours what it takes an express train fifteen hours to accomplish, he was so little fatigued, that after a two hours' rest he resumed his flight, and added [illegible] miles to his record—making [illegible] miles in less than eleven hours.

SAVED BOXING GAME

Referee Eyton Tells of a Quick Decision With Much at Stake

"I'll never forget the Wolgast-Memsic fight," said Charles F. Eyton, who has refereed all the big bouts in Los Angeles for years, to a newspaperman recently. "The [illegible] three minutes of my life, that meant new life or death to boxing in California, were those of the ninth round, March 17, 1911. The boys were to box 20 rounds. The gate approximated $12,000. A deputy, representing the district attorney and accompanied by 50 detectives, announced that if the law was broken, all would be arrested.

"The fight was a test case and the fate of California boxing was at stake.

"With this on my mind I sent Wolgast and Memsic on their journey. I decided the public deserved first consideration. The men who paid should get their money's worth; the champion and challenger must get justice; the law must be adhered to. Only one who knows boxing can appreciate my position.

"With the end of the eighth, I saw that, barring a lucky blow, Wolgast would win. I was deciding when to stop the bout. The detectives had been talking to each other excitedly. A knockout meant the death of boxing. Knowing this, I wanted to do justice to George Memsic. Not to save the game would I have stopped the contest while he had a chance.

"With the ninth, Wolgast started body punishment, fighting Memsic about the ring. The detectives started jumping up again and I had to think quicker than ever. After a hot exchange I saw Memsic stagger, hands down, knees sagging and Wolgast starting to swing. Memsic's hands went up, but before Wolgast could land I stepped between them.

"The excitement was intense, but my action brought its own reward. In the legal proceedings which followed, we were vindicated and boxing is stronger in California than it ever was."

Presiding at a meeting at Devonshire House in connection with the "Duty and Discipline" movement, the Earl of Meath said: "We have in the King one who recognizes the meaning of the words 'duty' and 'discipline.'"

On one occasion, said the Earl, the King, then a Prince and naval officer, arrived at Gibraltar, and rowed for an hour and a half in the teeth of a gale in order to pay respect to a senior officer.

On another occasion an order was given to the Prince to run out a torpedo-boat when he much desired to attend Goodwood Races. His senior officer suggested that perhaps the Palace could arrange with someone else to take his place. "No," he replied, "if it is the same to you, sir, I would rather do my duty."

The object of the Duty and Discipline movement is to bring home to parents and teachers the danger of allowing children to grow up without control.

Remains 3,000 Years Old

The Vale of Conway Antiquarian Society engaged men recently to excavate a cone-like mound or hillock near the Old Turnpike, Llangerniew road, Wales. An urn was unearthed, which on being opened was found to contain the dust and bones of a human being, who it is conjectured existed some 3,000 years ago.

Diabetes

[illegible] WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE. TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. [illegible] I am [illegible] in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by the discovery, and use of this medicine.

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

A PRIVATE MENAGERIE.

Few people visiting Cobtree Manor, Maidstone, a stately old country house, in quiet and beautiful surroundings, would imagine that they had alighted on the largest private menagerie of caged animals in England. Yet this is the case, for Mr. T. R. G. Tyrwhitt-Drake has for some years been assiduously adding to his collection of wild animals, until now it is by far the most remarkable private menagerie in the country. Mr. Tyrwhitt-Drake, who is the hon. secretary of one of the strangest clubs in existence—the Amateur Menagerie Club—an exclusive organization, with Lord Lilford as its president and the Earl of Altamont as vice-president, which is devoted to the purpose of encouraging the keeping of wild animals and birds by private individuals, has always been passionately fond of animals of all descriptions. At present the menagerie includes over eighty animals, including two lions, four lionesses, four bears, three leopards, five wolves, four dingoes, two wolf-dog hybrids, two jackals, two camels, two lemurs, a spotted hyena, a sacred Indian bull, a three-legged duck, and any number of strange cattle and birds.

An interviewer who called at the Manor discovered Mr. Tyrwhitt-Drake and a somewhat fierce-looking lion seated together on a garden chair enjoying the sunshine.

"I beg your pardon," said the journalist hurriedly; "I had no idea you had company," and prepared to retire.

"Please don't go," observed Mr. Drake; "I'm just going to bring a leopard out."

There was no escape from so pressing an invitation. When the lion had been taken back to its cage a very beautiful young leopard came out and, after a spasmodic effort to seize a little white domestic cat that was purring in the neighborhood, held a sort of private and whispered conversation with its master. One of the prettiest sights is provided by two benevolent-looking lion cubs, who share a cage with a retriever dog. The animals play together all day long, but the little retriever has established a complete mastery over the young lions, and is an acknowledged "boss" of the cage.

Money Found by Firemen When Clearing Away Rubbish

While the Girvan Fire Brigade were clearing away the rubbish in a cottage in Greenside, Girvan, which was destroyed by fire, they had a remarkable find. Hidden in one of the fireplaces they discovered $30 in notes and about $30 in silver, a single leaf of a bank-book, and charred fragments of bank deposit receipts with a face value up to fully $1000. The owner and occupier of the house is a maiden lady, who lives by herself. She owns considerable property in the town.

TO HUNT FOR ANDREE

Norwegian to Probe Stories Concerning Explorer's Fate

Christian Leden, the young Swedish explorer, who brought back from Northwest Canada in 1911 Eskimo stories which apparently threw additional light on the supposed fate of Professor Andree, will spend another year and a half or two years in exploration of that far northern district. Mr. Leden said he expected to obtain further information regarding Andree, the scientist, who started in a balloon for the North Pole in 1897.

The explorer has a full description of all instruments in Andree's equipment, and will be able to identify any such articles that he may find in the Esquimos' possession. The stories previously told him related to the descent from the sky of a "large bubble" containing two people, thought by the Eskimos to be devils, one of whom was killed by arrows and the other left to his fate when the natives became frightened and fled.

Lindsay has organized a branch of the Canadian Club, with Judge Harding in the chair. It is to be hoped that the Lindsay club will be as successful as the local branch.

Coloured Miner Weds the Girl With Whom He Eloped

The ending of the love story of a black man and a white girl was foreshadowed at the London Sessions when a good-looking young man of color, named George Wilson, pleaded guilty to causing bodily harm to David Davies. For a long time, said Mr. Macdonald (for the prosecution) the two men had worked side by side. Then Wilson fell in love with Davies' daughter, a girl of eighteen. Her stepmother was in favor of the match, but nothing could persuade the father to give his consent. The lovers eloped and went to London, where Wilson went to a registry office, and paid the necessary fees. Before the wedding had taken place, however, the girl's father followed in pursuit, and, having obtained their address from his wife, he discovered the couple at an hotel in Hammersmith, from which the marriage was to have taken place. There was a scene, and Wilson, in a fit of temper, struck "the typical old Welshman" on the jaw, which was fractured. Prior to the elopement, added counsel, the girl was warned that marriage would result in her being turned from home, but she was still determined to marry the man she loved. The marriage would now take place as soon as possible—probably next day, for the father had withdrawn his objection. At first he was heart-broken, but he had told counsel that he had a vision. "The Lord appeared to me last night," he said, "and told me to show in a Christianlike way to this girl and man, and to forgive him, although he is black."

FISH FOR CATTLE

The use in Germany of fish meal as a supplementary food or relish for young cattle, and especially for pigs and poultry is continually expanding, according to a report made by Mr C. F. Just, Canadian Trade Commissioner at Hamburg. Germany's entire consumption is imported, chiefly from the British Isles and from Norway. These imports within five or six years rose from a few hundredweights to nearly forty thousand tons worth on an average from $45 to $50 per ton. Difficulty is already experienced in meeting the rising demand for fish meal, and German importers are looking for a fresh source of supply.

In England the use of fish meal is spreading rapidly, and the same article is extremely valuable as a fertilizer.

Fish meal is produced in various kinds and mixtures according to the varieties of fish that are utilized. White fish, including the cod family, provide the best article, and with the lowest percentage of oil. Next comes herring, which are taken in vast quantities purely to convert into meal by the factories in Norway. In England and Scotland the offal of all kinds of fish and the refuse and surplus fish indiscriminately are most successfully manipulated. White fish and cod are dried in the open air, and subsequently subjected to hot air blast in cylinders, the resulting product is finally ground into a coarse meal. Herring are first steamed, then pressed, dried and ground into a fine meal.

The conditions surrounding the Canadian fisheries on the Atlantic are, it is believed, favorable for the establishment of fish meal plants, whereby a commercial use can be made of the superabundant fish and offal.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stays in One Place—It Spreads Rapidly—Often Ruins Health Completely.

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it moves rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essences of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmund J. Christian, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the Inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size, guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Dr. McGrath Gave Evidence.

At yesterday's police court, the case of an elderly blacklister, was heard. Dr. J. M. McCullough was the first witness called. This was a mistake as it was the other Dr. McCullough who was wanted as witness. Dr. McGrath said he gave a prescription to the blacklister for six ounces of brandy for the treatment of asthma. He justified this action by producing a medical work. He only gave one prescription. The prescription was given on Nov. 17th and defendant was charged with having been under the influence of liquor on Nov. 21st. Mr. Gordon, for the defendant, admitted that defendant was on the blacklist and that he may have been under the influence of liquor and drugs prescribed. P. C. Phinister said defendant was under the influence of liquor when he was called to the latter's house. Defendant, in the box, said when he was fined, a few days ago, for a similar offence he got a prescription for brandy as he required it badly. He could not remember who supplied the flask of whiskey found under his pillow. The defendant was remanded for a week's sanitary cure at Castle [illegible].

LICENSE DETECTIVES GET BAD SHOWING UP IN COUNTY COURT

Judgement Reserved in Norwood Liquor Case Against Hotelman King

A session of the County Police Court was held yesterday afternoon in the County Council Chamber, with His Honor Judge Edmison, County Magistrate, presiding. Mr. D. M. King, proprietor of King's Hotel, Norwood, was charged with selling liquor in a local option locality. The offence was alleged to have been committed on the day of the Norwood fair. Mr. Gordon acted for the defence and Mr. Moore for the prosecution. His Worship remarked "There seems to be a good deal of excitement over this case, more than usual."

Harry Solomon, the first witness, refused to take oath unless he kept his hat on, as he is a Toronto Jew. He is a special officer for the liquor license department, Toronto. His duties are to watch for violation of the Liquor Act. He went to Norwood via Peterborough. Arthur Green, a similar officer went with him. He went to Norwood on Oct. 14th, by the midnight C.P.R. train. He went to King's Hotel at 4 a.m. A boy in the hotel told him he could give him and Green a drink. He went out to the fair until 6 p.m., taking pictures. He then went to King's Hotel. King was behind the bar, with two others. Arthur Green asked him to take a drink. He had whiskey, but did not see the bottle. A stranger bought another drink. witness and Green took whiskey. Another stranger bought whiskey.

To Mr. Gordon, witness said he is a Russian Jew. He came to Peterborough on the C.P.R. local. He was not intoxicated on the train. He did not know whether Detective Green was drunk or not. He went to the White House and had "a little drink." Green had a row with a Chinaman. A policeman met Green at the station at midnight and claimed that Green had not paid for a meal. He got a bottle of whiskey from a man in the fair grounds. Next day he went into a drug store and bought bromo-Seltzer. Green had a bottle of whiskey in his possession.

Arthur Green, a license inspector, said, whilst en route to Norwood, he stopped off in this city. He had some drinks in the city. He had trouble at the Chinese restaurant. He and Solomon took a camera to the fair grounds. He and a stranger treated at King's Hotel. He had four drinks, mostly whiskey, he did not remember what the fourth was. He took a bottle of whiskey given him at the fair to his room. He had seven whiskies that afternoon.

Mr. G. D. MacGregor, next witness said he saw the last witness in the Chinese restaurant. Green was intoxicated. Green "butted in" to the party at MacGregor's table.

P. C. Patterson, said both Green and Solomon were intoxicated at the C.P.R. station. Green was told he would have to come to the station unless he paid what he owed the Chinese restaurant. Green tried to palm off a story about having paid before. He smelled liquor off both Green and Solomon. Solomon had to help Green to the train.

P. C. Sills said when he first saw Solomon and Green they were fairly sober, but intoxicated later on. The latter acted as no sober man would.

B. A. Huffman, of the National Hotel billiard room, said Green told him he was sobering up after a five weeks drunk. Green was intoxicated. He saw Green run around the corner with a Chinaman after him.

James Rumley, a C.P.R. parlor car conductor, said Green tried to get into his car. He refused him because he was drunk and was staggering.

Tom Jack, a Chinaman, who attends St. Paul's church, said Green came into his restaurant drunk and tried to get out without paying for a meal.

I. Puller, the Norwood constable, saw Solomon in a drug store and asked for medicine as he and Green had been on a big drunk and had been drunk the day before. King's reputation is good at Norwood. He did not think King would sell liquor.

Percy English, drug clerk, corroborated the constable's evidence.

Mr. Beckett, of Norwood, said that Green was drunk at 1.30 a.m.

Mr. King, jr., swore that there was no whiskey in the bar that day. Solomon was drunk and Green had a big bottle in his pocket.

F. E. Hawkins also swore that Green was intoxicated on the night in question. Solomon was led in and out of the bar. He tended bar that day and there was no whiskey for sale.

Mr. King, the defendant, swore that he supplied no liquor to the spotters. Solomon was so drunk when he arrived that he could hardly walk and Green was little better. Green had a bottle on his person and was ordered out of the hotel. Neither Solomon or Green asked for or got whiskey. He swore there was no whiskey in the bar that day.

Several witnesses testified to Mr. King's good character.

Here the Magistrate said: "I do not suppose the prosecution will ask for a conviction?"

Judgment was reserved.

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it with drastic drugs.

Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty cent case from any drug store and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.

Eat and Get Thin

This is turning an old phrase face about, but modern methods of reducing fat have made this revision possible.

If you are overfat and also averse to physical exertion and likewise fond of the table, and still want to reduce your excess flesh several pounds, do this: Go to your druggist (or write the Marmola Co., Farmer Building, Detroit, Mich.) and give him (or send them) 75 cents. For this modest amount of money the druggist will put you in the way of satisfying your ambition for a nice, trim, slim figure. He will hand you a large case of Marmola Prescription Tablets (compounded in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription), one of which you must take after each meal and at bedtime until you begin to lose your fat at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. That is all. Just go on eating what you like, leave exercising to the athletes, but take your little tablet faithfully and without a doubt that flabby flesh will quickly take unto itself wings, leaving behind it your natural self, neatly clothed in firm flesh and trim muscles.

MARLBORO CLUB DANCE WAS A GREAT SUCCSESS

Last night the Conservatory of Music Hall was a scene of revelry and beauty. The Marlboro Club outdid all their previous attempts as hosts. The ball was a great success from every standpoint. Pretty girls with eyes flashing and throwing back, in many cases, the love light thrown at them by their respective cavaliers, gay and light hearted young men of Peterborough bound last night to make a carnival of pleasure for their partners, sounds of music by a splendid orchestra, played in a way that would have made a bronze Jove descend from his pedestal and join the worshippers of Terpsichore, combined to make a night of pleasure for all present.

At midnight a recherche supper was served. The Marlboro Club is to be congratulated on the success of last night's ball.

BRITISH GOVT. WILL BUILD TEN THOUSAND MODEL COTTAGES

President of Board of Agriculture Declared That Lloyd George's Land Bill Will Solve the Terrible Conditions

London, Nov. 29.—That Lloyd George's land reform schemes are in sober earnest has received added proof by the announcement by the president of the board of agriculture Mr. Runciman, that the Government proposes to spend $7,500,000 in building 10,000 model cottages for farm laborers. They are to be comfortable and sanitary, each with a garden plot, and are to be rented at a very reasonable rental. This is only the beginning.

It is proposed in as short a time as possible to see that all the agricultural laborers in the United Kingdom are properly housed. That there is just need for this reform cannot be doubted. Terrible disclosures regarding housing conditions in one of the most beautiful parts of Wales are made in the annual report of Dr. Williams, medical officer of health of Pembrokeshire. In the parish of Clydey alone, a sparsely populated rural district, there have been 70 deaths from tuberculosis in 20 years. In the parish of Maenclochog, the doctor says that, during the same period, there has been a case of consumption in almost every house of the parish. In one cottage in the parish, there have been six deaths from tuberculosis.

Cripple With Rheumatism.

In another cottage, damp and out of repair, the mother is a cripple, with rheumatism, and two daughters and a son have died from tuberculosis. In a farmhouse with 35 acres of land attached, a man, his wife and four children all slept in one room. It is a two-roomed dwelling, with a hayloft, and, during wet weather, the rain pours through the roof and the beds have to be removed to different parts of the room.

THE SILENT WORKERS OF THE LONDON DOCKS

Five Hundred Non-Unionist Cats for a Band of Contented Workers.

London, Nov. 29.—There is at least one section of contented workers in the London docks. They are a silent army. They never strike and never go home. They number at least 500—500 dock cats—and they are non-unionists, too, for they work night and day.

How many horses this little army of cats devour in a year it would be hard to say, but their daily rations must come to over 2 cwt. of meat.

The sheds and warehouses of the London, the East and West India, and the Millwall docks are the happy hunting grounds, for here are stored immense quantities of all the things that mice and rats live for; cheese and doormats and butter and sewing machines and tallow and hides and grand pianos and oil in drums.

A Use Even for Tombstones.

For a dock rat will eat everything except tombstones, and he uses those for sharpening his teeth.

To fight these voracious vermin the port authority has tried poisons galore, and powdered glass, and white lead; only to return to the domestic puss. She alone can keep their death-rate as high as their birth-rate.

"Cats, is it?" said an official—a big Irishman—to a reporter yesterday "Sure!" and led the way to shed AB, where the bales of flax are stored. "Tiger—Tiger—Tiger!" he called and snapped his fingers. There came blinking into the light a huge striped puss, with perpendicular tail, and rubbed her chin on the official's boots.

COST OF LIVING INQUIRY LIKELY BY GOVERNMENT

Montreal Deputation is to See Premier to Ask Investigation

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—It is declared possible to-day that the Government will appoint a Commission to investigate the high cost of living. A deputation from Montreal headed by Mayor Lavalee will wait on Premier Borden sometime next week and ask for an inquiry into the cause of the high prices in Montreal. However, if an inquiry is started at all, it will be made national in aspect.

However, the question of cost of living as well as the whole problem of the tariff is being given careful consideration by the Government even outside the appointment of a commission. The operations of the present Underwood tariff are being closely watched and if there are any adjustments to the Canadian tariff which it is felt are necessary in the interests of the Dominion they will be made.

However, there is a feeling that it will take nearly a year to find out exactly what result the Underwood tariff will have and in the meantime there is not likely to be any general tariff revision.

Political observers at the Capital point out that Sir Wilfrid Laurier has shifted his ground again in his free food campaign. The manufacturers now are not to be touched. there are to be no changes in the tariff in manufactured articles

POLICE CHIEF'S DEATH SHROUDED IN MYSTERY

St. Petersburg, Nov. 29.—A mystery surrounds the death of Gen. Dediulin, chief of the czar's palace police. He died in his official apartment in the imperial palace at Livadia, but so far absolutely the only official mention is that he "died suddenly." It is put about that he died of angina pectoris, which was the death certificate of his predecessor, Gen. Prepoff. Dediulin was an important man in the court camarilla. The notorious Koulia[illegible] of the Kiev Okhrana, and most of the spies who have been fomenting the Jew baiting in the Kiev region for the last couple of years, had him as their champion at court.

MR. MAGRATH OUT OF POLITICS

Was Slated for Cabinet Post Had He Been Returned.

Ottawa, Nov. 29.—C. A. Magrath, ex-M.P., for Medicine Hat, and a member of the International Waterways Commission, has decided to drop out of politics. He has had requests from a number of friends in his old constituency to allow them to put forward his name as Conservative candidate, but has written that he has decided to remain out of politics.

"I think," he explained, "that I can do much better work outside of Parliament than in it."

Mr. Magrath at the present time is a member of the Ontario Highways Commission, a subject in which he is deeply interested.

Premier Borden is a strong admirer of Mr. Magrath and his influence upon his return may be used to get him to re-enter Parliament.

It is an open secret at Ottawa that if Mr. Magrath had been successful last campaign, he would have been invited to take a Cabinet portfolio.

PREMIER AND DR. PYNE GO SOUTH FEW MINISTERS AT QUEEN'S PARK

Lull That Preceeds Rush of the Opening Now Being Enjoyed—Adam Beck Going to England, and May Leave Decision on Street Railway Deal Till After Christmas

Toronto, Nov. 29.—The forces at Queen's Park are enjoying the lull that proceeds the rush of preparation for the opening of the Provincial House, early in the new year. Several of the ministers are away on brief tours to be concluded before Christmas.

Following the announcement of his intention to take a rest, Sir James Whitney, in company with Hon. Dr. Pyne, has left for a visit among some of the southern states. No word has been left as to the date of his return, and it is understood that the condition of his health will alone decide his reappearance in the premier's office at the Parliament Buildings.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, minister of public works, is at the present time in England. His trip was not announced as in the nature of a business inquiry, but it is thought that he will gain personally some data relative to the new good roads propaganda in the province. Provincial Road Engineer Maclean, following an investigation of European roads, suggested several proposals that demanded a more thorough knowledge, and Dr. Reaume will examine some of these during his absence.

Beck Goes Abroad.

Another Ontario minister, Hon. Adam Beck, is on the point of an old country visit. Early in the week the outstanding commission work will be disposed of and Mr. Beck will leave the city. It has been his intention to spend Christmas in England with Mrs. Beck, who has been there for some time.

CONGRESS HEARS WILSON'S FIRST MESSAGE MONDAY

Regular Session Will Have Many Questions to Consider on Opening

Washington, Nov. 29.—The extra session of congress ends to-day. It has to its credit the passing of the Underwood tariff bill, and considerable progress upon the banking and currency reform legislation. The first regular session of the 63rd congress opens at 12 o'clock noon, Monday, when the first annual message of President Wilson will be received.

The message will deal with a number of subjects, including agricultural credits, anti-trust legislation, transportation, and so forth. But little space will be given to a discussion of the currency question. Indeed, it is generally believed that the currency bill will go through the senate before the Christmas recess, and will become a law by Feb. 1. Great pressure is being brought upon senators and members to end the financial uncertainty which is having a depressing effect upon trade and banking conditions throughout the country. The big financiers of the country are now united in the opinion that a bill must be passed, and they are disposed to discourage any factious opposition. Secretary McAdoo has issued a statement to the effect that the vast reserves of the government will be freely used to assist the banks during the trying period of transition which will follow the passage of the bill. Under proper safeguards the government will practically rediscount a large amount of prime commercial paper, while the regional banks are being formed, and the present bank reserves are being decentralized to build up local reserves under the new law.

TANGO OR THE PROMENADE, IN METHODIST COLLEGE HALL

Dances Have Been Held in Victoria, Unknown to Authorities, and Sophomores Tasted joys at an Affair Held Outside

Toronto, Nov. 29.—The low price of $1.75 for the Victoria College conversazione, to be held next week is a good indicator of the waning popularity of mere promenading. When the Rugby Club can charge $5 for their dance, the Meds. $3 S.P.S. $5, Arts $3 or $4; and all of them jammed to capacity, there is little hope for a function which offers nothing exciting.

Numerous recent attempts on the part of the arts students in Victoria College to hold a dance, coupled with the fact that the sophomores have already tasted its fascination by a dance in Aura Lee rink, illustrate to a great extent the new idea entering, or trying to enter, our most conservative Methodist institutions.

It is hardly possible, with the United States already swept by tango enthusiasm and the dancing interest shown by the best society circles of old London that Canada would be left out of the sphere of influence.

A year or two ago the dance was not only under the ban officially, as far as Methodists were concerned, but clergymen frequently made it the subject of very warm sermons, dealing in much detail upon its downward tendencies. Not only have such sermons from Methodist pulpits become obsolete, but the right and necessity of delivering them has been removed with the passing of the celebrated footnote in the Methodist Discipline, which forbade such amusements as dancing and cards.

GERMAN AVIATOR OUTWITS RUSSIAN

Berlin, Nov. 29.—A young German infantry lieutenant was taking part in aeroplane scouting practice on the Russo-German frontier on Monday, when a slight fog arose. A few minutes later the rattle of musketry and a hole in the wing of his machine showed that he had been espied by the Russian sentinels. The lieutenant thought it advisable to descend, and had a very friendly reception from the Russian captain, who regretted that he was unable to settle the affair himself, and must take the aviator and his machine to headquarters, 20 miles away. There being no railway, the lieutenant proposed that the Russian captain take the journey in the aeroplane, and in this way was able to outwit the Russian Captain.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Cloudy and unsettled, and about the same temperature.

HANGMAN 37 YEARS BALKS AT FIRST JOB

Drew Pay During That Time But Now Asks to be Excused

New York, Nov. 29.—Sandy McMickle, the gray-haired executioner of Bermuda, has not hanged a man in 37 years, but has drawn the modest salary that goes with the job. Last week he was notified that he would have to preside at the hanging of a negro recently convicted of murdering another negro. The court fixed next Tuesday as the day of the execution. Sandy asked to be excused because he was old and his nerves a bit unsteady and because he was woefully out of practice.

The authorities decided to let him off and engaged a British soldier, in prison in Bermuda for assaulting his superior officer, to do the job. The soldier, surnamed Piper, said he was willing provided he received freedom, £20 and free passage to England. This was granted, and, it is said by Bermudian passengers of the liner Caribbean, he may not officiate, as the visitors there have asked the authorities to postpone the hanging until April. This is now seriously being considered.

SOUTH LANARK'S FIGHT IS HARD ON PARTY HARMONY

Looks Like There Will Be Three Candidates—Independent Conservative Uncertain

Perth, Ont., Nov. 29.—It looks as though there would be at least three entries in the South Lanark steeplechase to be run on Dec. 13—Next Saturday the candidates must weigh in and otherwise qualify. Dr. Hanna the regular Conservative candidate, will stick, of course, and there is no doubt that Arthur Hawkes will go to the poll. If there is any uncertainty it hinges upon the action of Col. Balderson, the Independent Conservative candidate. Should the Colonel drop out the Liberals may put up a candidate; at least the talk is now that they will not officially endorse Mr. Hawkes. Hawkes is brilliant, perhaps too brilliant for this constituency. The town of Perth is a good, solid, substantial shiretown, but a little set in her ways. Smith's Falls has a less permanent population, with its railway shops and terminals. The rest of the riding is rural.

South Lanark returned the Hon. John Haggart to Parliament in 1872 and at every subsequent election, including 1911. Col. Balderson nearly defeated the old veteran in 1911. To your correspondent he said at the time that he could easily have protested the nomination, but refrained from doing so upon the express understanding that should Haggart be called to the senate, he, Col. Balderson, should succeed him without opposition. The colonel, in 1911, appeared to believe that he could carry the riding against anyone, and he still professes to be of that opinion.

LOCAL COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS ORGANIZE AN ASSOCIATION

Few of our readers, outside the mercantile and manufacturing industries have any idea of the prominent part commercial travellers take in the local community. There are at present some 250 men here who are either commercial travellers or affiliated with that profession.

On Saturday some sixty of these gentlemen met in the Bank of Montreal Chambers to organize a Peterborough Commercial Travellers' Association. Mr. Heywood opened the meeting with a short address. Mr. Adam Hall was appointed chairman and Mr. Whitehouse secretary, pro tem.

Mr. Heywood spoke in favor of forming a local association. He referred to the benefits that would be gained in reducing freight and express charges, and also in getting better hotel accommodation. He noted that the local association would have no bearing on travellers' certification. He thought such an association would conduce towards better fellowship between local travellers.

Mr. O'Brien spoke briefly on freight rates and the influence that such an association might have on the Board of Trade.

Mr. Ackerman next referred to the freight rates. He also spoke of the influence such an association would have on the Council and Board of Trade. He thought the C.N.R. should come to Peterborough.

Mr. Cameron spoke of a former meeting of local travellers held in the Oriental. Such an association, as considered Saturday night could be a great ally of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Perth also advocated the formation of the association.

Ald. Duffus thought the local Board of Trade was not as flourishing an institution as it might be, in fact it was practically a dead issue.

It was decided to charge a nominal fee of $1 a member until the Advisory Board gets together for business.

Officers.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Adam Hall.
President—Mr. Heywood.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mr. Bryan.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Perth.
Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Whitehouse.
Asst. Sec.-Treas.—Mr. Rosenbery.

LAST DAY ST. GEORGE'S BAZAAR JUDGE HUYCKE GIVES ADDRESS

On Saturday afternoon the Bazaar resumed operations. Though the attendance was not large. The ladies were all persistent as ever in their persuasions, and the Rev. Mr. Price was optimistic as usual.

About 8.30 Police Magistrate Dumble took the chair in the centre of the platform. He supported by Judge Huycke, Ex-Mayor Rush, Archdeacon Warren and Rev. Mr. Price. The chairman in a few fitting words introduced Judge Huycke, the speaker of the evening.

Judge Huycke said he came in the place of Sir James Whitney and Sir Wm. Meredith, one of whom was kept away by an unfortunate illness, and the other by unavoidable reasons. He then referred to the success of the bazaar being due to Mr. Price, to the kind help of other churches and especially to the ladies. Some of of the ladies were very grave and some of them very gay (and some of them were both). Some were young and some were younger. (He was going to say something else, but stopped in time). Those learned gentlemen who respectively opened and re-opened the bazaar on previous days could not claim kinder sentiments or deeper sympathy than were felt by himself, a humble member of the judiciary of Ontario in re-re-opening the bazaar for the last closing scene of its career.

After a vote of thanks proposed by Rev. Mr. Price and seconded by Mr. Smith, was carried, Archdeacon Warren was called upon by the chairman. The Archdeacon expressed himself as glad to learn that Mr. Price had discovered the goodness of the Peterborough people. Every other clergyman who came to Peterborough had made a similar discovery. Mr. Price had conferred a favor on Peterborough by bringing the city to the notice of many eminent persons on both sides of the Atlantic.

Before the formal opening a portion of the band of the 57th Regiment paraded George street and played the people into the Armouries. The entire band of 35 performers gave selections during the evening. Among their pieces were: "O Canada" The Overture to Semiramide and The Overture to the Barber of Seville. Between the band selections the piano and Victor Victrolas from the stall of the Greene Music Co., helped to enliven the evening.

The receipts up to Friday night were a thousand dollars. This amount should be substantially increased by Saturday's proceedings; but the total amount of the proceeds cannot be announced, Mr. Price says, until two or three days have passed.

EIGHT-YEAR-OLD GIRL DELIVERED BY MAIL

New Lexington, Ohio, Nov. 29.—When the mail arrived here this morning postoffice employes were surprised to find in it an 8-year-old girl bearing a tag which had been placed on her by New York immigration officials, reading as follows: "This child, Julia Kohan, is going to her father, John Kohan, box 117, R.F.D., No. 4, New Lexington, Ohio."

After a breakfast supplied by the postmaster, the child was taken in care of a rural delivery carrier to the house of her father, who lives six miles south of here. The trip of 7000 miles from Bavaria was made by her alone.

ONE APPLICATION WILL REMOVE HAIRY GROWTHS

(Boudoir Secrets)

No woman need longer tolerate ugly hairy growths, for with a single application of a plain delatone paste it is an easy matter to quickly banish hair or fuzz from any part of the face or neck. Just mix some water with a little powdered delatone and spread this on the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rub it off and the skin will be free from hair or blemish. After this treatment the skin should be washed to free it from the remaining delatone.

LOWER MEAT BILLS

Cheaper Cuts Give Excellent Satisfaction When Properly Prepared

Do you know, Madame, that a 1,000-lb. steer "dresses" only to 800 pounds. And that out of these eight hundred pounds only 200 pounds of meats can be classed as choice cuts?

Do you know that so many people insist upon having the choice cuts always that the butcher has had to keep increasing the price of them to offset the loss which he must sustain from the great surplus of cheaper stuff that often has to be thrown away as refuse?

And yet all the cheaper cuts need is proper treatment to make them tender, nutritious and fine flavored.

Here are some high-class "cheap dishes" as prepared by M. Leperveque, a $16,000 per year Parisian chef:

Chuck Pot Roast

This dish will give good satisfaction if the recipe is followed with care.

Have your butcher cut a chunk of a shoulder and remove the bone. Do not have this too small, as a pot roast should always be of size. Fry it in beef or pork drippings in a deep earthen, iron or granite pan. When brown add to a four-pound pot roast two tablespoons of flour, let it cook three minutes, add three pints of water, two bay leaves, a large onion in which are stuck four cloves, a pinch of pepper corn and three tablespoons of catsup. Let cook gently for one hour and a half, set aside and then skim all fat which arises. Slice meat and serve with gravy strained.

ONLY A LITTLE WORK IS REQUIRED TO MAKE UNDRESSED MEAT TASTE LIKE OVERDRESSED MEAT.
"JOHN'LL NEVER GUESS THAT IT ONLY COST 8 CENTS"

Sliced Chuck Meat, Minute Saute

Ask your butcher to give whatever quantity you deem necessary for your wants of lean chuck as near the short-rib part as possible.

Slice it across the grain of the tissue very thin; have some onion also sliced very thin, some sliced cooked potatoes, chopped parsley, salt and pepper and proceed as follows:

In a shallow skillet have drippings very hot, drop in the sliced meat, fry very quickly, add the onions, potatoes, salt, pepper and parsley. Drain well and add a little cider vinegar to give it a tart taste.

Flank A'T'Enfer

The flank steak has never been accorded proper recognition. Of course, the secret of satisfaction depends on its preparation.

The steak must be freed from all sinews and fat and sliced crossways a half an inch thick. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, baste with a little olive oil and set to boil over a very hot fire, turning only once and keeping it very rare. Serve hot with some fresh butter, a little chopped parsley and a tiny bit of lemon juice.

Postman Walked 136,760 Miles

The oldest rural postman in the Newry district, Ireland, Owen M'Ateer, has retired after a service of over thirty-eight years, performed between Newry and Bessbrook. As his official route averaged ten miles per day, he walked, he calculates, 136,760 miles during his career.

Earl Fined One Penny

The Earl of Longford was, at Kilbeggan, Ireland, fined one penny for having in his possession an unjust weighbridge, the chairman remarking that there could be no suggestion of intended fraud.

Farmer's Drink of Milk

A prominent West Country farmer who was present at the opening of a new co-operative milk depot at Bath declared that he had not drunk a glass of milk for twenty years before attending this gathering. When he had a drink, "for the novelty of the thing," and was delighted with the taste.

Moving Wood Near Cardiff

Rain caused a landslide in the neighborhood of Llangarfan, near Cardiff, a large wood having moved such a distance as to make traffic between Lydmoor and Aberthaw impossible. Mr. Holder, surveyor to the Llandaff and Dinas Powis Council, stated that the wood moved fully 8 feet and the roadway was lifted 3 feet owing to the pressure.

M. de Coubertin, well known for his advocacy and practice of sports and particularly for his patronage of the Olympic games, has invented a new sport, which he demonstrated to a couple of friends in Paris.

It is boxing on horseback. Such an exercise does not appear feasible at first sight, since the "base" is unstable. A horseman can use his sabre, a lance, and even a revolver, but is he not debarred from fisticuffs?

M. de Coubertin solves the difficulty by seating his rider on a wooden horse. The object of this curious experiment is to give the equestrian a good seat. If the steed is well-ridden the body and hands are left free for the "noble art."

The inventor of the system claims that it inculcates the proper grip of the thighs, gives security of seat, and, at the same time, exercises the muscles necessary for boxing. It is two lessons in different arts at the same time.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL
FOR
The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to [illegible], the dollars to thousands, the friends to [illegible]. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls [illegible] children as in-patients, and [illegible] as out-patients, a total of [illegible], or an average of 4,7[illegible] per year. Of the [illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were from Toronto, and [illegible] from other parts of the Province; [illegible] of the total in-patients were cured, and [illegible] were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,[illegible] in-patients, [illegible] were treated for deformities, [illegible] hip disease, [illegible] Pott's disease, [illegible] knock-knees, [illegible] bow-legs, [illegible] club feet, [illegible] lateral curvature of the spine, [illegible] infantile paralysis, [illegible] wry neck, and [illegible] tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Hospital Appliance Shop manufactured [illegible] appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in [illegible] years nearly [illegible] boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and [illegible] corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you [illegible] send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

To Remove Iron Rust

To remove iron rust from white material, wet the goods with lemon juice, rub on salt and put out in the sun. If the first application fails, try it again.

Mix stove polish with equal parts of household ammonia and turpentine, and apply to the coal stove; rub off with a soft woollen cloth.

To prevent white fabrics, such as tulle or silk, choice lace or crepe shawls, from becoming yellow when packed away, sprinkle bits of white wax freely among the folds.

Sugar as a Cure

Sugar is a splendid medicine for the heart in certain diseases of this organ. Dr. Stanley E. Renyer, of London, reported in the "Lancet" the cure of a woman of seventy-seven with "rapid, irregular, feeble pulse, cyanosis and attacks of paroxysmal breathing" by the administration of four ounces of lump sugar every twelve hours, gradually diminishing the dose, for several weeks.

THE PARSON AND HIS PAY

The discovery in one of the great religious denominations that it has in the United States 300,000 ministers, each of whom receives less than $600 a year pay, brings up some interesting reflections. Canadian conditions are believed to be even worse.

Money doesn't measure merit. Some of the finest souls the world has known have been poor, and many of its worst scamps rich. Yet money is one of the standards we have set up for measuring efficiency; it is almost the first that you apply when you set out to hire or buy. Why is it, then, that the rank and file of the ministers are so poorly paid? Is it because the service they apply isn't worth more?

The sceptic who recently wrote what he thought a parson ought to do to qualify for the ministry—namely, work six months in a coal mine, six months in a steel mill, same time in a cotton mill, 30 days in the stokehold of an Atlantic liner, 30 days in a southern labor camp, three months in an aristocratic hotel, and then go thirty days without work, supporting his family in each instance (for to be a well rounded person he should, of course, have a family)—may have meant to be sarcastic. Yet there was merit in his counsel. A parson thus [illegible] in human existence, thus brought into intimate fellowship with the plain folks would probably have a good deal to say in the pulpit that would be worth hearing if his parishioners would let him say it. He would be equipped to give a service which, if he cared to measure it by the dollar standard, would be worth lots more than $600 a year, even if it didn't bring more.

The fact is, no man should preach at all whose preaching isn't worth a great deal more than $600 a year. On the other hand, the fellow who goes into preaching for money isn't worth what he gets, be it little or much. Maybe it's for the best that the pay of preaching isn't so high as lure the dollar chasers in large numbers. Yet we should like to see preachers so big and churches so vital that if the parson's pay was low it was simply because he preferred it that way, so he could use the difference in a way more important than in spending it on himself.

A stingy church and a starved parson somehow don't appeal to us.

Weak, Tired Folks Given New Vigor

STRENGTH RETURNS, HEALTH RENEWED, VITALITY OF YOUTH RE-CREATED

Exhaustion and Bodily Tiredness Every Day Being Turned Into Vigor and Ambition by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

From Chebogue Pt., N.S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Ray[illegible]: “A year ago my health began to fail, I lost my appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when springtime arrived I was in the ‘blues.’ I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and got five boxes at once.

“Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home.”

Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A charming nursery screen can be covered with the prints that the small child loves best.

To take machine oil out of white materials dip the spot into cold water while it is fresh.

Never allow a cooking utensil to stand and dry it before washing. Put cold water in it immediately.

To make an excellent dressing for linoleum take equal parts of linseed oil and vinegar and mix them thoroughly together.

Ices and ice cream will freeze more quickly if a dipper of water is poured over the ice and salt just before the turning process begins.

To renew the lustre of morocco, or any other leather, apply the white of an egg with a sponge.

Use a clothespin to screw a small hook into hard wood. It will make it much easier than if the fingers are used.

Window blinds which have become dull and dusty with age may be considerably freshened by means of a coating of linseed oil. An old brush may be used with which to apply it, the blind being first scoured with soapsuds and then dried before the oil is laid on.

Unused silver will keep bright if laid away in a box of flour.

Varnished wall paper should be washed with a whitewash brush and warm soapy lather. Squeeze the brush lightly after it has been dipped in the lather, and work from the ceiling downward, finishing one patch all the way down before starting upon the next.

PUPLIC OPINION

POLITICAL ORGANIZATION

Roman Church and the City Council—What a Correspondent Says Regarding Recent Events.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—It is humiliating to think of the Mayor and Corporation of the City of Peterborough to all intents and purposes prostrating themselves before the representative of the Pope and the Roman hierarchy, and he in turn with all the duplicity for which Rome and the Jesuits are such accomplished masters, representing his master, the Pope, as “the highest spiritual authority in the world,” and “he stands for peace, justice and righteousness and is ever on the watch in the cause of faith and morals,” calling upon the Catholic people to be mindful of their duties as citizens, to show by their public and private lives that they are worthy citizens, and to remember their duty toward CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY, which in the first place comes from God.

The representative of the “Holy Father,” as Catholics love to call him then proceeded, in the very presence of those distinguished personages with whom he had been exchanging flattering words, to administer a solemn oath to one of his loyal subjects who knelt before him to curse and exterminate from the earth all heretics (that is all who refuse to receive the doctrines and to acknowledge the authority of this unerring church and her infallible head).

The truth is that this a corporation of which the so-called “Holy Father” is the head, is ever undermining all rightly constituted authority, that she as “the great city” of Rev. 17:18 may “have Kingdom over the Kings of the earth,” instead of obeying the inspired Scriptures by the Apostle Peter, “SUBMIT yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake, whether it be to THE KING AS SUPREME or unto governors as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers and for the praise of them that do well” . . . “Fear God, Honour the King.”

History tells us that it was the Jesuits—the Pope's most trusty agents—who originated and carried out to so nearly a successful termination “the Gunpowder plot.” “God manifestly interposed to frustrate this hellish design.”

“Groaning once more under the bondage of Rome under James II. (1685-1688) England sent up another cry to God for deliverance, and the answer was William, Prince of Orange, who came to the throne to maintain the liberties of the nation. By William's accession and the Bill of Rights, the CONSTITUTION OF ENGLAND WAS MADE ESSENTIALLY PROTESTANT.”

Will the Holy Father's representative condescend to explain to the “heretics” what are the duties of Catholic citizens toward a British Protestant throne and a British Protestant parliament? Is it to “SUBMIT” to this CONSTITUTED AUTHORITY? or is it to UNDERMINE and OVERTHROW IT and set up and ESTABLISH a Romanish throne, and bring the British Parliament into about the same box that the unsuspecting Mayor and Corporation of the city of Peterborough were run into?

As humble representatives of the lowly Man of Nazareth, who is now raised far above all principality and power and might and dominion and every name that is, named not only in this world but also in that which is to come (Eph. 1:19-21). To those who were putting Him to the death of the cross, He said “Hereafter shall the Son of man sit on the right hand of the power of God,” (Luke 22:69). In His Name we would remind the King of England (with all loyal subjection) of His words which He speaks from His place of power and authority in the heavens to all the rulers of earth (See Prov. 8:15-17 and 2nd Psa., entire, especially the last three verses).

The guilt of England rulers is very great because they have practically forgotten the history of their nation, and the favours of God which that history records. Dark clouds are arising on her horizon which we fear will become more dark and dense, and nothing but the bright rays of the Sun of Righteousness can disperse them. This best DEFENCE that England and her colonies can make at this present time is not, as the cry has been ringing so long, “Dreadnoughts! Dreadnoughts! Dreadnoughts!!” but in prostrating herself not foolishly and idolatrously before the Pope or his representative, but before the Almighty Ruler of Heaven and earth in whose sight “all nations are but as a drop of a bucket—yea, less than nothing and vanity (Isa. 40:15-17).

“Who caused His wind to blow” and the mighty Spanish fleet of 130 ships blessed and christened “The Invincible Armada” by the Pope (while England in her weakness was under the ban of the Pope's curse), yet with all their pomp and pride they sank like lead in the mighty waters.

During the past 300 years liberty of conscience, liberty of speech and press right of private judgment, an open Bible and the “Gospel of the Grace of God” have been England's glory. Letting these slip from her grasp, her glory is waning!

Are we to deem it a matter of indifference that Rome is again trying to drag us under her curse, to quench our light, and to rivet her chains upon us? God forbid!

Shall the massacres, the fires, the rivers of blood, and the groans of the centuries have been in vain? God forbid!

Let us tell our children what God has done in the past; familiarize them with correct, true AUTHENTIC HISTORY; place Foxe, and De Aubigne, and Wylie beside their Bibles and teach them thus what is the SHAME and the glory of nations.

BIG FEES PAID TO PATTI

Famous Vocalist Was First Singer to Insure Her Voice

From time to time we hear of fancy fees being paid to famous singers, but no singer has earned the money that was paid to Patti when in her prime. During one year alone she made the huge sum of $350,000. At one time it was a common experience for her to make five thousand dollars inside two or three hours.

In 1870 she was paid $48,000 for sixteen appearances at Covent Garden, and when she went on her American tour she received as much as $8,000 a night at New Orleans. Curiously enough no opera star has been paid such a big fee as Patti not to sing. During one season at Covent Garden in addition to the $400 she received at each performance, she was paid a retainer of $60,000 not to sing elsewhere during the particular period. Madame Patti originated the practice of insuring the voice, and she insured hers for $40,000 against total loss of voice, or $5,000 a performance. On only two occasions did she draw the latter sum owing to her inability to appear as a result of indisposition.

The most popular song in her repertoire was “Home, Sweet Home,” which she rendered as no singer has ever done. With regard to this song she related an incident concerning a chef she engaged. One afternoon when he could not be found Madame Patti happened to go into the large concert hall, which she had built at her palatial residence in Wales. “There I found him,” she stated, “sitting in white cap and apron before the grand piano, doing his very best to play ‘Home, Sweet Home!’ His confusion and apologies were too much for me and instead of the indignant speech which I felt on the tip of my tongue, I had to smile, and I had a piano sent to his room, so that while at Craig-y-Nos he might not lack an opportunity for future practice.”

MENDING AN ART

The Housewife Needs to Know How Best to Darn and Patch

Mending is just as much of an art as making. It takes patience and time and skill, to be sure, but once learned it becomes as fascinating as fancy work to the thrifty woman.

Darning stockings is almost a weekly occupation, yet many women never learn to do it well. If the hole is very large a new piece neatly whipped in, by using a stocking darner or door knob, is the best and quickest way of closing the gap, and it lasts longer than darning. Cut your patch exactly the right size and proceed to whip it in with small, firm stitches after it is securely basted.

For uneven rents in bound new gar[illegible] ments [illegible] such as [illegible] is the best thing. Any tailor will sell you a fair sized piece for ten cents, and show you how to apply it. This is especially good for men's garments. For children an extra piece of this goods applied underneath may be needed to strengthen the weak parts.

In every day garments the extreme care need not be used as no one objects to a patch on a working apron or petticoat. These may first be basted in place and then rapidly sewed on the machine. In factory underwear no attempt should ever be made to patch with muslin, for when it is washed it is dreadful. Use pieces of old knit garments and carefully cut the patch to conform with the worn place.

Such small items as buttons in place, button holes kept from getting too large and a stitch or two missing here and there are best done after the weekly ironing. To pin bands together is to wear them out rapidly, while to have every button and hook and eye in place adds to the neat appearance of the garment, and also lengthens its life.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of poor shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a [illegible] of solid worm, and when put in a bucket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, [illegible]

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. [illegible]

TOLD JUDGE THAT YOUNG MAN IN DOCK WAS A GREAT HERO

Hero of the Canadian Wilds Deported and Sent to the Asylum

An old man with a flowing white beard, who cried as he gave his evidence, told the judge at the Old Bailey court in London that a young man in the dock was "as great a hero as any man in the country," and had performed deeds "quite equal to anything that Captain Scott did."

The prisoner was John Dicks, aged 23, a stenographer, who was found guilty of causing of wounding a man named Phillips.

Dicks pleaded that he had been "goaded on by an unknown power," and set out his only possible explanation of "what led me to do such an act" thus:

"Having the misfortune to lose both feet and top joint of right thumb, and being deported against my will from Canada.

"Overstudy and having no prospects, turning out a failure after struggling against odds. Not being able to return to Canada broke my heart and turned my mind at times.

"Man's inhumanity to man."

Dicks said that after he had been in a reformatory he found that he was spurned by his friends. He went to Canada, and when there had the misfortune to get lost in a blizzard, which resulted in the injuries already mentioned.

Then an old man named May told the court what he knew of the accused. He explained his eulogy of his heroism by saying that Dicks was the only one out of a whole gang of men who volunteered to go 126 miles to get the mails.

"He was quite by himself," he said, "without any axe or matches to make a fire with, and he had got some distance through the ice water along the lake when he fell exhausted. He was frozen nearly to death. Some Indians carried him four miles to the missionary camp, and the missionary resuscitated him. Then began an 80-mile journey on a sledge to Winnipeg, and there he lost both his legs."

The jury found that the prisoner was insane and the judge made the customary order as to detention, adding that he would forward a report of the case to the Home Secretary.

PRINCESS AS SWIMMER

Keen Royal Competitor in Bath Club Competition

Among those taking part in the annual swimming and diving competitions at the Bath Club there was no keener competitor than Princess Mary, who has been well named the "open-air Princess." For five years she has been a member of the Bath Club, to which the Prince of Wales also belongs.

The race in which the young Princess took part was that for the Ladies' Challenge Shield. In this the competitors have to swim fifty yards, by breast stroke, and to pass in floating, diving, and fancy swimming. The Princess went through the various tests very well, though she was not placed among the first three.

Amused French Officers

Some seventy-five French naval officers who visited London were invited to unravel the mysteries of the "Entente Cordiale" puzzle, which was presented to each visitor by Major Tudor Craig. This puzzle is of the jig-saw kind, and when put together represents either the Tricolor of France or the Union Jack.

It is the invention of one of the men employed by the Incorporated Soldiers and Sailors' Help Society, which turns out a multitude of things, made by men who have been injured in action. At the Society's Toy Stall several of the French captains purchased sets of English soldiers for their children.

MANY RIOTS ARE CAUSED BY BEAUTIFUL WOMEN

Crowds of Admirers Would Gather for a Glimpse of a Pretty Face

"They can't walk in the park," wrote Horace Walpole of the beautiful Gunnings in 1751, "or go to Vauxhall, but such mobs follow them that they are generally driven away." Elizabeth, Maria, and Kitty Gunning were three beautiful sisters who, coming over from Ireland in 1750, took London by storm.

Equally potent was the beauty of the Countess of Castiglione, who, at her first appearance at a ball given by Napoleon III. at the Tuileries, created such a sensation on her entrance that the dancers stopped, musicians and the strains of the band ceased, guests and musicians all pressing forward in their eagerness to catch a glimpse of the newcomer.

Fanny Murray, who, about the middle of the eighteenth century, was one of the toasts of the town, created such a stir at Tunbridge Wells as to necessitate the formation of a special guard of her admirers, who kept off the crowds that flocked and pressed round her. Indeed, such was the fame of her beauty that from miles around the country folk came in wagons, carts, or any vehicle that could be procured—and when one was not available they hesitated not to walk—that they might feast their eyes on the celebrity from town.

A sensation was created at Toulouse towards the close of the sixteenth century by a paragon of beauty known only to fame as La Belle Paule. Whenever she appeared in public she was at once surrounded by a crowd of men and women belonging to all classes, whose admiration grew to be a positive danger to its object, who ran more than a chance of being crushed to death in the press, as, indeed, was more than one of her worshippers. In these circumstances, appeal was made to the civic authorities, who, after due consideration, agreed to supply her with protection against her too ardent admirers, on condition that she should at certain hours walk abroad so that the public might look upon her face.

WOMEN EMPLOYES

A signalwoman was employed on a line between Morebath and Bampton, in England, for twenty-three years. At other English stations there are women who not only manage the signals, but issue tickets and do all the work in connection with the trains. More women probably are employed on the railways in Russia than in any other European country. There are computed to be between 25,000 and [illegible] women working on the Russian State railways. They act as gate keepers, clerks, and [illegible] [illegible] a year.

INFREQUENT HAIRDRESSING

The Mongolian women have a very odd manner of dressing the hair. Spinsters wear it in a tail but married women arrange it in the shape of elephants' ears. A parting is made in the middle of the head, and then the hair is drenched on each side with a mixture of fish glue and grease. When it is soaked the upper part is spread out so that at its broadest it is about six inches wide. To keep the hair in shape wooden clips are used which when the hair is dry are replaced by silver and golden ones.

The lower part of the hair is made into a plait with a silver or golden ornament at one end to prevent it from coming undone. These ornaments are often set with precious stones, and princesses have sometimes the whole of the plait hidden by them.

As the hair-dressing takes a whole day and the Mongol ladies are lazy and not very cleanly in their habits it is not surprising that they only do it once a week, some once a month and others—pretty well down in the social scale—once a year.

A PERILIOUS POSITION

The office of Grand Vizier of Turkey is becoming as undesirable now as it was 400 years ago under the Sultan Selim, the grim. It was regarded then as a high road to execution, and "mayest thou be Selim's vizier" was a common phrase for "wishing you dead!"

Upon one occasion Selim consulted his viziers as to what should be done concerning his troubles with the Mameluk, ruler of Egypt. His secretary, Mohammed, advised war, and Selim was so pleased that he made him Grand Vizier on the spot. But it required a dose of the bastinado to persuade Mohammed to take on the doubtful honor.

Kaiser Pays for Straight Legs

Wilhelm Burchardt of Tilsit, is out of the hospital in Koenigsberg, Germany, with a pair of straight legs, the present of the Kaiser. Now he will be able to do his military service, and he probably will enter the Guards. When Burchardt reported some months ago for examination preliminary to entering the army as a recruit the army surgeons found him in excellent physical condition, but had to reject him as unavailable because he was extremely knock-kneed. The young man, who wanted badly to serve, sent a petition to the Emperor for aid. The Emperor responded by having him sent to a hospital for an operation, and paid the expenses from his private purse. The operation [illegible] complete success.

FRENCH BUGLER HERO

Taken Prisoner He Blew the Charge Which Led to an Arab Rout

It has been ascertained that the oldest member of the French Legion of Honor is a bugler named Rolland, who lives at Lacalm, a village in the mountains of Aveyron, at an altitude of more than 3,000 feet.

He received his decoration in August, 1844, for heroic conduct in Africa during the skirmish of Sidi Brahim. The French soldiers had exhausted their ammunition, and with his last shot he fired his ramrod, which he had placed in the barrel of his musket, at the advancing Arabs. He stood his ground, and was run down by the Arab horsemen, who took him, wounded and a prisoner, to their leader, the Emir Abd-el-Kader.

The Emir was squatting on a rich carpet under an olive tree. On seeing the prisoner with his bugle he pointed to the small cluster of French troops that were opposing the Arabs, and he asked him if he knew the tune that the Christians blew to order a cessation of the combat. The bugler said that it was the "Retraite."

"Then take your bugle," said the Emir, "and blow the retreat."

Rolland pretended to obey, but, instead of the retreat, he blew the charge with all his might, and the Arab camp was carried. Considering the age of Rolland, who is now ninety-four, it has been proposed to promote him from the rank of Knight to that of Officer of the Legion.

SIMPLE TEA-TESTING

Dr. Alberta Read Did Away With Elaborate Methods

Dr. E. Alberta Read, a graduate of Cornell, and who is the possessor of four degrees, is official tea-taster at the bureau of chemistry in Washington. Laboratories, containing delicate instruments and acids for testing, to say nothing of the salaries of the chemists, used to be maintained to detect adulteration. Suddenly somebody with the voice of authority waked to the fact that these antiquated methods were too cumbersome and the bureau of chemistry was asked to find a short cut to tea-testing.

Dr. Read was the first to find it, and her only tools were such as can be found in any kitchen. "The tea test is quite simple," she said. "It consists of a fine sieve and the tea sifted through it. Then with a spatula or knife blade the particles are pressed on to a piece of white paper and the foreign matter is easily discoverable with the naked eye."

She took down a portfolio from one of the cabinets. "These are the traces of tea adulteration," she said, pointing to telltale blue spots. "It took me several weeks to work this out," she remarked, "but the process has the advantage of being cheap, easily manipulated and quickly done."

Among the superstitions that formerly prevailed was a belief in the efficacy of various parts of a human corpse when applied to the seat of disease. Thus Aubrey, an old writer, says: "'Tis certain the touch of a dead hand wrought wonderful effects. A painter of Stowel, in Somersetshire, had a wen in the inside of his cheek as big as a pullet's egg, which, by the advice of one, was cured by once or twice touching or rubbing with a dead woman's hand (and contra, to cure a woman, a dead man's hand). He was directed to say the Lord's prayer, and to beg a blessing." He was perfectly cured in a few weeks. Aubrey also says, recalls the "Family Doctor," that a bunch-backed child was cured in the same fashion.

Brother's Dramatic Plea

After a long list of convictions for larceny, uttering counterfeit coin, and manslaughter was proved against a Durham miner, Edward Palmer, charged at the Guildhall with attempting to commit suicide, a man in court shouted: "I am his brother. You have heard all that is bad about him, now hear the good." In the witness-box the man stated that his brother had tried to redeem the past. Unfortunately he had taken a drink too much. Palmer was bound over for six months.

A Generous Prince

The Crown Prince of Germany decided to spend the profits from the sale of his book, "From a Sportsman's Diary," in providing a three weeks' holiday for one hundred boys attending the Berlin elementary schools. The boys were selected from the poorest class, and were quartered in the barracks of the Prince's regiment at Langfuhr, near Danzig, which locality combines the advantages of country and seaside.

A QUAINT APRON EFFECT BROUGHT OUT IN A YOKE

Attention to the small things makes gowns interesting this season. The cut of a skirt or blouse, the proper placing of a tuck or a fold, slight things in themselves, but important to the general effect.

An oddly shaped yoke serving to hold the drapery in place distinguishes 7766. Several imported gowns this season showing this apron effect were highly attractive. In this design it may be used or not as suits the individual. Black velveteen with touches of bright blue in the wide silk girdle is the material used. The frock closes in the back, has a drop-shoulder and a two-piece draped skirt.

To make this model in size 36 it requires 4¾ yards of 42 inch velveteen and three-eighths of a yard of colored silk.

Figured charmeuse is effectively used with 7652, which is a smart one-piece dress in peasant design, closing on the side front. The skirt shows just a suggestion of drapery on the sides, held in place by smart little tabs. An inset vest of net instead of the material would add to the dressiness of the model.

An afternoon dress after this design in size 36 requires 5½ yards of 36 inch material.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar whatever. This condition is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in some foods high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am [illegible] in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,

WHEN LACE IS DIRTY

Some Hints as to Washing, Stiffening and Pressing It

Every woman knows the fascination of good lace, and the more delicate and gossamerlike that morsel of fragility may be the more admiration it receives. But real lace or very fine, good lace which may not be real requires great care.

A jar of soapy water—rain water, if possible—is prepared, and in this the lace should be steeped. The jar is vigorously shaken up and down until the lace is clean. Careful rinsing to remove any soap follows and next must come the stiffening process. Starch is unthought of. The substitute is gum-water. A quarter of a pound of gum arabic, melted in one quart of boiling water and strained makes gum-water, and the average proportion used is a tablespoonful to a gill of water.

With white lace a little blue should be added to the gum-water. Dip twice to enable it to stiffen. If gum-water is not to hand, rice-water or sugar-water may be used. For tinting lace that has lost its color through washing, an infusion of tea, coffee, or hay mixed with the gum-water may be used.

After the washing and stiffening follows the pressing. A glass bottle covered with flannel is a good, old-fashioned method. The lace is wound carefully round and round the bottle and left to dry. When dry it appears to have been ironed. Elaborate patterns may be pinned carefully on a piece of flannel, wrong side up, and a heated iron used carefully over every part.

The pinning out is quite a business. The selvedge edge must be placed near the edge of the board and the pins must lie parallel with the edge of the lace. If there are points they must be pinned separately and to the right length.

A lace collar is pinned out to dry with pins around the neckband and in every point. The ironing process starts with the centre and ends with the points.

Insect Pets

A certain well known actress makes pets of huge spiders, and delights in feeding them, attending to their comfort, and generally mothering them and making them as happy as spiders can ever hope to be.

A French comtesse, who is well known for her beauty and her eccentricities, wore as a neck ornament a beautiful scarabaeus beetle. It was tethered too a ring by a very slender gold chain, which allowed the insect to run about on the lady's shoulder. As that shoulder was always bare when the lady wore her beetle, it may be taken for granted that the comtesse had lost—if ever she had it—the feminine horror of anything creepy-crawly.

Wipe the Face Carefully

Don't rub the face with too coarse a towel. Treat it as you would the finest porcelain tenderly and delicately.

CANADA'S BORDER.

Commenting upon the absence of warships and armed men along the boundary between Canada and the United States, the Philadelphia North American published a remarkable article, well worthy of being quoted at considerable length.

"Perhaps history does not present such another case," says the writer, "of two peoples under separate sovereignties, with no purpose or design of governmental unity or even of formal treaty, and yet with so universal a feeling of oneness. No American holds a Canadian to be a foreigner. No Canadian looks upon an American as alien.

"Instead of a feeling of distrust, because we are so rich and populous and powerful, the Canadian feels in that very fact his greatest sense of security; next to the security he places in his own manly self-reliance—a feeling that Americans can understand and respect. They share its inspiration as they shared its common source. For we know that the foundations of the American people and the American republic were laid by a stream of pioneers that poured from those Teuto-Celtic islands of which England is the largest factor.

"What a marvel has been this England! For nearly a thousand years her shores have been inviolate from the foot of an invader, while all the rest of Europe has been crenelated in paths of blood. With an inexorable purpose unparalleled since the Romans marked the earth for their own, the sons of England have driven towards the outer marches of the world.

"Eastward and westward has gone their genius for empire. It subdued the virgin forests and the trackless prairies of North America, and with equal assurance it 'knit up the raveled sleave' of ancient civilizations and imposed order on the chaotic despotisms of India. Then, with undiminished vigor, it turned to the jungles of Africa and let light into the remotest corners of the Dark Continent.

Wherever it has gone it has carried law and has held aloft the ideal of liberty. Freedom of conscience is not an English invention. But out of England have come the men who have spread it over the face of the earth.

"Her parliament is the mother of representative government, and to-day remains the most responsible and the most responsive government on the face of the earth—with the possible exceptions of those improved governments set up in the newer Englands beyond the seas.

"Her language is the vehicle of poetry unmatched since the golden days of Greece. Her Cromwell and Marlborough are the nearest rivals for the crown of the greatest soldier of the modern world. Her sailors, from Drake to Nelson, were on the sea for 300 years what Napoleon was on the land for 15. Her mighty navy is now the most powerful single influence for peace in all the world.

"Back of all this is the firm unyielding English character, with its love for order, its respect for law, its intense devotion to duty, its indomitable will to do what is to be done, its quickness to know the rights of man, and its unyielding courage to maintain them."

Famous Men's Hair

Locks of hair from the heads of three men famous in English literature were sold at Sotheby's. That of Milton realized only $14.00, Dean Swift's brought no higher bid than $8.00, and the tress of Dr. Johnson was knocked down for $7.16.

A curious phenomenon is frequently seen on the Panama Canal. At times the Gatun Lake has not a speck of any kind on its surface except for an occasional white-capped wavelet; an hour later the surface is seen to be dotted with small green islets. These small "floating islands," as they are called, are masses of vegetation and earth loosened from the bottom of the lake, and they have been found on examination to consist mainly of sticks and leaves held together by clay, with grass and other vegetation growing upon them. Though these islets have been found as large as three acres in extent on the lake they are no obstacle to a steamer, though they would impede a launch, and they are firm enough for a man to walk upon safely. The sudden appearance of these islets is caused by the change of wind.

AN ASTUTE JEWELLER

Charles Gyo, a Paris jeweller, who was swindled out of three pearl necklaces by a man named Braun, by his own exertions succeeded in finding the thief and recovering the pearls.

Braun pretended to Gyo that he had a customer for the necklace, but decamped when they were entrusted to him, ostensibly abandoning his wife and children. Mme. Braun exhibited great grief at being deserted, but M. Gyo had a suspicion that she was aware of her husband's whereabouts, so he had his hair dyed, donned a false beard and ragged garments and, completely disguised as a typical Parisian mendicant, posted himself outside her residence and shadowed her when she went out.

Three days passed, and then, with her children she went to the railway station and took the express for Vienna. M. Gyo was in the same train, and on reaching the Austrian capital he saw Braun awaiting his family on the platform. He followed the party, and learning that, besides being a swindler, Braun was a deserter from the Austrian army, easily induced the authorities to issue a warrant for his arrest.

Captured after a vain endeavor to use a revolver, Braun confessed that he had pledged the necklace for $4,000 to three Parisian moneylenders. Continuing his researches, M. Gyo found the bank in which Braun had deposited this money, secured evidence to show that the three moneylenders were Braun's accomplices, and had them arrested, and eventually traced the pearls.

Spanish Jews in Asia

How many people know that there are some Asiatic Jews who speak Spanish? When the Jews were driven from Spain by Ferdinand and Isabella, a large number fled from the persecution of the Christian to the protection of the Mohammedan. They settled in Asiatic Turkey, Greece, and the Balkans. Their language is more correctly described as a Castilian-Hispano-Portuguese dialect of Latin, and it is said that many of them speak also Hebrew, modern Greek, and Arabic.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which Are Breathed to the Farthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at its source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailments thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through burdening the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and in fact have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolutely permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c. at all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

A Coming Musical Treat

The British Whig, Kingston.—Many pianists have visited Kingston who have laid more or less claim to great distinction by reason of their fame, yet it could certainly be questioned whether any artist who has performed in this city has ever more completely merited the eulogies that preceded his appearance, than Arthur Friedheim, who, with Signor Agostina Caruso, charmed a very large audience in Grant Hall, last night. It is little to be wondered at that the audience insisted on more and were rewarded repeatedly with delightfully played encores. Assuredly Friedheim is a pianist who will count in the annals of the generation. Signor Caruso has an admirable tenor voice, full and resonant, and it pleases chiefly on account of its wonderful expressive quality. He was recalled again and again. Peterborough will have the opportunity of hearing these great artists Tuesday evening at the Conservatory Hall; seats now on sale at J. M. Greene Music Store.

STREET CAR STOPS ON GEORGE STREET.

Since the removal of the half way crossings between Brock, Hunter, Simcoe, and Charlotte streets, the points at which street cars make intermediate stops have not been quite clear. To define these points trolley poles adjacent to the stops have been painted white, and hereafter cars will stop at white poles on the RIGHT HAND side when facing in the direction the car is travelling.

In other words white poles on the east side of George St. are stops for north bound cars, and poles on the west side are stops for south bound cars.

Cars will stop with front end opposite pole.

N.B.—Owing to the above intermediate stops being close to regular cross street stops it very frequently occurs that passengers inadvertently give a stop signal for one of the former when they really want the next street crossing. This has caused considerable unnecessary delay in the past, and for that reason hereafter cars will stop at the above intermediate points only to take up passengers. Stop signals given from inside the car will apply to the next cross street stop.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro'

Ladies and Gentlemen.—At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval, I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

DOMINION GOVERNMENT TO PASS NEW LAW REGARDING HINDUS

Will Take Steps Neccessary to Protect Coast From Hindus --To be Positive Policy

Ottawa, Dec. 1.—The Government does not believe that the decision of Chief Justice Hunter will result in an invasion of Hindus. Until the full text of the judgment is received no action will be taken.

The official opinion is that Chief Justice Hunter did not decide that Parliament could not pass a law which would exclude Hindus, but that he decided the order-in-council excluding Hindus was not in conformity with the Dominion law on which it was supposed to be based. If this is found to be the case a new order-in-council in conformity with the statute will be passed before a shipload of Hindus can be taken from India to British Columbia.

THE CITY'S DEBENTURE DEBT AND FOR WHAT IT WAS CREATED

Finance Minister, Ald Anderson, Answers Critic in Evening Contemporary--Ald Langford Opposes Bylaw to Increase Fire-Fighting Apparatus--He Stands Practically Alone

At last night's meeting of the City Council, Finance Minister, Ald. Anderson corrected the figures of a correspondent to an evening contemporary as to the increase in the city's debenture debt during the past four years. The writer had said that 1909 the city's debt was $795,000, which had increased to $1,218,000 in 1912, and he had characterized the increase as due to extravagance.

Ald. Anderson gave the figures as follows:

Dec. 31, [illegible]	$1,0[illegible]
Beginning 1913—debt	1,[illegible]2,909.24

During the four years in question, the city's debt had increased by [illegible] divided as follows:

For Waterworks	$180,000.00
Schools	115,000.00
	$295,000.00

These two items alone are responsible for rather more than half the increase.

For Local Improvements	$90,400.44
Smith St. Bridge	22,000.00
Protestant Home	10,000.00
Isolation Hospital	12,000.00

The City Fathers met in their last regular monthly session of 1913 last night. There were present Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan, Buller and McIntyre.

The Board of Education's clerk wrote that the formal opening of the new King George and Queen Mary schools will take place next Friday afternoon at 2.30, and inviting the Council to be present. This invitation was accepted.

NEW BRIDGE PROPOSITION.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., submitted a petition for a bridge across the river between Maria and Dalhousie streets. The petition bore 800 signatures.

Mr. Peck spoke on the petition, the signatures of which, he said, included all classes of citizens. He pointed out that a large percentage of people lived south of Hunter street, where the bulk of our industries is located, and reported the inconvenience imposed upon Ward Five's citizens in reaching the scene of their industrial activities west of the Otonabee. It is considerable hardship for men in East Peterborough to have to leave home at six in the morning in order to reach their work.

Mr. J. C. Shook endorsed Mr. Peck's contention and the petition, and hoped Council would see their way clear to erect this needed bridge.

Ald. Buller expressed his well-known sympathy with the proposition, and submitted that as soon as the question of a swing bridge in the C.P.R. was settled, he had asked the City Engineer to prepare plans for this bridge, which plans will be ready in about ten days.

Ald. Anderson explained that was Council's intention, that a by-law for this bridge should be submitted next year, and he hoped that next year's Council would follow up the proposition. East City had always supported industrial by-laws for the location of factories in other wards, and he felt sure the whole city would stand behind this bridge proposition.

Ald. McIntyre acquiesced in the above views.

His Worship explained that this proposition had always had his hearty support, and would have his endorsation when the measure is submitted. Doubt was entertained of the passage of a by-law for a new bridge at last January's election, in view of the large amount of money being asked of the ratepayers at that time for other projects. The new sewerage system had not been constructed this year for reasons heretofore explained, but that work will be undertaken next summer. He assured the large deputation present in support of the new bridge, that as soon as the plans are ready a by-law for same will be prepared and submitted to the ratepayers, without delay.

TURNBULL'S ELEVATOR

The question of permitting the construction of a coal storage for the Turnbull Co's new building beneath the sidewalk on Simcoe street, together with an elevator beneath the sidewalk was reopened.

Ald. Langford contended that the Board of Works in refusing the request for elevator privileges had thought the elevator would extend the width of the sidewalk, and thus block same when the doors were opened. Such would not be the case, the elevator would take up but half the width of the sidewalk. The elevator opening would be properly guarded.

Mr. Bright of the Turnbull Co. addressed Council and explained that the elevator when open would take up but 5 feet 2 inches of the sidewalk, having an equal passageway along for pedestrians. He submitted that the elevator in the sidewalk would prove an advantage to the public in affording a modern way for receiving goods. Instead of blocking the sidewalk with a lot of merchandise, half part of the day when received, this elevator would offer a system of readily conveying into his building all goods received on the [illegible] and without blocking the walk. Mr. Bright also took exception to the proposed charge of 1 cent [illegible] square foot for space used by the company beneath the sidewalk, and thought a nominal fee of [illegible] a year would be sufficient.

Ald. Green was in favor of the request being granted [illegible]

The Board of Works report included a clause agreeing to the coal storage proposition, but rejected the elevator scheme. The reopened discussion resulted in this clause being adopted with an amendment granting permission also for the elevator with proper opening under the following conditions: that the doors shall not be open after 11 o'clock a.m. any day; the company to assume all liability for accidents, and to defray cost of hanging conduits (if necessary) through their coal storage beneath the sidewalk; the rental for space used to be 1 cent per square foot.

OPPOSED CHEMICAL AND HOSE ENGINE.

Ald. Langford opposed the F. W. & L. Committee's Recommendation for a combination chemical and hose engine (motor driven) to cost not more than $900, be submitted to the people. He took the ground that taxes are high enough without going to this unnecessary expense. In fact, he said, taxes have become a burden to the working class and it is high time for retrenchment on Council's part. The Fire Department appropriation last year was $12,500, this year that department will spend $15,840, and he thought the department could jog along a little longer without the extra expense for a chemical engine.

Ald. Ander—"Why did you not oppose the increased appropriation to the F. W. & L. Com. this year to keep down the taxes."

Ald. Langford—"I did, and also the proposition then for this chemical engine."

Ald. Anderson—"Were you opposed to increasing the firemen's wages?"

Ald. Langford—"No, but I opposed all other increased expenditure in the department."

Ald. Gordon here assured Ald. Langford that the department's increased appropriation this year was for wages and additional men.

Ald. Gillespie pointed out to Ald. Langford that he, chairman of the F. W. & L. Com. was as interested in protecting the working man as is the latter. The motor driven chemical apparatus will not only be in the interest of business men and industries, but also in protection of working men's homes on the city's outskirts. The new apparatus will reach a fire twice as quickly as horse rigs and its acquisition will in its outlay save considerable in insurance and fire loss.

Ald. Gordon approved of the purchase of the new apparatus, than which nothing is more efficient for service in outlying districts. He thought it an economic move.

Also Johnston was pleased to note Ald. Langford's interest in the working man. He admitted the need of a combination chemical and hose engine, but doubted if this is an opportune time for its acquisition.

Ald. Green is a firm believer in ample fire protection, and did not believe the people wanted to keep down taxes by spending money to keep them down. The new fire fighting apparatus would save money in preventing loss by fire, and in insurance risks.

Ald. Duffus endorsed the purchase of the new engine on the ground that new factories are located here and are entitled to ample fire protection. Then a number of working men live in the outlying districts, where no water mains are located, and this new apparatus will protect their homes. Again, it must be borne in mind that in case of fire, water destroys ten times as much goods as the fire itself. The new motor-driven chemical and hose engine would reach a fire quicker than horse rigs, and quickly quench the flames with a minimum destruction of property. We can't keep down the tax rate by neglecting to have efficient apparatus and fire protection.

Ald. Buller was anxious at all times to legislate in the working man's interests, and pointed out that it is Council's duty to adopt such measures as will safeguard against industries being burnt down for lack of efficient protection and men consequently thrown out of work.

Ald. Anderson was fully convinced of the need for this apparatus, and he, with the other speakers, pointed out to Ald. Langford that in any event the people are to decide themselves on the question of its purchase.

The Committees report was here adopted, and a by-law to authorize the purchase of a motor-driven chemical and hose engine will go to the people at the January elections.

PRESENTATION TO CITY CLERK

At this juncture, the Mayor in exceedingly fitting terms, acknowledged City Clerk Armstrong's 20 years' service in the city and especially the present Council's warm appreciation of his work at all times. "During the last two years," said His Worship, "you have ably undertaken the duties of IndustrialC commissioner, necessitating considerable travelling and this Council asks your acceptance of this travelling companion, so that in going away you may take it with you and thus feel that you have the best wishes of the Council of 1913.

Mr. Armstrong, in a brief and neat response thanked Council for their handsome gift, and incidentally remarked that during his lengthy connection with Peterborough's Council—first as press representative and then as clerk—he had every reason to believe that every member of each and all Council Boards had been actuated with an earnest desire to advance the best interests of the ratepayers.

MISS QUINN ON CHINESE MISSION AT ST. PAUL'S

The spacious area of the lecture hall of St. Paul's church was nearly filled to hear one who was a teacher in that same Sunday school seventeen years ago, and is now an experienced missionary in the Celestial land.

Miss Quinn commenced by showing the watch given her by the young people of that church seventeen years ago. Her work in China, under the Christian Missionary Alliance, was then graphically described by the help of stereopticon pictures. Miss Quinn's church was shown, her helpers and her boarding school boys, who followed her in her journeys. The address was intensely interesting. The horrors of Chinese life were not exaggerated; but the audience was made to see that the Gospel is doing marvellous work among the 12,000 people for whom Miss Quinn and her colleagues are working.

SOUTH CITY NOTES

Parv street Baptist church commences its every member canvass for missions to-day.

Mr. A. E. Saunders of Brownton Post Office, has moved 80 yards nearer Peterborough. This new store on Monaghan street was opened yesterday. It is a substantial brick structure of one storey with a flat roof and with a good cellar underneath. Mr. Finnie of this city was the builder. We wish Mr. Saunders success in his new store.

Another new store is to be opened on Saturday by Mr. F. C. Roche, former Janitor of St. James' church. He has built his store himself; it is of red brick with dwelling house attached and stands in a good position at the south side of Princess street, facing Aylmer street. We heartily wish him a good start next Saturday. See advt. in our columns.

Dr. Park of the Y.P.S.C.E. meeting at Knox church last evening. Knox church and All Saints' church commenced their every member canvass yesterday.

SMASHED WINDOW TO STEAL FORTUNE

Toronto, Dec. 1.—In the belief that about fifty "stage money" 100 dollar bills hanging in the window of Liggett's drug store, on Yonge street were the real thing, Mike Stamasia, Hollander, just in from Amsterdam, and of no address, smashed the window with a huge wrench, seized as many as he could reach, and sped down Yonge street at 4 o'clock Saturday morning, with his pockets crammed full of what he thought were real hundred dollar bills. He was later arrested at the corner of King and Bay.

The prisoner is nearly six feet in height and weighs in the neighborhood of 200 pounds. Wm. Foster a hotel proprietor, whose weight is estimated at about 90 pounds, saw the theft and started out in pursuit of the flying Dutchman. Down Yonge street to King, along King to Church and south on Church to Colborne, along Colborne and Melinda, and up Bay

QUEBEC PRIEST MAKES WAGER THAT RITUAL MURDER IS FACT

Quebec, Dec. 1.—At a lecture on the Jewish question the other evening, Abbe Huot, one of the editors of L'Action Sociale, said that since 1898 the author of a book which makes serious charges against the Jews, including that of ritual murder, and against the Talmud, had offered ten thousand francs to anyone who would prove these accusations unfounded. This offer has now been taken up by Mr. B. Ortenburg, a prominent Hebrew of this city, who wagers that sum against Abbe Huot that he will prove that both the statements made in the book and in the Abbe's lecture are absolutely false.

Three conditions are made, these being, first: That the proof shall be made before four clergymen, two Protestants and two Catholics; second: that ten thousand francs shall be given the Jeffrey Hale Hospital at Quebec; third: that the ten thousand francs will be guaranteed by Abbe Huot, or some other Catholic clergyman of this city. If it can be proved that the Talmud has had laws against Christians, Mr. Ortenburg promises he will withdraw his two actions against Notary Plamondon of this city and Mr. Leduc, formerly editor of La Librarie Parole, both of which actions are now before the Court of Appeal.

Last week Mr. Ortenburg offered to wager $400 that the Abbe could not prove that the statements which he made in his lecture were true. The Abbe replied that it would be time for him to consider this wager when Mr. Ortenburg or any other Hebrew would take up the ten thousand francs offer, open since 1898. His challenge was not long unaccepted.

FORMAL OPENING OF CRESSMAN'S NEW DEPARTMENTS AND EXTENSIONS

Citizens Invited to a Public Reception in Their Handsome and Commodious Remodelled Store, on Thursday Next, 4th instant

On Thursday evening, December 4, the firm of Cressman Co., Ltd., will tender a public reception to the citizens of Peterborough, to mark the formal opening of several new and extensive departments which have been made possible by the large addition built at the rear of the store during the past three or four months. All four floors will wear a festive appearance and to the beauty of flowers, lights and other decorations will be added the charm of a musical programme by an orchestra specially engaged for the occasion.

The doors will be wide open, but business will be forgotten for the evening. Under the most pleasant surroundings, the citizens will be enabled to appreciate the vast strides the Cressman Company have made in establishing the largest departmental store in the district, and those who examine closely the various sections will surely be impressed with details that have been developed to assist the purchaser and to facilitate sales.

An Extensive Addition

The additions to the store are most noticeable on the two upper floors, which have been made the same depth as the ground floor. The whole building from top to bottom extends one hundred feet from the front entrance to the rear wall, in contrast to the old building which in the third and fourth stories was at least forty feet shorter. The end wall of the ground floor was substantially rebuilt and then carried up to the roof, affording an equal amount of space on each floor. In short the store has been increased by twenty-five per cent.

Home Furnishings Department

This large addition has provided the necessary space for the Home Furnishings and Furniture Departments, which will undoubtedly become one of the principal features of the Cressman store. Evidently this is the expectation of the company for practically all of the third and a large section of the fourth floors have been devoted to this new business departure. A wide staircase extends from the third to the fourth story. On the latter there is the Bargain Annex and a store room. Then comes a wide expanse which has been given over to furniture of all kinds, from a kitchen cabinet to a chiffonier and similar pieces. They are arranged according to their utility. Dining room furniture, for instance, is at one side, and parlour goods are in another section.

Coming down to the third floor one finds a beautiful display of furniture of all kinds not excluding Chippendale effects. Mahogany and finely polished quartered oak please the eye, and the designs of chiffoniers, tables, parlour suites, dining room tables and chairs and all the regular lines that make up a well furnished home are particularly attractive.

One room has been allotted for the display of bedroom appointments and has been completely equipped with a wide range of goods.

[illegible]

On this floor too, there is a big showing of rugs which have always received the careful attention of the firm. The linoleum and wall paper sections have prominent positions and considerable floor space has been provided for window hangings and goods of that nature.

The Cressman Company have opened up the Furniture Department with the intention of making it a success. Their stock has been carefully and widely selected. There is a splendid display of goods that will look well in the average home, and those who can afford it will find a wide range of furniture, rich in material and design. The slogan of this big, new department will be "Furnishings at Departmental Store Prices." Not only is the quality of the goods assured, but the price will be a particular feature.

Judging from the success already achieved by the Cressman Company, another evidence of which is found in their latest development, the new department will soon cut a wide swath in the growing business of the Cressman store.

Ready-to-Wear Section

The second floor is devoted to ready-to-wear goods. It is hardly necessary to mention the ladies' shoe section, the millinery and dressmaking department and the big display of ready-to-wear goods. This is complete even to details and that is saying sufficient.

Along the west wall are the general offices, and on the south side is a row of comfortable, well appointed fitting rooms wherein ladies may try on the articles which they intend to purchase.

An entirely new department is found on the main floor. This is Miss Wesley's section devoted to art needle work, fancy goods, fashion designs and similar lines. In the trim show cases and neat arrangement of this department there is an atmosphere of the big stores of the cities. The originality displayed in laying out and furnishing this section is much superior to many of the attempts found in the so-called big city stores.

Behind this department is another attractive section devoted to Christmas articles, and which will afterwards be given over to stationery, notions, etc. The information bureau and cash desk combined into a double desk office makes it compact and economical of space on the main floor where it is most required.

Modern Business Ideas

A striking feature of the Cressman store in its newest form is manner in which the various departments have been grouped. Patrons find everything practically at their elbow as the saying goes. This has probably been noticed in the above references to the store. The average purchaser may not appreciate the forethought and ingenuity which has evolved these modern methods, all of which are sales' assets, but the leisurely examination that will be made by the citizens on Thursday night should emphasize to them that the Cressman Company have provided the city with a departmental store that is not only doing an immense business, but is also doing it according to the advanced ideas of modern business.

NO DECREASE IN PRICE OF BRICK

Toronto, Dec. 1.—There is no likelihood of a drop in the price of bricks in Toronto similar to the reported drop in Hamilton. Word comes from Hamilton that Crawford Bros. will sell bricks at $7.50 per thousand, commencing on Dec. 1. They state that an unlimited supply is on hand, and predict every other local dealer will have to follow suit. The price started out this years at $12, fell afterwards to $10, and now it is to be $7.50.

Historian Receives Degree

Mrs. J. R. Green, who has been described as "the cleverest woman in London," was given the degree of Doctor of Literature by the Liverpool University. She is an historian of exceptional ability, and has written a number of such works. Her book on Henry II. is considered to be the best life of any mediæval king.

This Woman Drives a Hack

A woman hack driver was licensed in Mount Vernon, N.Y. And why not? A woman who knows how to drive a horse is apt to be a little more careful, if anything, than a man, and the carrying of visitors from railway stations to their destinations in suburban towns would seem to be an agreeable occupation for an active woman or girl.

A Modest Scientist

At a convention of the British Association, held in London, Eng., which was attended by many scientists from Europe, Madame Curie, the discoverer of polonium and co-discoverer with her husband of radium, was described by the president, Sir Oliver Lodge, as the "greatest of women scientists." Madame Curie possesses the modesty of genius and could scarcely be induced to speak at the meetings, either of herself or her work, even during a long discussion on radium.

Frog Farming Pays

Miss Ina Morgan, of Maryland has the distinction of being the only woman frog farmer in the United States. Possessed of marshy land which was absolutely useless for agricultural purposes, she conceived the idea of frog-farming and forthwith started a "frog-preserve." The adventure proved a great success. So much so, that Miss Morgan has as much as she can do to cope with the orders. The extra large specimens of froghood she sells to biological laboratories, receiving as much as $6 apiece for them, while the bullfrogs, which she breeds for eating purposes, are shipped in large quantities to Europe, where epicures constantly demand the tickling of their palates by frogs' legs.

George Eliot as a Hostess

George Eliot, said Mrs. W. K. Clifford in The Nineteenth Century, as a hostess exercised a rare fascination on her privileged guests. "The kindly expression of her wonderful face gave courage to the scared newcomer," and the "exquisite thrill that went through you at the sound of her low, measured voice, at the sight of her little, generally undeveloped smile, was beyond all description." The talk at her receptions, however, must have been pretty solemn, for Mrs. Clifford spoke of "those rather terrible Sunday afternoons" when the conversaziones were held.

Motoring For Women

The feminine chauffeur is becoming more general, and a large number of women are turning their attention to motor-driving as a means of earning a livelihood. There are big opportunities for women to learn the work, but it is useless for any woman to think to take up the calling unless she has exceedingly steady nerves, eyes, and hands, besides other very necessary qualifications. Beyond actual chauffeur work, there are other ways of turning motor-driving to account. A woman with brains can do well by organizing motor tours. If she has not a car of her own, it is often possible to make arrangements with a big firm. There are great openings, too, for women teachers of motoring, both private and public.

The Visiting Cook

A new profession for women—that of visiting cook—has been opened up by the exigencies of the domestic situation. A young lady in London, England, who qualified as a visiting cook said this about her methods: "My system is to consult with the housewife or hotel manager charged with the arrangement of dinner, luncheon or supper parties to discover the scale of entertainment that is desired, and then submit a [illegible] [illegible]

Gipsy Women's Gold

Two gipsies were fined $30 each at Reigate for assault. They fought with a farmer and his men for the possession of two horses. The court was crowded with gipsies of both sexes, and the fines were paid in gold by some women.

Home Manufactures

"Freedom of the Workhouse"

Notice of motion was refused by the chairman of the Cork Board of Guardians to confer the freedom of the workhouse on the Lord Chancellor, "as the Corporation were going to confer the freedom of the city on him," the chairman describing the motion as "ridiculous."

Are Ladies' Hats Perishable Goods?

An amusing incident occurred at Aberdeen during the carters' strike. An agreement was arrived at, with the Northern Co-operative Company that the carters of that concern should remove only perishable goods from the station. A Co-operative lorry began to load goods for the company's stores, and the strikers' delegate found that the goods included ladies' headgear. He remained dissatisfied with the explanation that the hats were perishable goods.

The latest practical step taken by the Cymry Cymreig Caerdydd towards the utilization of the Welsh language in everyday life and business is a beautiful button which is to be worn by the members and all Welsh-speaking Welshmen who may care to do so. CONTRIBUTING TO AN EMPIRE NAVY

Hamar Greenwood, M. P., after an Empire tour with the British Parliamentary party, reports public sentiment in Australia and New Zealand as favoring cash contributions to the admiralty. Liberal newspapers are almost certain to discover in Mr. Greenwood a poor observer, in view of the circumstance that Australia is proceeding with its settled policy of establishing local fleets, and the added circumstance that New Zealand has decided to follow practically in the footsteps of Australia. But these same newspapers will fail to point out that Australia has already contributed in cash to the upkeep of an Imperial navy and already has one fleet unit built and another building, and that New Zealand, before deciding to construct a local fleet on lines similar to Australia contributed to the Empire navy the splendid battleship New Zealand.

It is possible Mr. Greenwood did not correctly gauge public opinion. Certainly Canadians will never agree to a policy of cash contribution to the admiralty. Mr. Borden has made that point clear. On more than one occasion ge has stated with emphasis that he would never subscribe to such a policy. Mr. Borden's policy in its essentials is the policy of New Zealand. The $35,000,000 which it is proposed to vote for the construction of three Dreadnoughts, will provide the nucleus of a Canadian fleet. The ships are to form part of the Empire navy, but are subject to recall whenever we are prepared for the next step in naval defence. The Borden policy is not one of contribution.

But that is beside the question. The point is that Canada, because of an obstructionist partisan Senate, has done nothing, while little New Zealand, has contributed a battleship costing every man, woman and child in the dominion more than ten dollars per head, and Australia, besides contributing in cash, is providing worthily for her own defense. Good taste should suggest to Liberal newspapers the impropriety of discussing the policies of sister dominions, while they continue to stand in the way of Canada doing her plain duty.

THE COAL COMBINE

AN ILLOGICAL ACT

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The other evening at the Council meeting a request was made by Rev. Mr. Price, asking the Council to receive the Lieut.-Governor officially on the occasion of his visit to Peterborough last week. Some of them expressed themselves to the effect that as the Governor's visit was in connection with a church affair, the Council should not interfere.

Yet these same men, when the Roman Catholic Apostolic delegate came to Peterborough in connection with a function in the Roman church, were on hand, mayor and all. How consistent!

Here was the King's representative paying an official visit as Governor of Ontario, but he was turned down. It was not Mr. Price or his church bazaar that was being snubbed, but the King himself, through his representative.

I tell you, Mr. Editor, we need such papers as The Times to let the people know what is going on. Protestants are not getting fair treatment in matters of this kind.

THE OLD CANOE

(Published by Request.)

Where the rocks are gray and the shore is steep,
And the waters below look dark and deep,
Where the rugged pine, in its lowly pride,
Leans gloomily over the murky tide,
Where the reeds and rushes are long and rank,
And the weeds grow thick in the winding bank,
Where the shadow is heavy the whole day through,
There lies at its moorings the old canoe.

The useless paddles are idly dropped,
Like a sea-bird's wings that the storms had lopped,
And crossed on the railings one o'er one,
Like the folded hands when the work is done;
While busily back and forth between
The spider stretches his silvery screen
And the solemn owl, with his dull "too-hoo,"
Settles down on the side of the old canoe.

The stern, half sunk in the slimy wave,
Rots slowly away in its living grave,
And the green moss creeps o'er its dull decay,
Hiding its mouldering dust away,
Like the hand that plants o'er the tomb a flower,
Or the ivy that mantles the falling tower;
While many a blossom of loveliest hue
Springs up o'er the stern of the old canoe.

The currentless waters are dead and still,
But the light wind plays with the boat at will,
And lazily in and out again
It floats the length of the rusty chain
Like the weary march of the hands of time,
That meet and part at the noontide chime;
And the shore is kissed at each turning anew,
By the dripping bow of the old canoe.

Oh, many a time, with a careless hand,
I have pushed it away from the pebbly strand,
And paddled it down where the stream runs quick,
Where the whirls are wild and the eddies are thick,
And laughed as I leaned o'er the rocking side,
And looked below in the broken tide
To see that the faces and boats were two,
That were mirrored back from the old canoe.

But now, as I lean o'er the crumbling side,
And look below in the sluggish tide,
The face that I see there is graver grown,
And the laugh that I hear has a sober tone,
And the hands that lent to the light skiff wings
Have grown familiar with sterner things.
But I love to think of the hours that sped
As I rocked where the whirls their white spray shed,
Ere the blossoms waved, or the green grass grew
O'er the mouldering stern of the old canoe.

MUSIC and DRAMA

"THE LIGHT ETERNAL"

"The Light Eternal," a play of early Rome dealing with the persecution of the Christians, will be presented at the Grand Opera House next Saturday, Dec. 6, matinee and night. Judging from the wonderful success of this drama in the larger cities in Canada there will probably be no more important attraction presented here this season. "The Light Eternal" was first seen in Canada at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, some two seasons ago, and it has since been given seventeen performances in that city. Hamilton has seen the play for nine performances, Ottawa five times, London eight times; St. Catharines, Stratford, St. Thomas, Kingston, Peterborough from two to four times each; this city alone had the play last season for 3 performances, and now another tour for Canada is in progress, including all these cities for return engagements.

To meet such remarkable success there must be something remarkable in the play itself. Theatre managers do not book return dates one after another with attractions that do not draw, or that fail to please their patrons; and the mere fact that "The Light Eternal" has been seen so often in the larger cities and is still coming back to them should in itself be the strongest indorsement possible to cite.

The company to be seen here is the only one appearing in the play—the same that has made it so popular throughout Canada and the United States. In the cast are Louise Dunbar and John Milton in the two principal roles and in their immediate supports are Geo. Mattison, James Nelson, John Shuttle, Austa Pierce and Bessie Bennett. The scenic equipment is pronounced the finest possible to obtain. The play is a powerful poetic arrangement of the pagan persecutors of the early Christians, into which is blended an intensely human love affair.

MOTHER! IF CHILD'S TONGUE IS COATED

If Cross, Feverish, Constipated, bilious, stomach sour, give "California Syrup of Figs."

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is oftimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't be fooled!

TOMB ROBBERS FATE

Strange Relics of Egyptian Women's Toilettes of 7,000 Years Ago

The passions that moved men and women seven thousand years ago were much the same as they are at present. Some women were vain and jealous, some men were dishonest and covetous. Strange light is thrown upon their lives by the collection of relics which Professor Flinders Petrie brought to London from the Nile Valley, near Memphis. They represent a year's work of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt.

Many of the exhibits came from the cemetery at Tarkhan, and they date back to the first dynasty and even before that—more than 7,000 years ago. Among them are little slate palettes on which the Egyptian beauties of the days of Menes used to grind the colors with which they adorned their faces. Some of them have traces of the colors still upon them, and one has scratched upon it the portrait of a man.

There is a case of jewellery of the twelfth dynasty which contains, among other things, a beautifully executed gold pectoral, which was probably made by the Royal goldsmiths for the king to present to a courtier.

This and other trinkets were found in a tomb which, when opened, disclosed the story of a crime which was committed thirty centuries before it was found out. The tomb shaft had been opened by a robber who made a hole in a doorway. He had got inside and had begun to strip the body when the roof fell in, and his crushed skeleton was found lying beneath the stones which had fallen on him.

BLUEJACKETS' PROTEST

New Scale of Pay Coincides With Increase in Price of Clothing

British bluejackets are strongly protesting against an Admiralty increase in the price of their clothing.

The men say that the increases counterbalance the benefits recently given of free kit on entering the Service and reserve pay, and that the Admiralty have given them two cents with one hand and taken away three cents with the other.

Among the increases are 4 cents a yard on serge, 4 cents each on flannel vests, 14 cents a pair on trousers, 28 cents a pair on boots and shoes, and 20 cents on jerseys.

These articles are in continual demand, and it is estimated that the effect of the rise in prices will be to increase the cost of a sailor's clothing by $20 or $25 a year.

SPY GETS A HEAVY SENTENCE

German Dentist Who Did "Dirty Work" for Money

[illegible] the box, a jury at Winchester found William Klare, a [illegible] German dentist, guilty of obtaining secret information from Portsmouth Dockyard, and he was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

Mr. Foote, K.C., for the Crown, said Klare had lived at Southsea, and ostensibly carried on the business of a dentist. Some months ago he met Levi Rosenthal a man of German nationality, living at Portsea, and told him there was much money to be made by obtaining naval information. He said he wanted a book on torpedoes for Germany. About $500 would be paid for the job, but it would lead to more.

Rosenthal spoke to a Portsmouth town councillor and the police and naval authorities were informed. By arrangement Charles John Bishop, a clerk in the office of the Commander-in-Chief, got the annual report of the Torpedo School, a highly confidential naval book of great importance, and handed it to Klare.

Mr. Foote, addressing the jury, observed that this was a case of a man doing this dirty work for money, and differed entirely from that of officers who exposed themselves to risks in the endeavor to serve their country.

Not the Tragedy She Thought It Was.

Things are not always what they seem, as a wealthy old lady recently discovered in Paris. While passing along the Rue Cardinal Lemoine she saw a crowd gathered round an omnibus. Elbowing her way through to the front, she was horrified to see two legs protruding from between the wheels of the vehicle. The rest of the dreadful story was too obvious. With a piercing scream the lady fell fainting into the arms of some of the other spectators. The commotion caused by [illegible] fainting fit took the interest of the crowd away from the man beneath the bus, who, in his turn, dropped his spanner and crawled out to see what the counter-attraction was. When the old lady recovered she would not believe that what she had seen was only the driver tightening a bolt under the vehicle. "They are hiding the truth from me," she sobbed as she continued her walk.

GIRL IS WALLED UP ALIVE

Stonemason's Astounding Story of Midnight Drive to Lonely House

Esteban Guiterrez, a Barcelona stone-mason, told an astounding story to the police of the Italian city. He declares that two well-dressed men in a motor-car called at his home, and asked him to accompany them a short distance into the country to carry out some urgent repairs.

When they were outside the city the men fell upon the mason, and bound and blindfolded him. A few minutes later the car stopped in front of a lonely house. Guiterrez was led inside, and ordered to wall up a narrow aperture. He heard someone sobbing, and, tearing the bandage from his eyes, saw a young girl, bound with ropes and wedged in the aperture.

His captors ordered him to build a wall so as to enclose the girl, and when Guiterrez refused they threatened him with revolvers. He says that he was forced to comply with their commands, after which the men conveyed him to a wood several miles away and left him.

Enforcing Temperance With a Gun

Murdo Macphail, a gamekeeper, who was charged with threatening to shoot his aged father, pleaded guilty in Inverness to breach of the peace. It was to prevent his father obtaining too much whiskey that the accused acted as he did. Sheriff Grant said if the defendant wanted to spread his temperance principles he had better not do so with a shot gun.

FAMOUS SONG WRITERS

Author of "In Old Madrid"—Wrote 2,000 Ballads

One of the most prolific writers of songs who ever lived died in England, in the person of Mr. Clifton Bingham. More than 2,000 lyrics and ballads flowed from his facile pen, and among them were some of the last thirty years. He once said that he wrote on an average seventy to eighty ballads a year. Mr. Bingham scored his first success as a young man with "Love's Old Sweet Song," which was set to music by T. L. Molloy. Then came "Dear Heart," to music by Tito Mattei, and "In Old Madrid," with music by Trotere. In the case of the last-named the music was composed first and the verses written to it. The score lay in Mr. Bingham's desk for months, and repeatedly the author received postcards from the composer asking, "What about my music?" At last the inspiration came, and the words were written.

Mr. Bingham was a born ballad-writer. "Songs must come from the heart," he said, "and go to the heart." "Back to the Old Love" was written on a visiting card, and another song on the top of an omnibus at Brighton. More than one song was written in an underground train, but most of them were composed at a little desk which his father gave him. Mr. Bingham was a dark-skinned, active, genial little man with a heavy black moustache, a slight lisp (which he vainly struggled to overcome), a pair of the merriest brown-grey eyes, and a winning manner that made him a universal favorite.

At the time when Mr. Bingham was at the height of his popularity the popular song was, as a rule, dismal in its subjects to "angels and dying children." Commenting on this characteristic he used to tell a good story.

"I had sold many dying child lyrics and I determined to go to London to see my publisher. This was my first professional visit to him, and when I presented myself he stared at me in amazement. 'Good gracious!' he cried, 'Judging from your songs I thought you were an old man with one foot in the grave!'"

Sir George Birdwood of London, who is over eighty, agrees with the saying of Lord Alverstone that judges are at their best from 65 to 80.

"I cannot understand why people imagine that this is the day of the young man," he said. "Now, more than ever, it is the day of the old man with vitality. The older a man is, so long as he is quite fit, the better he is intellectually—the broader his vision, the saner and wiser his outlook and the more mature his opinions.

"How deeply I appreciate Lord Alverstone's sane remarks, and also Justice Phillimore's pregnant saying that the work he does now is so hard that if he was a younger man he could not do it. Of course he couldn't.

"No young man could do his work, for his old age gives him the power he needs. "Though I am weak in the body, my brain is as clear as ever it was, and on certain things I can concentrate and think better to-day than I could when I was 30, surrounded by distractions to intellectual development.

"I stand by the old man as the best for all great and responsible posts—the best to keep in those positions as long as it is possible.

"The old man of vitality is the youngest man in the world, for he has done with the illusions of youth, but he has not done with life, and to the end it remains full of savor."

A GREAT FORTRESS

On a Ridge of Hills 500 Feet Above the Sea

The Tchataldja lines, the last line of defence before Constantinople with the exception of its ancient Byzantine walls, are about 20 miles distant from Constantinople. Here the peninsula on which Constantinople stands is narrowed to a width of only 16 miles by a deep inlet of the Sea of Marmora on the south, and the fresh water of Lake of Derkos on the north. A series of works was begun here in 1828, when a Russian army threatened Constantinople, and was completed in 1877, when the Russians again menaced the capital. They run across the isthmus, and as both flanks rest on the sea they cannot be turned. The forts are built on a ridge of hills some 500 feet above sea level, with a small stream running across their entire front. The garrison in times of peace is about 2,400.

A Miser's Revenge

An old miser, who died in Wales, fell out with his relatives over a trifle several years ago, and he thereupon changed nearly all his money into bank-notes. Each bank-note he tore into two, burning one portion and retaining the other. When his relatives came to examine his effects after his death they found, to their chagrin, valueless halves of the bank-notes and a letter which contained the paragraph:

"All my money I leave to my dear relatives to be equally divided between them. I am sure they will not quarrel about it."

The miser had destroyed the halves of the bank-notes bearing the numbers.

No More Game Gallows

For many generations it has been the custom in the Midlands to hang vermin which they shoot on gallows, probably as a warning to others. This custom is to be discontinued on several estates in Buckinghamshire, the owners having intimated that in future they will be satisfied if they receive the feet of the enemies of game. The frequent sights of rows of weasels, stoats, ferrets, jays, and hawks hanging in a state of decomposition will thus be avoided.

A Powerful Magnet

What is described as "the most powerful electro-magnet in the world" is installed in the laboratories of Professor Becquerel, at the Polytechnic School of Paris.

According to a French scientist potassium must be added to the list of radioactive substances.

WHERE CANADA LEADS

Canada possesses the largest mountain park in the world—"sixty Switzerlands into one"—thousands of square miles in extent.

Montreal has the largest grain conveying system in the world.

The largest pulp wood timberways in the world are in the Dominion. These are being renewed by fresh growths, so that the supply will be inexhaustible.

Canada has the largest consecutive wheat field in the world—an area which is constantly extending and which justifies the prediction of Lord Strathcona that Canada will soon be the granary of the world.

The thickest coal seam in the world is found in Nova Scotia—48 feet.

The greatest sea fisheries in the world are those of the Dominion. These are worth, east and west, almost $50,000,000 per annum, and are capable of indefinite expansion. The salmon industry in British Columbia, great as it is, is in its infancy.

Canada has the largest nickel mines in the world; upon these the naval authorities are in great measure dependent, as nickel is employed in the armoring of warships.

The Dominion possesses a greater railway mileage than Australia and New Zealand or Italy and Spain combined, and more than all the South American countries.

The largest grain mills in the world are in the Dominion.

The largest elevator in the world is found at Port Arthur, with a capacity of seven million bushels.

The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Transmission Line—300 miles, is the longest in the world.

JOHN A. McGRAW

Garrett P. Serviss, who has written a number of works on popular astronomy, believes that the problem of aerial navigation is so far solved that we may now indulge ourselves in speculations about possible voyages beyond the atmosphere of this globe.

"I have begun to think that now that we have achieved the navigation of the air the providing of sufficient food and air are the only difficulties which remain to be overcome before men fly to the moon. To be sure a new motive force must be obtained, but electrical propulsion hints at what it may be.

"There are only two forces known which overcome gravity—namely, pressure of light and electricity. So I say that the first flying to the moon will be done on the principle of the pithball, which flies away from the conductor of an electric machine.

"When this has been accomplished it only remains to do what modern chemistry certainly can do—that is, to fill tanks with enough compressed air and compressed food for so long a journey. The idea is really not so ridiculous as it may appear."

It was in 1851 that the all-conquering schooner America arrived in British waters and swept the board, carrying all before her in the events for which she entered. After a long and eventful career, in which she figured as cruiser, blockade runner, and practice vessel for naval cadets, she was refitted as a racer in 1875 and finished fourth in a fleet of twenty-five starters. She was then sold at auction for $5,000, and so late as 1907 was still going strong.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, [illegible] in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I was well advised to follow. I am [illegible] in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

"There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

"To date there are eleven species of North American birds that have been exterminated by 'civilized' man since 1840," says Dr. Wm. T. Hornaby, director of New York Zoological Park, "and there are twenty-three other species of birds pressing each other closely for the sad distinction of being first to lengthen the list of extinct species." Only one living specimen of the carrier pigeon is now known to exist yet formerly wagon-loads were poured into the market. Dr. Hornaby has no hesitation in placing responsibility for this wholesale destruction on man. "There are," he declares, "probably millions of people who do not realise that man is the most persistently wicked and wasteful of all predatory animals. Others kill only what they think they can consume. If something is by chance left over, it goes to satisfy the hunger of the humbler creatures of prey." From one end of the continent to the other there is a relentless desire to kill.

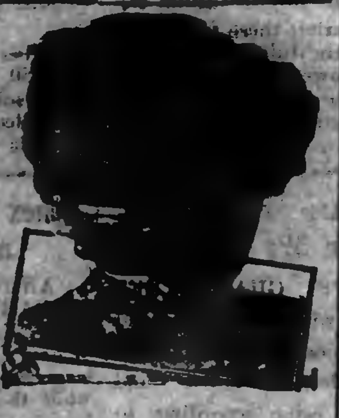
MARY ELIZABETH MADE GOOD CANDY

She Began on a Small Scale—Now She's Worth Half a Million

Several years ago Mary Elizabeth, whose other name is Evans, started to make candy for sale in Syracuse. On a table she put her candies and a small wicker basket in which people put the money for what they took. People liked her trust of them and they did not ever take more candy than they were entitled to from the dishes on the unwatched table. They began telling other folks about the candy-table and pretty soon Mary Elizabeth was able to sell more candy than she could make alone in her little home. Then she hired assistants and opened a store with a real clerk in it. And now she has a candy-shop on Fifth Avenue in New York City, another in Newport and still a third in Bermuda. And she won't take half a million dollars for her business.



MARY ELIZABETH EVANS

The Britannia, King George's big yacht, is now twenty years old, but is still able to hold her own against almost anything afloat of her own size. Racing yachts are supposed to be fragile affairs, but some of them last a deal longer than anyone would be likely to imagine. Britannia, for example, has several competitors to which, in spite of her score of years of life, she is a mere chicken. Of them all, Bloodhound possesses by far the most marvellous record. Bloodhound is a forty-ton cutter, which was built as long ago as 1874. In 1907, after a long career of successful racing, she was sold to be broken up, when Lord Ailsa, for whom she was originally built, bought her in to save her from the shipbreaker's yard. He refitted her; and that year she won thirty prizes in forty starts, sixteen being firsts. In 1908 she was racing again, when she was run into by another yacht, L'Esperance, and was got on to the mud only with great difficulty in time to save her from sinking. It was thought that this would end her career, but her owner raised his old favorite and repaired her, and 1909 proved her most successful of all seasons. In it she won fifty prizes.

1294 Aliens Became Naturalized in England Last Year

Of this number, Russia supplied no fewer than [illegible]; but there was only one Bulgarian who decided to abandon the troublous land of his birth in favor of our more peace-loving country. On the other hand, [illegible] Germans wavered in their allegiance to the Kaiser, and chose to become loyal subjects of King George V.; whilst, despite the prospect of having to serve longer with the colors in the future, only 23 Frenchmen deserted the Republic, so greatly in need of men, and came to Britain, there to be naturalized. Of these new Britons, [illegible] took up their abodes in England and Wales, and [illegible] of them live in London.

Photographic Power of Wood

Experiments recently made have shown that a section of a tree trunk or of a branch, cut across the grain, possesses the power to impress upon a photographic plate in the dark a distinct image of itself, plainly showing the rings of growth. There is a great difference in the intensity of this power among different kinds of wood. The conifers (pines and firs) possess it in high degree. The wood is placed either in contact with the plate or at a short distance from it, and the exposure varies from half an hour to 18 hours. Boards long exposed to the air, an oak box 100 years old, rotten wood from a stump, and even bog-wood, have been found still photographically active.

Bad Stomach Rumblings Distress Before Meals

[illegible] so Seldom Free From That Weary, Droopy, Half-Dead Feeling

Now Cured and Gives Good Advice To Others With Dyspeptic Tendencies

If you have any stomach distress at all you will certainly be interested in the following experience which is told by Mr. Edward Dawkins:

"When I was working around the farm last winter I had attack of inflammation," writes Mr. E. P. Dawkins, of Port Richmond. "I was weak for a long time, but well enough to work until spring. But something went wrong with my bowels for I had to use salts or physic all the time. My stomach kept sour, and always after eating there was pain and fulness and all the symptoms of intestinal indigestion. Nothing helped me until I used Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Instead of hurting, like other pills, they acted very mildly, and seemed to heal the bowels. I did not require large doses to get results with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and feel so glad that I have found a mild yet certain remedy. To-day I am well—no pain, no sour stomach, a good appetite, able to digest anything. This is a whole lot of good for one medicine to do, and I can say Dr. Hamilton's Pills are the best pills, and my letter, I am sure, proves it."

Refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box or five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or post paid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

County Roads Not Bad.

The county roads are not too bad, considering the season of the year, and the amount of rain which we had. Yesterday a Times man took a run out by auto to Young's Point, and found very fair driving except in a spot where the road is low and swampy.

POVERTY AND WRETCHEDNESS IN TRENT VALLEY DISTRICT

Awful Moral Condition Prevailing in This Locality According to Dr. B. E. Fernow

The Dean of Forestry in the University of Toronto tells of the Waste Land in the Trent District

Toronto, Dec. 2.—Within one hundred miles of Toronto, in a territory covering the northern parts of Victoria, Peterborough and Hastings counties, and the southern townships of Haliburton county, a rural slum condition exists which for sordidness and degeneracy, judging from reliable information received by The Globe yesterday, has not a parallel in any city in Canada.

The Globe's informant spoke in reference to the speech of Dr. B. E. Fernow, Dean of Forestry in the University of Toronto, at New Liskeard on Saturday, when he told of one hundred and ninety farms in the above-mentioned areas being on sale at six cents per acre; and also of the degeneracy which prevails amongst the people of that section of Ontario.

"What Dr. Fernow said is all too true," was the introductory comment received by The Globe. "Those one hundred and ninety farms which he speaks of in the Trent Valley district comprise some 18,000 acres which have been deserted, and are now being offered for sale at a price equal to three years of unpaid taxes.

"But," added the gentleman, "the most appalling feature of the conditions in that wasted section of the Province is the vain expenditure of energy on the part of the people, who, through lack of means to enable themselves to move away, have been obliged to continue their efforts at farming sterile land. And this condition has brought about a state of physical and mental degeneracy which as a sociological problem invites close investigation with the hope of some kind of relief being extended.

MET TWELVE DEGENERATES ONE DAY.

"On a single day last summer four of us walking through a part of Monaghan township saw, simply as the result of cursory observation, no less than twelve degenerates along the way. There are, as Dr. Fernow intimated, some 150 families, so mentally and physically defective, as well as being economically incapacitated, that they are unable to leave their barren surroundings. They should never have been allowed to go on the land there. And now it is the duty of some institution to see that they are removed to better land and into more healthful influences."

The basic difficulty in connection with the particular section of the Trent Valley district in question is that its most valuable resource, red and white pine, has been ruthlessly wasted. There are some 600,000 acres in the Trent Valley, which in the early seventies formed one of the finest pineries in the Province. Between 1870 and 1880 vast areas were taken up by timber licenses, and lumbering was the only activity in that part of the country. Unscientific cutting and depletion later by fire left that area of 600,000 acres to be described and classified by the Government as "waste land." Furthermore, those people who went in to cut lumber remained to eke out an existence on the land. A poor, unproductive soil, consisting principally of gravel and sand, with solid rock underneath, has done very little else than deteriorate the character of the families which have endeavored to cultivate it.

SOLD FARM FOR MESS OF TURNIPS.

The Globe was told of one case where a man, after spending twenty years on a farm of one hundred acres and endeavoring to rear a family of six children, finally sold the hundred acres for six bushels of turnips. During the past summer one farmer, after harvesting forty acres of hay and gathering in the very last wisp of timothy that he could find, discovered his crop to bulk in weight 1,500 pounds, or 37½ pounds per acre. Five or six bushels of oats per acre is regarded as a satisfactory crop in that section of the Province; and a dairy cow that can glean enough nourishment from her scanty pastures to return her owner $30 a year in the form of butter or cream is doing all that can be expected of such an animal.

EIGHTY ABANDONED FARMS

Along the Hastings road in Hastings county, which was settled by Scottish and English people, a visitor last summer in one day passed by eighty abandoned farms, and the same person, examining one of the townships included in the waste portion of Trent Valley, found the light sandy soil to be lying over an under-bed of solid rock to a depth of no more than eight inches, and people were endeavoring to raise crops there.

The loss of the pine forests by fire on the 600,000-acre area of the Trent Valley, according to The Globe's adviser, will amount to $12,000,000 to the Province of Ontario not to mention the effect which the devastation of that district has had upon its people. In August of this year the ninth fire in the history of the upper Trent Valley country swept over the so-called "waste land," or "slash," and though regarded by the Provincial Department of Crown Lands, as a trivial matter, it involved a loss to Ontario in the destruction of young pine trees of an asset which in twenty years would have been worth at least two million dollars.

HON. MR. HEARST'S VIEWS

Hon. W. H. Hearst, speaking to The Globe, said that much of Dean Fernow's criticism regarding the development of the clay belt was of a negative character. The lines suggested were those that would appeal to the common-sense judgment of any man as being at least reasonable.

"We are well ahead of the settlers in opening up townships," said Mr. Hearst. "Before we open a township we go ahead and have a detailed report made upon it, and if fifty per cent. is found to be unfit for agricultural purposes it is not opened. No man has ever claimed that the clay belt is all good farming country. There are sandy patches, muskeg, rocky places and the like, such as will be found in any extensive country, but, speaking generally, as one must when referring to a large tract, the clay belt is fraught with grand agricultural possibilities."

A Serious Matter

There appears to be some trouble in North Monaghan. It seems that a man who is not a Protestant owns a dozen or so of houses which were assessed to the May's School house section, but the owner asks that they be assessed to the Lake street Separate school, in spite of the fact that nearly all the tenants are Protestants and by law have a right to say which way their taxes will go. This law was made some years ago at the request of Roman Catholics. The whole thing looks like a mix-up, and it is up to our local member to shoulder the responsibility like a man and have it straightened out.

AMENDMENTS FOR ANNUAL O. H. A. MEETING SATURDAY

Toronto, Dec. 2.—The ammendment to be considered at the annual convention of the O. H. A. at the Temple building, Toronto, next Saturday morning, were received by the clubs to-day, having been mailed yesterday.

Designation of Players.

Jas. T. Southland, of Kingston proposes that the players of the team be designated as follows: Goal keeper, right defence, left defence, rover, centre, right wing, and left wing. This merely to be keeping with the times and the style o, defence play, dropping the old designations of "Point" and cover point", which are meaningless now.

An Auxiliary Jumper.

Mr. Southland also wants a gong sounded by the timekeeper to inform the referee of any variance in the time. He also suggests the following amendment: "All clubs must have an auxiliary jumper directly opposite in color to their regular club sweaters. The home club to wear same when referee finds regular club sweaters conflicting."

For Extra-Time Games.

All O. H. A. games must be played to a finish, but when the teams are a tie at full time Secretary Hewitt proposes a definite rule, so that there will be ten minutes rest at full time then 5 minutes play each way without any rest, and if similar periods are necessary, a 5 minute rest after each ten minutes of play.

Mr. Hewitt also suggests that the offside line of the goal keeper be extended to 10 feet instead of three, as in the rule at present. This applies only to shots that hit the goal keeper and bound off, not those hit with his stick.

SIR RODMOND TO RETIRE DR. MONTAGUE TO BE THE NEXT PREMIER OF MANITOBA

Former's Failing Health Will Compel His Departure From Public--Successor Acceptable to the Party

Winnipeg, Dec. 2.—It is understood that at a very close date Sir Rodmond Roblin will resign the Premiership of Manitoba and will be succeeded by Hon. W. H. Montague, who has just achieved such a striking victory in Kildonan. For some time Sir Rodmond's health has not been good and he has been more than willing to resign. The difficulty was to find a successor acceptable to all sections of the party and with the active and agressive policies necessary to successful leadership in the west. For 18 years Dr. Montague has been out of politics. In the meantime he has acquired considerable means and has developed an independent quality of mind not so common among party politicians. It was only with such reluctance that he returned to public life, and he will become Premier of the Province not through any exertion of his own. As a speaker Dr. Montague excels both in Parliament and on the platform. He is a ready and effective debater. He has also the fancy and finish of an orator. While the resignation of Sir Rodmond Roblin will be much regretted, it is felt that the Conservative party and the Province will be fortunate in his successor.

ENGLISH LIBERALS DEMAND THAT ASQUITH ACT AT ONCE

Westminster Gazette Voices Protest Against Inaction on Ulster Question

London, Dec. 2.—The Westminster Gazette to-day editorially joins the growing group of Liberals who demand that the Government shall abandon its waiting attitude on Ulster.

"We wholly mistrust the notion that the present situation can be allowed to trail on into the autumn of next year. The public will understand the policy of conciliation; it will also understand and approve a vigorous effort to assert military discipline and stop the importation of arms and ammunition into Ireland, but it will not understand the do-nothing policy of turning a blind eye to what is clearly illegal. A policy of full steam ahead must include positive measures to prevent the spread of Ulster mischief. Halting between these two things must spell danger."

FAITHFUL WORKERS BAND AT ST. PAULS CHURCH

Yesterday evening a very interesting entertainment was given in the lecture hall of St. Paul's church by the Faithful Workers Mission Band.

The program was admirably varied, vocal and instrumental solos as well as violin and piano duets had their place in it. Bright songs by nineteen elder girls were interspersed with nursery rhymes and other simple pieces by eleven tiny boys and girls. Two dialogues by the elder girls were well delivered; while a recitation on "The Shipwreck" displayed considerable elocutionary power. Though all the performers reflected credit on those who trained them, Rev. Robt. Pogue carried the audience with him when he said at the close that the little ones carried off the palm.

2. That the Board approve of the "Mothers" meetings in the schools as suggested by the deputation of the "Women's Council" at the last meeting of the Board and that use of class rooms in each school be granted for the purpose, the necessary arrangements in connection therewith to be satisfactory to the Inspector.

3. That the existing arrangements with the Y.M.C.A. for use of their gymnasium and instructor for the pupils of the Collegiate Institute, for a term of five months, from November 1st, at $120.00 payable monthly be continued.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

The report was adopted.

In support of the foregoing report, Mr. W. H. Hill advanced that the physical as well as the intellectual welfare of scholars should be a care of the Board. He thought this move was but the elementary part of what the Board will eventually have to do in this connection, and the public will, he ventured to say, be surprised at the results accruing therefrom.

Mr. Turner doubted if it would be wise to.

CHURCHILL'S AVIATOR COMRADE IS KILLED

Capt. Wildman-Lushington, With Whom War Lord Flew Yesterday Dashed to Death.

Eastchurch, Kent, Dec. 2.—Captain Gilbert V. Wildman-Lushington, commander of the British naval flying corps, with whom Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, made a long flight on Saturday, was killed to-day at the naval flying grounds here by a fall with his biplane.

The well-known aviator was flying with a brother officer, Captain Henry Fawcett, of the Royal Marines, who was piloting the aeroplane and who suffered slight injuries, while the machine crashed to the earth and was splintered to matchwood.

MEXICO TO FALL IN MONTH SO SAY REBELS

Federals Leave Chihuahua, and Villa Takes Possession of Famine-Stricken Town

Mexico City, Dec. 2.—News that Chihuahua has fallen into rebel hands caused considerable uneasiness to-day in the capital. Fear was openly expressed that General Villa might find little opposition now to an attack on Mexico City.

Rear Admiral Sir Christopher Cradock, commander of the British cruisers in Mediterranean waters, expected to meet Gen. Huerta to-day. Cradock, who is quartered at the British Foreign Minister Moheno, and was informed that Huerta expected to receive him after that. The Britisher made it plain that his call at the national palace would be merely a courtesy.

Buying New Rifles.

Mexico City, Dec. 2.—A provisional contract has been signed with manufacturers in Berlin and Vienna for delivery of 50,000 Mauser rifles and a million cartridges to the Mexican Federal Government. It is stated here that the final signatures to the contract will be given by agents in London.

ENGLAND'S CALL FOR RECRUITS FOR THE VOLUNTEER LEAGUE

New York, Dec. 1.—A circular letter whose contents are surprising if authentic has been received in this city from England, calling for "recruits for the British volunteer force for the support of Ulster and the Union" in political conflict in Ireland over the Home Rule bill.

As earmarks of authenticity, the letter bears this caption:

"British League for the support of Ulster and the Union," and beneath engravings emblematic of England, Scotland and Ireland, with the motto: "Juis Separabit," a committee is named, including Lord Willoughby de Broke, chairman; the Duke of Bedford, Lord Charles Beresford, and a number of members of Parliament.

The Letter "Confidential."

The communication as exhibited by a wealthy English landowner, who is now visiting in this city, is in part as follows:

"(Strictly confidential.)

"Dear Sir: Lord Willoughby de Broke has asked me to find a few recruits for the British volunteer force for the support of Ulster and the Union. I will be glad if you will let me know if any of your friends would be willing to be enrolled. The following is a brief outline of the scheme.

"1. To enroll suitable men to assist the loyalists of Ulster, if necessary, in their armed resistance to Home Rule.

"2. Men enrolled will be expected to defray the cost of the journey and back, and while there everything will be found.

"3. A knowledge of drill desirable.

"4. Men thus enrolled must sign a form of attestation.

"5. To submit themselves to a number of drills.

Secrecy Desired.

"6. It is undesirable to publish the activities of the branch, and matters of organization should be treated as far as possible in a confidential manner.

"7. A careful choice of men enrolled, it is absolutely necessary that they be staunch adherents of the Union of Great Britain and Ireland at all costs and at all hazards.

"I am particularly anxious to establish a branch in your town at once, and therefore I shall be glad if you will kindly supply to me one or two names of persons whom I can call on personally. Kindly treat this matter as strictly confidential."

SURE, SAFE WAY TO BANISH HAIRS

(Aids to Beauty)

The electric treatment for removing hairy growths is rapidly falling into disuse since it has been found that a thick paste made with powdered delatone and water gives more satisfactory results and works much quicker. This delatone paste is applied to the objectionable hairs and after 2 or 3 minutes it is rubbed off and with it comes every trace of hair. Washing the skin is free from [illegible]

TRAINER OF STARS IN CONNIE MACK

Leader of Athletics Always Has His Eyes on the Future and on Young Players

There is an expression, "Connie Mack luck." It is shouted whenever Connie brings out a new star. It isn't luck. It's hard work. It's perseverance. It is careful selection of players and patient teaching. It is prudent handling of the raw material. It is weeks, months, years of preparation. It is a constant, never ending effort to be prepared always for the day when a star begins to go back.

Mack develops his own players. He gets them very young, usually out of high schools or colleges. He aims to secure them before they have bad baseball habits; that is, false or incorrect methods in batting, throwing, pitching, etc.

CONNIE MACK as he looks on the foul line

Mack first watches a lad's physical faults. He tries to correct them. If the youngster will not listen to advice off the team he goes. His ticket to a minor league city reads only one way. Only one man in 11 years ever came back to the Athletics. This was Bris Lord.

After curing a player of his false motions, Connie starts to train him physically and mentally. He coaches the lad on the field and he seats him near him on the bench during a game and explains the various plays as they come up. He next tries him in every position until he finds the one the boy can play best. Then he waits for the decline of a veteran. Some day a man is needed for a man's job on the diamond and the recruit who has been trained carefully steps into the limelight a finished baseball product. It was so with Collins, Barr, Lapp, McInnis and it will be so with others.

Twice a day Mack meets his players. They discuss the plays of the game before. They plan the battle that is at hand. Every opposing pitcher is put under a magnifying glass, so to speak. Every twirler has certain little motions which he makes in delivering different kinds of balls. These are pointed out. It was because a member of the Athletics discovered that Mathewson made a certain movement with his foot when he pitched his deadly "fadeaway" that the Athletics beat New York when Mathewson was pitching in a memorable world series.

Having culled the youngsters he deems worthy, Connie puts them with the veterans. Not one of the latter could ever dare attempt to discourage a youngster. The star may see his job slipping from him, but he has an abiding faith in his manager. He knows that Connie is watching out for the future of his men and a veteran seldom leaves his club without first getting a job as manager of another team.

STEEL FOLDING CHAIR

Can be Collapsed Into Smaller Compass Than Music Roll

Here is a steel folding chair that can be collapsed into a compass smaller than that of the ordinary music roll. There are numerous folding chairs, but the strong point (literally) of this one is the material of which it is made —steel. The frame is guaranteed to support 400 pounds and the illustration so completely explains the principle that it is unnecessary to go into that. The seat is of strong cotton duck, and from each corner steel straps reach down to the lower legs. Such chairs are handy for automobiles, artists on sketching tours, campers and picnic parties and for use in the verandas of cottages and clubhouses. When folded the chair is enclosed in a waterproof cover of cylindrical shape and with a handle to it.

Wealth From the Forests

It is now commercially possible to reduce the fifty to sixty per cent. waste formerly left in the woods by the lumbermen to no more than five per cent., by a combination of three well-developed chemical industries, namely, paper-making, wood-distillation (in a modified form) and the manufacture of resin oils. Practically all the valuable constituents from the stumps, tops, branches and defective stems which would otherwise be left to rot in the forest are thus converted into useful commodities.

Are Ladies' Hats Perishable Goods?

An amusing incident occurred at Aberdeen during the carters' strike. An agreement was arrived at with the Northern Co-operative Company that the carters of that concern should remove only perishable goods from the station. A Co-operative lorry began to load goods for the company's stores, and the strikers' delegate found that the goods included ladies' headgear. He remained dissatisfied with the explanation that the hats were perishable goods.

Token for Speaking Welsh

The latest practical step taken by the Cymry Cymreig Caerdydd towards the utilisation of the Welsh language in everyday life and business is a beautiful button which is to be worn by the members and all Welsh-speaking Welshmen who may care to do so. There is every reason to believe that the button will be adopted universally as a token of a pledge to utilise the mother tongue on all legitimate occasions, and never to address a wearer of the button except in Welsh.

THE SUFFRAGE CONVENTION AT WASHINGTON.

What gives every promise of being the most important convention of women suffragists ever held in the United States, is now in session in Washington.

The women, whose leaders are the representative suffragists of the United States, have arranged a systematic and comprehensive program of action, including visits to President Wilson, hearings before the Congressional committee on Constitutional amendments, and speeches by Senators and Representatives, and by such famous exponents of the cause of suffrage as Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Miss Jane Adams and Senator Helen Ring Robinson, of Colorado.

In numbers, earnestness, and the thoroughness of the preparations made, this gathering is impressive, and, coming as it does just before the assembling of the regular session of Congress, it will go far to bring to a direct issue the principal object of the meeting, namely, the proposal for a Constitutional amendment granting women throughout the nation the voting franchise they now enjoy in several of the States.

HERE IS MORE PROOF OF QUICK CURE FOR ALL FOLKS THAT ARE WEAK, AILING, NERVOUS.

More Praise for Dr. Hamilton's Pills

"For a period last summer the thought of food excited feeling of nausea," writes Mrs. C. A. Dodge, of Bloomsbury. "The heat had made me listless and the distaste for food reduced me to a condition of semi-starvation and brought me to the verge of nervous collapse. Tonics were useless to restore an active desire for food. The doctors told me my liver and kidneys were both at fault, but the medicines they gave me were too severe and reduced my strength so that I had to abandon them. At the suggestion of a friend who had been cured of blood and skin trouble, I began the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. The difference I first noticed was, that while they cleansed the system, instead of feeling weaker I felt better after taking them. Indeed their activity was so mild it was easy to forget I had taken them at all; they seemed to go right to the liver, and in a very brief time not only did all source of nausea disappear, but I began to crave food and I digested it reasonably well. Then I began to put on weight until within three months I was brought to a condition of good health. I urge Dr. Hamilton's Pills for all who are in poor health."

Get this best of all medicines today and refuse a substitute for Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers. 25c. per box or five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

THE MACDONALD ELECTIONS

Now that a new election has been ordered in Macdonald, it is in order to refer to the case.

Macdonald was first made vacant in 1912 by the resignation of the Conservative member to accept a position on the Grain Commission, while Richelieu was vacated by P. J. Cardin, Liberal member, admitting corrupt practices. Bye-elections in both constituencies were held in October, 1912. In Macdonald the Conservative candidate was elected by a greatly increased majority, while in Richelieu the Liberal majority was cut in half. Both seats were protested and the Macdonald petition has been heard and a new election set for December 13.

The Liberals by technicalities have delayed the hearing of the Richelieu case. In their desperation they carried their objections to the Supreme Court. These having been thrown out, they are now arranging other obstacles to get another session of parliament for Mr. Cardin. It is said that once the case comes to trial Cardin will not face the courts, but will do as he did in 1912—admit corruption.

If the Liberals can continue their obstruction for another month he will have another session of parliament. Unseated for corruption of 1912, he will be again this year, if his friends are unsuccessful in their efforts to protect him.

Richelieu contrasted with Macdonald places the pretentions of the Liberals in an unfavorable light. They would hasten the trial of charges of corruption against their opponents, but prevent similar charges against themselves being heard.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

EXECUTION OF MARY, QUEEN OF SCOTS.

(Published by Request.)

Beside the block a sullen headsman stood,
And gleamed the broad axe in his hand
That soon must drip with blood.
With slow and steady steps there came a lady through the hall,
And breathless silence chained the lips and touched the hearts of all.
Rich were the sable robes she wore, her white veil round her fall,
And from her neck there hung a cross the cross she loved so well.

I know that queenly form again, though blighted was its bloom.
I saw that grief had decked it out an offering for the tomb.
I know the eye, though faint its light
That once so brightly shone.
I know the voice, though feeble now, that thrilled with every tone.
I know the ringlets, almost grey, once threads of living gold.
I know that bounding grace of step, that symmetry of mold.

Even now I see her far away in that calm convent aisle.
I hear her chant her vesper hymn, I mark her holy smile.
Even now I see her bursting forth upon her bridal morn,
A new star in the firmament to light and glory born.
Alas! the change! She placed her foot upon a triple throne,
And on the scaffold now she stands beside the block alone.
The little dog that licks her hand, the last of all the crowd,
Who sunned themselves beneath her glance, and round her footsteps bowed.

Her neck is bared! The blow is struck! The soul has passed away.
The bright, the beautiful is now a bleeding piece of clay.
The dog is moaning piteously, and as it gurgles o'er
Laps the warm blood that trickling runs unheeded to the floor.
The blood of beauty, wealth and power, the heart blood of a queen,
The noblest of the Stuart race, the fairest earth has seen.
Lapped by a dog! Go, think of it in silence and alone.
Then weigh against a grain of sand the glories of a throne.

LATEST FROM APSLEY

Wm. Peters and family who have been residing in Apsley for the past two years have moved to Coe Hill.

Richard Griffin, late of Rochester, has leased the house lately vacated by Mr. Peters, and will become a resident of Apsley.

The weather is still mild up here, cattle and sheep getting plenty of pasture, which means a great saving on feed this winter.

The light frosts and mild days are improving the roads.

Mr. Robert Knox, of Smith, is visiting friends in Anstruther.

Mr. Joseph Knox, and party, were up inspecting the dams. They drove through to Eel's Lake dam and found everything satisfactory. The party while here made application to join the Hall of Wisdom Club, and when they come up again a special meeting will be called to initiate them. In the meantime the President, Anvil Jim, will arrange with the Burleigh Ranching Co., for the use of one of their thoroughbred goats for the occasion.

The hunting season for deer is over, but not for bears, foxes, rabbits, etc. So three or four sporting gentlemen with guns in their hands and blood in their eyes went out the Jack's Lake road to secure some foxes, rabbits and incidentally a bear or two. Before going out they made arrangements with Ben to secure a team to take the trophies of the chase to town, but at this season bears are busy hunting up winter quarters and foxes are very elusive, but the poor rabbits never imagined those men were real hunters. Result, three dead rabbits, which, as nothing else was to be seen, were borne in triumph to the village by the mighty hunters, who almost quarreled as to who shot them, and who should carry them. But a compromise was made that each should carry them in turn. Peace was restored until after supper, when they commenced again to argue on various subjects until bed time. A guest in the house, affirmed in the morning that they argued all night, but B. denied that, saying it was H. snoring and M. talking in his sleep, about bears and wolves, and calling for K. to help him.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who has been visiting her father, Mr. Philip Elmhurst, Clanricaide, for the past 3 months, returned home, Thursday, 27th. Her father accompanied her on an extended visit to British Columbia, where her home is. We will miss Phil, and hope to see him back again in the near future. The lumber camps are all in full blast, and there will be a very large drive of logs going down next spring.

TAKES OFF DANDRUFF, HAIR STOPS FALLING

Girls! Try this! Makes hair thick, glossy, fluffy, beautiful—No more itching scalp.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.

Captain Swinton said it had been the dream of his boyhood and the hope of his manhood to bring back the estate to his family.

FROM THE PIT TO PREMIER

Australia's Premier Worked in Coal Mine As a Boy

The Hon. Joseph Cook, who became Premier of the Commonwealth of Australia upon the defeat of the Labor Government, fought his way upward from a very humble station in life. He was born in 1860 at Silverdale, Staffordshire. As a boy he worked in a coal mine for $1.50 weekly, and on emigrating to Australia in 1885 he worked in the Lithgow fields, near Newcastle, New South Wales.

He studied shorthand, and rapidly acquired proficiency, obtaining a certificate for a speed of 160 words a minute. He had an inclination to enter the ministry of the Methodist Church and even passed some of the examinations, but his crisp and fluent style attracted the attention of the Coalminers' Association, who chose him as their secretary. In 1891 he entered the New South Wales Parliament.

Soon his debating power and administrative ability brought him into prominence in the Free Trade party, then led by Mr. (now Sir George) Reid, and from 1894 to 1899 he was a member of the Reid Ministry, as Postmaster-General and Minister of Mines and Agriculture.

After the federation in 1901 Mr. Cook was returned to the first Federal Parliament. He was Sir George Reid's, and afterwards Mr. Deakin's, lieutenant in the House of Representatives, and became Leader of the Opposition on the latter's retirement.

GHOSTS OF THE TOWER

Phantom Gravedigger and Old Soldier's Adventure With Henry VIII.

It would be surprising if the Tower of London, the scene of so many of history's most ghastly pages, should not be peopled by ghosts. A story is told of the spot where the bones of the young King Edward V. and his brother Richard, Duke of York, are stated to have been found in 1674. One evening, just about twilight, an official of the Tower heard the sound of digging and the loose spattering of gravel, and on turning aside saw the shadowy outlines of an enormous man digging furiously at the soil. Much alarmed, the official drew back, and as he did so the figure swung round and faced him, when he perceived, to his horror, a skeleton clad in a richly-fashioned garment, on the breast of which was emblazoned the Royal arms. The official uttered an ejaculation, whereupon the figure vanished, though the sound of the digging continued for some seconds.

And here is a cheerful story told by an aged pensioner about twenty years ago:

"I was on duty in the Beauchamp Tower," he said, "just outside the cell where Anne Boleyn was imprisoned. I was thinking of old Henry VIII., and wishing I had his luck with wives, for my one and only missus was as ugly as Newgate, when all of a sudden I heard my name called, and on turning round nearly died with fright. Floating in mid-air, immediately behind me, was a face—Heaven help me, it makes me shiver, even now, to think of it—round, red, and bloated, with a loose, dribbling mouth, and protruding, heavy-lidded, pale eyes, alight with a [illegible] [illegible]ish glow.

"I knew the face at once, for I had often seen it in the history books—Henry VIII.

"Well! the affair was hushed up in the usual way. We were threatened with the sack if we dare as much as breathe a word that the Tower was haunted. The oddest thing about it is that, on my return home, I found my missus was dead."

Find in Bottle of Stout

Judgment for $25 and $5 for a doctor's fee was awarded by Judge Curtis at Navan to John Neville, a groom, who sued a local public house keeper for $250 damages due to the plaintiff's having drunk part of a bottle of stout supplied by the defendant, and which was alleged to have contained the body of a mouse. Asked by his honor how he knew there was a mouse in the bottle, plaintiff held the offending bottle up and said, amid laughter, "Because he is there still."

WORLD'S LONLIEST SPOT

An English historian has finally decided on the loneliest spot on the earth. Tristan d'Acunha it is called, and it is an island hundreds and hundreds of miles away from its nearest neighbors. Messages for the Future

The [illegible] Historic Record Association has formed a novel plan of delivering messages from its members to their descendants 100 years from now.

Two envelopes of durable Japanese vellum are sent to each member, with the request that genealogical memoranda, messages and photographs be enclosed. The sealed envelopes will be deposited in lead-lined steel chests. One will be stored with the association's collections in the New York Public Library.

A copperplate inscription will direct that the other chest be put in a vault near the Cheops pyramid in Egypt. In this way the [illegible] against possible destruction by war or natural causes.

The chests will also contain documents, tablets, and photographs relating to affairs of the present day.

"Indians and white prospectors and pack train freighters value these untamed animals more than the high bred horses," said Mr. Bradley. "They are the progeny of horses turned loose on the trail by discouraged or dying men during the famous gold rush in the Cariboo country. Thousands of the veriest 'tenderfoot' stampeded to the new fields in the early '60's. Most of them were incompetent, and, in fact, utterly helpless in that wild country, and the horses either broke away or were abandoned when the fortune-hunters gave up the long trail.

"The horses made their feeding grounds in the vicinity of Barkerville for several years afterward and their offspring wandered northward as the bands increased. They make trails on the mountains and timbered country much after the fashion of buffalo in the early days and deer at present.

"The Indians and freighters, working in the timbered districts, catch them with snares, such as are used for lynx. In most cases the animals are easily broken and they are better for the rough country than high grade horses on account of their stamina and sureness of foot on the mountain trails. We lost horses from our train from time to time and replaced them with wild animals."

A Collier-composer

Among the residents of Bargoed, South Wales, is a man who has written and composed over 300 hymns and many songs. Yet he is only a working collier. Since he was twelve years of age David Jones has earned his livelihood in the mine, but he always had a passion for music.

Curiously enough his best work has been done when he has been in trouble. One hymn, entitled "Beautiful Home," which is sung in every household in South Wales, he wrote and composed after the death of one of his children.

Centenarian as Lodging-house Keeper

Mrs. Elizabeth Roberts, of Brynkir, Carnarvonshire, Wales, celebrated her 100th birthday recently. She was born in the district, and has lived there all her life. So independent and hard-working is she that she resents all idea of applying for an old age pension, and she still obtains her livelihood by catering for tourists and taking in lodgers.

New Rifle Tested

King George was an interested spectator at Aldershot of trials with a new service rifle, slightly longer than the one generally in use and having as an additional feature an aperture sight. The King thus saw a firing squad at work with the new rifle at 600 yards. The targets used were a foot square, made of solid steel, three-eighths of an inch thick. One of them which had been in use was shown to the King and Queen. It had four bullet-holes in it, perfectly drilled as if the metal had been punched out with a machine tool.

Eight men of the Suffolk Regiment, who had been drawn from the same company and were not picked marksmen, fired with the new rifle at twenty-four targets. Each man had twenty rounds, and when their ammunition was exhausted all but one of the targets had been brought down.

Lady's Share Deals

It was stated at a meeting at the London Bankruptcy Court of the creditors of Miss Cecilia Georgina Susan Lennox, of East Pallant House, Chichester, that in three years the lady had lost $100,000 in Stock Exchange dealings. Of her losses in speculation she had paid $75,000. Miss Lennox is a daughter of the late General Sir Wilbraham Oates Lennox, V.C., who died in 1897 and of Lady Lennox Sinclair. She is a great-granddaughter of the Fourth Duke of Richmond.

Railway But no Roads

The medical arrangements required by the Insurance Act have drawn attention to the inaccessibility of many Scottish villages. To the Roxburghshire railway colony of Riccarton a special interest attaches. No roads lead to this well known junction; and a special train, which starts at 10.15 a.m., conveys worshippers to Hawick every Sunday morning. Free passes are supplied to railway employes and their families. To meet the medical requirements of the community, the railway directors permit Hawick doctors to travel to Riccarton on engines or in guards' vans and first class compartments, as they may find most convenient. Among other privileges peculiar to the district, goods are carried to the grocery store at half the usual rates.

Diabetes

TORTURED WITH AN UNQUENCHABLE THIRST FOR YEARS TRIED EVERYTHING THAT MEDICAL AID COULD DO FOR ME, BUT GRADUALLY GOT WORSE TRIED SANOL'S ANTI-DIABETES AND WAS CURED.

Ashville, Man.

Dear Sirs:—

During the month of March I was informed that I had a well developed case of Diabetes. I immediately placed myself upon a rigid diet after a week of which the first urinalysis disclosed a sugar content of 8 p.c. After several months of dieting during which time I was taking a so-called-cure the sugar content was reduced to 3 p.c. I began taking SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES with the result that within a short time the urinalysis made by competent persons, and at different periods, disclosed no sugar, whatever. This condition, is indeed, very gratifying and I have every reason to believe that I am quite cured. For some time past my diet has been a liberal one, consisting largely in [illegible] high in carbo-hydrates, but I still avoid all sugars and syrups. This is in accordance with the directions which I can well afford to follow. I am gaining in weight and strength, and once more feel that it is good to be alive.

"There is no question in my mind regarding the virtues of SANOL'S ANTIDIABETES, and I feel that a great blessing has been conferred upon suffering humanity by this discovery, and use of this medicine."

Yours truly,
W. A. FOX.

Good Soldiers Here

"You have splendid material here in Canada, much better, I should say, than we have in Britain, but you are in more need of training, and I think you should have a sixteen days' period of military camp instead of but eight."

In these words Lord Brooke, the British territorial officer who was one of those who exchanged with Canadian officers through the plan for interchange of the military experience of both countries, expressed himself at Ottawa.

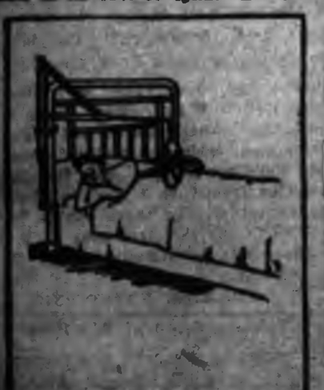
LIMB SUPPORT

Holds Arm or Leg Suspended From Danger of Shock

To facilitate the setting of broken bones in the arm or leg, the apparatus shown in the illustration would appear to be very effective. Upright rods with swinging horizontal arms are attached to posts of the headboard and footboard of the bed. The height of these arms can be regulated by chains, and their length is also adjustable. Hanging from each one is a resilient limb support in the form of a loop through which the injured limb in its cast or splints is thrust.



LIMBS HELD IN [illegible].

This loop is suspended by a spring and a limb supported by it is not subjected to any strain and has the effect of floating in the air as nearly as could be achieved. In this position there is no danger of further injury or slipping of splints and bandages by the patient's unconscious moving in bed.

The fact that Prince Albert, King George's second son, embarked upon a naval career by joining H.M.S. Cumberland as a cadet shows that past traditions in regard to the naval training of British Princes are being religiously observed. It is intended that Prince Albert, like his father, shall be thoroughly trained in naval matters. His elder brother, the Prince of Wales, it will be remembered, spent some months at Dartmouth [illegible], but it was not [illegible] that he should [illegible] [illegible] profession.

On the other hand, the naval training of Prince Albert will cover some considerable time. And it is an illustration of the thorough manner in which this training is to be undergone that, when the King heard that preparations had begun on the "Cumberland" for accommodating the Prince in a cabin, His Majesty promptly vetoed any such distinction and directed that his son should be in every respect treated as an ordinary cadet. So Prince Albert satisfied himself with a hammock.

The sending of the second son to sea is quite in accordance with precedent. It will be remembered that King George, with his elder brother, the late Duke of Clarence, spent two years on the Britannia training ship, and then made a voyage around the world in the Bacchante. But after that voyage, while his brother left the sea, King George remained in the Navy, and during his naval career conformed closely to the usual custom. Indeed, so far as promotion was concerned, he owed little to the advantage derived from his exalted rank.

Therein his naval career differed from that of his uncle, the Duke of Edinburgh, who was a pupil of Captain Harris in the Illustrious, the predecessor of the Britannia, but who, to his after regret, skipped the grades of sub-lieutenant and commander and became a captain in the Navy at the age of twenty-two.

Prince Henry of Battenberg, who succeeded Sir Francis Bridgeman as First Sea Lord, is the most notable instance of a Royal personage attaining a great position in the naval world. It is interesting to recall, however, that Prince Edward Augustus, a younger brother of George III., went to sea at the age of nineteen, was posted in the following year, and after only four years' service hoisted his flag as second-in-command in the Channel. Prince Edward was entered on the ship's books as a volunteer for wages and victuals, and his original commander, who afterwards became his flag-captain, was Lord Howe.

Prince Edward's brother, Prince Henry Frederick, also entered the naval service as a midshipman when he was twenty-three years of age, and was likewise made a captain before he had been many months at sea. He was a flag-officer at the age of twenty-five.

Oldest "Apprentice Boy"

The death occurred of David Harvie, caretaker of the Apprentice Boys' Memorial Hall and Walker's Monument, Derry. He is believed to have been the oldest Apprentice Boy in the city. When Mr. Gladstone introduced his first Home Rule Bill Mr. Harvie was one of the thirteen "Boys" chosen as a deputation to attend the Convention in Belfast to protest against the measure.

Woman's Strange Conduct in Church

Kate Martin was committed to an asylum at Belfast after having caused a scene in Clifton street Presbyterian Church during Sunday service. Evidence was given that she entered the choir box, overturned the table, and threw some chairs among the congregation. "I only tried to strike the minister for his false preaching," said the woman. "We Catholics want our rights."

Passion for Picture Houses

Two cases of theft, in which it was stated the accused committed the offences to get money in order to enable them to visit picture houses, were heard in Edinburgh Police Court. In one case a youth, a shop porter, pleaded guilty to the theft of $[illegible]. On the day he stole the money he went to Glasgow and spent all but $[illegible]. It was stated that he had been getting money by hook or by crook to go to picture houses.

Hungry Showmen

An unusual situation arose on the early closing day at Saltcoats, where the annual fair was about to be held. Thirty show people left Kilmarnock in the forenoon intending to get their dinner when they reached Saltcoats in the afternoon. On arriving they found that all shops were closed, it being the half-holiday. They were unable to get anything but bread. To relieve the situation a permit was given by the shops inspector to the showmen authorising shops to supply them with their requirements.

Street [illegible]

At Glasgow Charles Henderson was fined for having cheated a man out of a shilling by pretending that paper bags which he was selling also contained money. He denied the charge. A detective watched the accused placing brass chains in a piece of paper along with three [illegible], and then apparently folding the whole lot up and offering them for sale for one shilling. He did not make any definite promise to purchasers that they would get the money, but they were led to believe that they had a chance of getting something more than the chain.

Built His Own Chapel

The death took place, at the age of eighty-six, of Mr. W. O. Roberts, market gardener, of Bangor, one of the religious worthies of North Wales. He was a Baptist, and practically built a chapel with his own hands, leading himself 300 carts full of stone for the building. He was probably the oldest Sunday School teacher in Wales, beginning in his teens.

Motor-boat as Coffin

A motor-boat was used as a coffin at the funeral at East Cowes of Miss Ethel Kate Saunders, the only daughter of Samuel E. Saunders, a well known motor-boat builder. Miss Saunders, who was thirty-three years old, assisted her father in the successful part of the business.

The body was placed in a leaden shell, and then deposited in a specially-constructed hull of a motor-boat, with bow and stern rounded off. The boat was made of two skins of plain mahogany sewn together.

The motor-boat containing the remains was buried in a brick grave lined with primroses and evergreens.

The means prevailing at present for the marking of sheep for the purpose of identification is unsatisfactory for the reason that the coal tar or pitch solution which is made use of has a serious effect on the wool not only where the mark has been made on the hair, but all that which is being put through the cleansing process at that time. Such wool brings a decreased price. The National Society of Agriculture of France investigated the matter and the report of those appointed to do the work contains the following: It has been proposed to use analine colors, but this is even worse, since the colors do not merely soil the fleece, but actually dye it. Other means are not lacking, notably that of tattooing the ear of the sheep. Also, a small metallic plate can be fastened in the ear, as is done with African sheep to prove that they have been "clavelized," i.e., inoculated with the special serum which combats their dangerous and contagious eruptive malady, rot or scab. The Chamber of Commerce advises the employment of a color composed of linseed oil, essence of turpentine and Prussian blue or similar color. It recommends marking on nose, forehead or nape of the neck.

Breaking it to Him Gently.

"My dear nephew," wrote a wealthy old uncle, "allow me to congratulate you on your approaching marriage, and please accept from me the accompanying wedding gift. You will find it extremely appropriate in the circumstances." With much expectation the prospective bridegroom opened the parcel and found inside a large book marked "Household expense book."—Tit-Bits.

Old Folks' Coughs Permanently Cured

The Public is Loud in Its Praise of the Modern Direct Breathing Cure.

Elderly people take cold easily. Unlike young folks, they recover slowly, if ever. That is why so many people past middle life die of pneumonia. Even though pneumonia does not develop and kill, coughs certainly weak en all elderly people.

Cough Syrups seldom do much good because they upset digestion. Any druggist or doctor knows that a much more effective treatment is "CATARRHOZONE," which heals and soothes the irritated surfaces of the throat.

In using Catarrhozone you do not take medicine into the stomach—you simply breathe into the throat, nose and lungs rich piney balsamic vapor, so full of healing power that colds, catarrh and bronchitis disappear almost instantly.

"At sixty-eight years of age I can testify that I am never troubled with coughs or colds," writes J. E. Pilgrim, of Kingston. "They used to be the bain of my life, and that was before I used Catarrhozone, which was recommended to me by C. L. Prouse, druggist. To use Catarrhozone is just like being in an immense pine woods. The balsamic vapor of Catarrhozone is like a tonic, it is so stimulating to the breathing organs, so soothing to sore spots, so full of power to drive out colds and congestion. I will always use and recommend Catarrhozone as a preventive and cure for coughs, colds, bronchitis, throat irritation and catarrh.

(Signed) "J. E. PILGRIM."

A Catarrhozone Inhaler in your pocket or purse enables you to stop a cold with the first sneeze. Large size costs $1.00 and supplies treatment for two months; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

POLICE COURT NEWS

Sent to Central.

Young Drunk Again.

At yesterday's police court, Abraham Young was charged with having been drunk. He denied the soft impeachment. An officer swore that Young, who had been charged the day before with turning his family out of doors, was brought to the station in a drunken condition. He was fined $5 to be paid forthwith.

Pensioner Heavily Fined.

Hubert Hemings, at yesterday's police court, was charged with obtaining board and lodging from Mrs. Edwards. Hubert, who is English, pleaded not guilty. Mrs. Edward's daughter, who lives with her on Union street, said Hemings came to the house about Oct. 15th. Hemings told her mother he had a farm back of Jackson Park, with horses and cows, on which he had paid $3,000. He had a man looking after the place and was going to sell as he didn't like farming in winter. He hugged and kissed a lady boarder at Mrs. Edward's boarding house. The lady boarder was found in Heming's room sitting beside the bed asleep with her head on Heming's pillow. The lady boarder was ordered out. Hemings said he was going to make the girl his wife and was going to cable to England for £50. He showed what looked like a cablegram to that effect. He has not married the girl. Hemings owes her, the witness' mother $18. He left no trunk behind. The prisoner in the box said he had not "eyed the woman, but was willing to pay." He had no farm near Jackson Park. He has a pension of $36 due on January 1st. Hemings was fined $23.75 or 30 days. He will inhale the ozone of Castle Nesbitt for a month. When that pension arrives, if the fine is paid, Mrs. Edwards will get her money.

GOVERNMENT PLANS TO SEIZE ARMS SHIPPED TO GREEN ISLE

Importation of Ammunition Likely Checked by Drastic Law--Lord Haldane Has New Solution

London, Dec. 3.—If Mr. Asquith did not mean to clench his fist against Ulster in his Leeds speech on Thursday as he probably did not, four Cabinet Ministers hastened yesterday to re-open that fist. They did so obviously with Mr. Asquith's approval. Lord Haldane went further. He expressly developed Mr. Asquith's conference offer for free and informal discussion between leaders. Lord Haldane now says the conference may not consist of only one man on each side. It may be more; that is to say quite a private, informal chat.

On the basis of Government assurance they may openly make changes, which do not compromise the principle of Parliament and the executive for Ireland.

Sir Edward's Latest.

Sir John Simons, Mr. Herbert Samuel and Mr. J. A. Pease said much the same thing in various parts of the country.

Sir Edward Carson's latest statement made at Sheffield last night, is: "What I have always noticed about this right hand of fellowship is that when a Radical politician extends it forth, and a Unionist tries to grasp it, the Radical always puts it in his pocket."

Meanwhile the Government is believed to be proceeding to-day with plans to check further importation of arms into Ireland, in which certain Unionist members of Parliament boast they are assisting.

How to Seize Arms.

Hitherto such seizures of arms as have taken place have been on the ground of their misdescription under the Customs Consolidation Act of 1876. Importation of arms, ammunition and gunpowder may be prohibited by proclamation or order-in-council, or by short and drastic enactment.

A Serious Matter

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—An items appears in the issue of your paper of today's date with reference to the assessment for school purposes in the Township of North Monaghan, which terminates with the suggestion "to our local member to shoulder the responsibility like a man to have it straightened out." Permit me to say that as the local member for this Riding, no responsibility can be placed upon my shoulders in connection with this question. This is clear from reference to certain provisions of the Separate Schools Act, which was consolidated during the last session of the Legislature, and from which I beg to quote: Section 65, Sub-section 1: "Where land is assessed against both owner and occupant or the owner and tenant, and the occupant or tenant the occupant or tenant shall be deemed to be the person primarily liable for the payment of school rates, and for determining whether such rates shall be applied to Public or Separate school purposes, and no agreement between the owner and tenant as to the payment of taxes as between themselves shall alter or affect this provision."

Section 63, Sub-section 1: "If it appears to the Council of any municipality after the final revision of the assessment roll, that through mistake or inadvertence, a ratepayer has been entered on the roll either as a supporter of separate schools or a supporter of public schools, the council after due inquiry and notice may correct such error, by directing the school taxes of such ratepayer to be paid to the proper school board; but it shall not be competent for the council to reverse the decision of the court of revision or of a judge on appeal."

These provisions cover fully the law on the subject and the procedure to be followed in such cases.

Yours truly,
R. A. PECK.

DR. STRUTHERS ON MEDICAL INSPECTION OF PUBLIC SCHOOLS

One of the burning questions of the day, the Medical Inspection of children in schools, was treated in a masterly and exhaustive manner yesterday evening by Dr. Struthers, Chief Medical Inspector of Public Schools in Toronto.

The meeting was arranged by the local Council of Women, and was held in the Assembly hall of the Collegiate Institute. Dr. M. A. Morrison presided. Among those present were Judge Huycke, Canon Davidson, Dr. Jessie Birnie, Dr. Neil, Dr. Sutton, Mr. Mowat, Mr. V. Eastwood and Col. Miller.

For nearly two hours Dr. Struthers held the attention of the audience. He said that medical health supervision in schools was forced upon us by (1) contagious disease, (2) tuberculosis, (3) the mentally defective child. This supervision must be [illegible]. Education should be not merely cultural and vocational, it should deal with health. [illegible] know only so much about [illegible] as they learned from the [illegible]. Parents were [illegible] the life of children [illegible] the requisite knowledge. The state must educate the [illegible] the responsibilities of parenthood, and must supply the deficiency of the parents as to the physical and mental care of the children.

A large number of stereopticon pictures were shown dealing with such subjects as: Inspection of Schools by Nurses and Doctors in Toronto and in England. Treatment of Children by Nurses, Doctors and Dentists; Instruction of Children by Nurses, and Open Air Schools especially weak children, which schools are held in Russia, Germany, England and Toronto.

Judge Huycke proposed, and Mr. V. Eastwood seconded a hearty vote of thanks to Dr. Struthers for his address.

HUNTER RULING GIVES TWIST TO HINDO AFFAIR

London Authorities Agree That British Columbia Judgement Perplexes

London, Dec. 3.—Developments in the Hindu question in British Columbia are being carefully watched in official quarters here. It is realized that the judgment of Chief Justice Hunter of British Columbia may tend to create a new difficulty for Indian and Imperial authorities in assuaging the opinions of natives in India who, knowing nothing of Dominion self-government, look to the King to secure them equal rights in all parts of his Dominions.

The most hopeful solution for South Africa, perhaps also for British Columbia, is now under consideration by the Imperial and Indian executives.

Imitate Soudan Scheme.

It is to imitate the colonization scheme of the Soudan, for Indians who refuse to submit to the conditions, which the Dominion Governments deems necessary.

South African journals suggest the immediate creation of a small commission of representatives of the Governments concerned, to inquire and submit definite proposals for the removal and colonization elsewhere, of British Indians from the British Dominions.

A LAUGHING EXIT

Trenton, N.J., Dec. 3.—"I want a few more laughs before I go", said William Diamond, electrocuted for murder. In the chair he shouted let her go, and in an instant was dead.

EXPECT MORE FINE WEATHER

Air is Remarkably Warm All Over the Dominion

Toronto, Dec. 3.—All over Canada people are regretting they put on their winter underwear so early. The inclined to be warm spell of fair weather threatens to stay for a few more days and it is general all over the Dominion. There are no signs of snow anywhere, excepting in the maritime provinces, where they are getting a little sleet to-day.

In Toronto at noon the thermometer registered 46.7, which is rather remarkably high. The normal temperature of Dec. 3 is 28.8.

Out in the West they are getting day time temperatures of about 40 degrees with frost at night. The lowest the mercury went in Toronto last night was 40 degrees.

Of late years the first few days of December have been marked by mild weather. To-days temperature of 46.7 is no means a record. On Dec. 6 last year a temperature of 56 degrees was recorded on December 10, 1911 it was 54.

There are no signs of any material change, said the weather man to the News this afternoon.

Merchants with winter goods to sell are the only persons seriously complaining.

LOCAL STEAMBOATS BEING OVERHAULED

The coming winter promises to be a busy one with the local ship carpenters. Mr. Hickey has a gang of men at work at the Macdonald Lumber Company's yard, busily engaged in overhauling the Steamer Manita. A new hull, built of oak, is being constructed for this trim little craft, and when completed she will be one of the best and fastest steamers on the local waters.

The steamer Water Lily, which has been out of commission for some time, is to be rebuilt from the keel up. This boat has for years been very popular with those who visit our beautiful chain of lakes. Next year she will appear practically as a new craft, and will be welcomed by the tourists and others who are becoming yearly more numerous on the Kawatha Lakes. Mr. Hickey intends to make this popular steamer one of the best on the inland lakes.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Company are also improving their fine fleet. The Island will be equipped with new and more powerful machinery. She has been pulled out of the water at the Company's headquarters at Young's Point.

The Stoney Lake Navigation Company are also to be gone over and repainted before navigation opens.

The government steamer Naid, under command of Capt. Carson, Fishery Inspector, is also to be rebuilt and improved by Mr. Hickey. She is pulled out at Macdonald's ship yard.

The steamer Esturion is at No. 6 lock, where she will remain during the winter. The Trent Valley Navigation Company intend to make improvements to her decks and equipment, so that she will be in better shape than ever to handle the excursion business of the lakes.

The tug Beaver, owned by Mr. Joe Young will undergo repairs at the yards adjoining Lock No. 6.

Capt. Burnet, of the Rainbow and Capt. Harris, of the Geneva, also intend overhauling their boats during the winter. The work on the former will be done at Burnet's Landing and the latter at Gore's Landing.

BOOK MAKER GOES TO JAIL

Toronto, Dec. 3.—Another book maker was sent to jail to-day. John Gagin pleaded guilty to a charge of keeping a common betting house, and was sentenced to forty days in jail with hard labor by Magistrate Denison.

"He takes the savings of the men at the Gendron Manufacturing Company," said Crown Attorney Corley, "and it is so bad that women complain of their husbands not bringing home enough money for their support."

Counsel for the defence Mr. W. A. Henderson asked the magistrate to impose a fine.

"There will be no more fines in these cases tried before me," said the Colonel they will all go to jail."

CARTAGE SERVICE.

Ottawa Deputation to Montreal After Definite Information From Railway.

Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The Ottawa Board of Trade wants to know if the railway companies have definitely decided to discontinue the cartage service on January as announced.

E. R. Bremner, G. D. Greene and Cecil Bethune were chosen at the Board of Trade Council meeting to go to Montreal to interview the officials with regard to this question.

They will ask what arrangements the railways intend to make for the receipt and delivery of freight [illegible] January 1st.

TRAPPED IN CHEAP HOTEL, 27 MEN BURNED TO DEATH

Boston Lodging House the Scene of a Horrible Fire Tragedy Early This Morning--Many of the Inmates Are Still Missing

Boston, Mass., Dec. 3.—Twenty-seven dead, three perhaps, fatally injured, dozens of men driven, naked and burned on the roofs and into the streets was the toll of a fire trap horror in the five storey Acadia lodging house in Washington street here early to-day.

Fire escapes at the rear only, tells the story. Twenty-four charred bodies, burned beyond recognition, were carted to the morgue to-day. The body of a colored man who jumped was picked up on the pavements. Geo. F. Adams, of South Boston, who died at the city hospital, was the only identified victim.

Rigid Probe of Fire Conditions.

Mayor Fitzgerald and Medical Examiner O'Leary declared to-day that they will force a rigid probe of fire protection conditions in Boston.

According to William Walsh, the night clerk, there were 178 lodgers in the building when the fire was discovered by a passing newsboy. After turning in an alarm he rushed into the building, awakening the men with his shouts.

Trapped in the tiny cells and tiers of bunks in the hotel, a men's fifteen cent lodging house, one hundred and seventy men fought for their lives. At 8 o'clock this morning 25 bodies had been taken from the ruins, and one man had died in the hospital. Three of those seriously injured were expected to die.

HUERTAN RULE MUST BE ENDED WILSON STATES

But United States is Content to Await its Crumbling Finish --President Reads "Annual" Address

Washington, Dec. 2.—President Wilson read his first annual message to Congress to-day, at a joint session of both branches, at 1 o'clock in the House Chamber. The message, among the briefest of documents of its kind from any President, and some 3,000 words long, required less than 30 minutes for reading, though it treated upon a variety of subjects.

The Mexican situation President Wilson dismissed with brief comment reiterating the sentiments he expressed in a special address to Congress on the same subject some time ago, and expressing the belief that the Huerta Government slowly was crumbling and that the United States probably would not be obliged to alter its policy of waiting.

Promises Another Message.

No programme for trust legislation was presented, further than mention of the desirability to the Sherman law "to prevent private monopoly more effectually than it has yet been prevented" and an announcement that the President would later address a special message to Congress dealing solely with that

HIS LORDSHIP BISHOP FALLON AVOIDS REPLY TO BOURASSA

London, Ont., Dec. 3.—Right Rev. Bishop Fallon, head of the Roman Catholic diocese of London, refuses to enter in to any controvesy with Henri Bourassa Nationalist Leader of Quebec, over the widely divergent doctrines as to Canada's future that were preached by them at the annual St. Andrew's Society banquet last Friday night. This morning he refused to discuss the editorial of Mr. Bourassa in Tuesday's edition of Le devoir in which the Nationalist Leader sharply criticized Bishop Fallon for his speech. Bishop Fallon admitted reading the editorial, but declined absolutely to say anything concerning it. I have nothing to say whatever," was his statement to the Canadian correspondent.

HUERTA'S MEN FLEE TO U.S.

Rebels Pursue After Hearing of Attempted Flight

Juarez, Mex. Dec. 3.—Confident that the seven Federal generals who evacuated Chihuahua City with their troops intend to seek refuge in the United States and thus be beyond danger of being taken prisoners by the rebels, General Francisco Villa to-day sent more troops to attempt to intercept them.

The generals led by Gen. Salvadore Mercado whose desertion of Chihuahua and whose statements that he had no money to pay his troops are regarded as virtual breakdown of the Huerta dictatorship so far as the north of Mexico is concerned, are headed for Ojinaga on the border. It is thought that they will cross the river to Presidio.

At Presidio they are expected to be arrested by the United States military authorities, taken to Marfa and thence to San Antonio. Their arrest on crossing the river will follow as a matter of course under a ruling of Secretary of War Garrison.

With the generals are many subordinate officers, about 2,000 federal regular soldiers, and more than a thousand persons of the wealthier class of Chihuahua, who look to flight rather than to face an attack by the rebels. Gen. Pascual Orozco and Gen. Jose Ynez Salazar, believed to be with Mercado, are under indictment returned in the Federal Court in El Paso, Texas, for violation of the neutrality law. Salazar is out on bond, but Orozco never was arrested.

BATTLESHIPS ARMAMENTS

The most striking point in recent dreadnought development is the increasing size and power of the gun. The British navy was the first to abandon the 12-inch gun as the main armament of dreadnoughts, and four battleships are now in commission—"Orion," "Thunderer," "Conqueror," and "Monarch"—which have ten of these weapons, firing 1,250-pound projectiles in five center-line turrets. The same caliber of gun is mounted in the four ships of the "King George V." class, and the four of the "Iron Duke" class, but the gun is of a much more powerful type. The length of the shell has been increased and 200 pounds added to its weight, much of the addition being accounted for by an increased weight of bursting charge. Another notable development in British dreadnought designs is the restitution of the 6-inch gun.

The essential difference between the battleship and battle-cruiser is that the battleship has thicker armor, more guns and less speed than the battle-cruiser. Thus, the battleship "Iron Duke" has a 12-inch belt, carries ten 13.5-inch guns, and is designed for 22.5 knots, while the "Tiger," battle-cruiser, has a 9¾-inch belt, carries eight 13.5-inch guns, and is designed for 28 knots. The first four battle-cruisers built for the British navy were designed for 25 knots.

The German authorities have not been very happy with their dreadnoughts designs. The first eight battleships have twelve big guns each, but only eight available for broadside fire. In the "Kaiser" and "Friedrich der Grosse," the number of 12-inch was reduced to ten, but there is a considerable gain in efficiency, inasmuch as all can fire on either beam, though only over a small arc. The next group, those of the "Kaiserin" class, have twelve 12-inch, and there is a full broadside.

Italy has always been noted for originality in warship design. The "Dante Alighieri," carrying twelve 12-inch on 19,400 tons, was the first triple-turreted warship to be completed, and that nation is building five ships which are to carry thirteen 12-inch guns.

With the exception of the United States, France is the only naval power of any standing which announces the characteristics of her new warships in advance of their completion. In the majority of cases, however, the details leak out by some means or another, and in only a very few instances are the main features of large ships under construction unknown.

CHILDREN'S SLEEP

Symptoms of Sickness Shown in the Manner of Resting

Much information as to the health of a child may be gained by careful watching of its attitude, movements and expression during sleep. The child who sleeps best with the mouth wide open and the head thrown back is most likely suffering from enlarged tonsils, which impede its breathing; if it can only sleep when the bedclothes have all been kicked off, rickets should be watched for; while lung or heart affections are shown at an early stage by the tendency to sleep high up on the pillow, so that the head and shoulders are raised. In cases of pain in any part of the head it will be found to be carried to the affected spot during sleep, so that breathing, headache, or earache may be diagnosed, while a serious sign of irritation in the stomach or bowels is the constant rubbing of the nose. Restless sleep, broken and uneasy, is a common symptom of serious illness, but any extreme torpor and drowsiness should also be suspected, as these frequently precede feverish ailments, such as scarlatina and measles. Convulsive attacks are nearly always preceded by the tight clenching of the hands, with the thumbs folded into the palms, and the stiffening or curling up of the toes.

LETTER WRITING

It is Important That One Should Master This Art

A certain amount of correspondence is necessary to every human being who owns a circle of friends and acquaintances and who accepts social obligations of any sort whatever. The kind little line of sympathy, the prompt note of acceptance upon receipt of an invitation, the few words of appreciation or thanks for a favor received betoken the man or woman versed in social matters, even though neither the heart nor the interest are in the laughing letter. The knack of indicting a well expressed epistle, short, graceful and to the point, if not learned during youth, should be acquired at whatever pains. The correct forms of letter writing are not difficult to master, and such forms are very important in a social sense.

One should avoid freakish note papers and stick to a heavy cream-laid paper, unlined, and almost square in size of sheet. At the top of the fourth page may be engraved the address, the name and telephone address of the country house or the family crest. It is in the best taste, however, to have the envelope unengraved. When deemed advisable, the address may be written by hand in any [illegible] across the back of the flap.

In 1869 the first professional ball club in the world was organized. It was the famous Cincinnati Reds, the pioneer paid-baseball club, in whose existence the game as it is to-day had its inception.

In 1869 this club played through the entire season, from March 15 till November 15, and never lost a game. It finished the season with a standing of 1.000. Its pay roll for the year, including every cent that went to the players in salaries, was [illegible].

There were 10 players on the club, of which one was a pitcher, Asa Brainard, and another was a substitute. The average salary per player was less than $1,000, or, to be exact, $950. The highest paid man was George Wright, the shortstop, who got $1,400. Captain Harry Wright got $1,200 for his share. The pitcher, who went through the season with a clean record, got $1,100. Six men drew $800.

And Hans Wagner in more modern times was paid a cool $10,000 for galloping around somewhere between second and third, hitting the ball and speeding the bases. Ty Cobb is said to get $12,000. Some difference!

Here's the salary of the first professional ball club, taken from the books of the treasurer:

George Wright, shortstop	1,400

The milky way or galaxy is an apparent ring extending entirely around the universe of stars visible in the largest telescope. It is composed of suns in literal millions. They are so remote that as seen from the earth they appear to be close to each other while in reality they are separated by millions and millions of miles.

To the eye, the belt of soft light looks like a continuous band of cloth of pearl but telescopes have the effect of bringing objects nearer. This separates the filmy cloud into many millions of glittering but minute points on the black background of space. At a distance forest trees seem to be close together, but as they are approached they separate and stand alone.

It is next to impossible to describe the matchless beauty of the milky way as seen in a telescope of great power. Carpet a large room with black velvet. Have many electric lights in the ceiling. Throw down and scatter all over the black floor a bushel of minute diamonds, rubies, pearls, sapphires, opals, amethysts and other gems. Then turn on the light. You would have a faint imitation of the supernal glories of the galactic hosts. For the appalling depths of space look black in our great telescope.

In places the suns look by perspective as though they were arranged in piles, heaps and banks, or built up into colossal windows, or twisted in spirals, or dashed into wisps and cosmic spray.

In some places the concentration is so great and dense that only the most powerful telescopes on earth can magnify enough to bring out details. A few clusters exist that have not, so far, been resolved into these need points. And the height of human happiness is to watch these vast congeries of distant suns in a huge telescope.—National Magazine.

Dear Mr. Editor—

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Hospital

A town below the sea has been discovered by Lieutenant Bakopulos, of Athens, while carrying out observations in connection with his naval duties, to the east of the island of Lemnos.

On reefs marked on the British Admiralty charts under the name of the Pharos Bank he found, at a depth of twenty-five metres, some ancient ruins which were perfectly visible, and proved the existence of a town of about three miles in circumference. Orders have been issued by the Greek Ministry of Marine to carry out scientific researches on the spot.

Old Shipping Company

The Allans have been identified with the Canadian mail, passenger, and emigrant service for over ninety years. The line was originated by Captain Alexander Allan, a ship-owner-mariner of Glasgow, with a brigantine, named the "Hero," of 175 tons, her first duty being to carry stores to Wellington's army in the Peninsula. The service to Quebec was inaugurated by the "Jean" of corresponding size to the "Hero," in 1819.

A press dispatch says all the newspapers in the City of Mexico are supporting Huerta. Of course they are! Their editors don't want to spend the Christmas holidays in jail.

THE PRICE OF EGGS

The Housewives' League of the United States has resumed its efforts to force down the price of eggs. Through its national executive it has declared a boycott on eggs and notified all its branches to that effect. In its address it asserts that "the situation in the egg market is acute and chaotic, and the consumer is being exploited." Hence it calls upon its numerous members and consumers in general to protest against the present manipulations. Let us hope that the movement of the housewives will result in making a dozen of eggs look like thirty cents.

BY ALL MEANS LET US KNOW

By all means let us know the reasons for the high cost of living. One set of men blames real estate speculation. A political leader who never did anything to relieve the situation as it was developing during his regime accuses the tariff of his own making. Trusts and combines, the middle-man and cold storage, all are held accountable by one set of men or another.

The people are growing weary with these theorizings of amateur economists. There is no denying the acuteness of the situation. The cost of living is high. It is too high. Thousands of persons are being forced to live under conditions of great stress. They are feeling very keenly the strain of attempting to keep an expanding expenditure within the bonds of a contracting income.

The condition is not local merely. It is a world-wide condition. That is no reason why we should not, within our own sphere, endeavour to determine the causes of the abnormal rise, and, if possible, discover a source of relief. We do not believe the government is unmindful of its duty. If it should appear that a commission to inquire into the whole business would be helpful, there is no reason to believe the Government will be slow to act.

Headache Over the Eyes? Look for Nasal Catarrh

Catarrh Never Stops in One Place—Often Ruins Health Completely

In this changeable climate it is the little colds that drift into Catarrh. Unless the inflammation is checked it passes rapidly from the throat or nose to the bronchial tubes and then to the lungs. You can't make new lungs any more than you can make new fingers or toes, but you can cure Catarrh.

The surest cure consists of breathing in the healing balsamic essence of CATARRHOZONE, which is simply a medicated vapor, so full of rich curative properties that every trace of Catarrh vanishes before it.

"The soothing piney vapor of Catarrhozone is the most powerful medicine I ever used," writes Mrs. Edmond J. Christine, of Saskatoon. "Every breath drawn through the inhaler sends a grateful feeling through the air passages of the nose and throat. Catarrhozone cured me of frightful headaches over the eyes, relieved me of a stuffy feeling in the nose, and an irritable hacking cough that had been the bane of my life for a year. My general health is greatly improved, my appetite and digestion are considerably better than before. Catarrhozone has been the means of giving me such health as I always desired, but never possessed."

Even though catarrh has a firm hold on you, and affects your throat, nose or ears, you can thoroughly cure it with Catarrhozone. Large size guaranteed, costs $1.00; smaller size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

PUBLIC OPINION

The Times does not hold itself responsible for the opinions of its correspondents.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Now that the annual civic elections are approaching I would like to suggest for one of next year's aldermen, the name of Mr. Peter Leng of the Custom House staff, for the East Ward. Not only does Mr. Leng's official position recommend him but his well known business acumen and integrity would ensure the East Ward having a good councillor.

ICE BOATING

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As Peterborough always takes a great interest in all kinds of out door sport, I would suggest that we might get up a series of ice boat races. In days gone by I have skimmed over the glassy surface of Rice Lake on an ice boat at nearly a mile a minute. An ice boat is cheaply made and gives grand sport.

Sailor.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—The great issue before the Canadian people is the high cost of living says Sir Wilfrid. Seeing that every trust and monopoly in Canada is controlled and guided by Liberal politicians or contributors to Liberal campaign funds, Sir Wilfrid should be able to get some inside information on the cause of the high cost of living. We surmise that any attempt on his part to remove the cause would meet with the whole-hearted opposition of his majorities in the senate, the trust and combine creators and managers. Mr. Borden will give Canada a reduction in the prices of necessities, but we have nothing to hope from Sir Wilfrid, whose party is too deeply entwined about trusts and mergers. Let our people think over these facts.

LEGISLATURE INVESTIGATED DEATH OF PRINCE GEORGE'S VALET

More Than One Royal Prince Deserved to End His Days on the Gallows

The execution at Constantinople of a royal prince—Salih Pasha Daman, a nephew of the Sultan—for his part in the assassination of Shefket Pasha, calls to mind other crimes attributed to royal personages. One of these was the case of Prince George, the eldest son and heir of King Peter of Servia. A few years ago the Servian Legislature investigated the death of Prince George's valet, Kolakovic, who died in circumstances that pointed to his royal master as his murderer. As a result Prince George was forced to resign his commission in the army, and to surrender his claim upon the succession. Had he refused to do this it is likely that, king's son that he is, George would have been obliged to stand trial for murder.

Another royal murderer was King Louis of Bavaria. That he was insane for some years is pretty well understood, and it was, in fact, his fits of homicidal mania that finally led to him being imprisoned in his castle and the regency entrusted to his uncle, the late Prince Luitpold. Before he was thus placed under restraint, Louis had killed two domestics, one with a revolver and the other with a blow of his fist, for he was a man of terrific strength. He added a third victim to his list on the night when he made his attempt to escape by swimming across the Starnberg Lake, for he strangled the physician who endeavored to prevent him. Louis himself was drowned.

Big Brutal Russian

Another assassin of equal if not greater strength and violence, although not of royal rank, was Count Stroganoff, the husband of the Grand Duchess Marie Nicolaievitch of Russia. On one occasion the Count, who was reckoned at once the strongest and the handsomest man in the Russian army, was visiting at Nice with his wife, and a hairdresser was called in to attend the Grand Duchess.

Stroganoff became seized with the notion that the fellow was displaying rather too much familiarity with the distinguished lady whose coiffure he was arranging and without any warning hurled him bodily through the window of the apartment, which was two storeys above the street. The unfortunate hairdresser died next day as a result of his injuries. The Count was at once arrested, charged with manslaughter, and proceedings were not abandoned until his wife had hurried to Paris and had implored the Emperor Napoleon to intervene.

France's Emperor

Napoleon III. is credited with a long list of assassinations, but it is difficult to say with what justice. His cousin, Prince Pierre Bonaparte, was obliged to flee from Italy in his youth in order to avoid the police, who went to arrest him for having murdered a ground-keeper who had caught him poaching. Twenty-five years later he killed another man.

There seems to be no reason to doubt that ex-Sultan Abdul Hamid killed several persons while he occupied the throne of Turkey. The Sultan was always armed, and became expert in the use of a revolver. One day he came upon a man in his gardens who acted in a peculiar manner. The Sultan at once drew his revolver and shot him dead. On another occasion he set upon and beat a little six-year-old girl to death. It appears that the child, the daughter of a slave in the harem, was a favorite with the Sultan, and used to play about in his apartments. One day she noticed his revolver upon the table, and picking it up, ran to the Sultan with the weapon in her hand. The half insane monster, believing that she might shoot him, knocked her down and beat her to death.

STUFFED VEGETABLES

To Make Appetizing Dishes With a Little Meat and Some Vegetables

A very little beef or mutton stuffed into vegetables goes a long way. Squash, cucumbers and tomatoes are all appetizing when stuffed and carefully cooked. Pare large cucumbers or a small crook-necked squash, and scoop out the seeds. Mix half a pint of finely-chopped cooked or uncooked meat with an equal amount of dried breadcrumbs, season with salt and pepper, chopped parsley (if you have it), and onion juice if you like. Stuff the cucumbers, put two halves together, and tie them with twine. If you are using squash put the two halves of the squash together and tie them with twine; put a goodly quantity of dripping in a baking-pan, make it very hot, put in the cucumbers or squash, fry them brown on all sides, then add half a pint of water, a level teaspoonful of salt, and bake slowly for one hour, turning them often. If your oven is too hot [illegible] rather than cover the pan. When done remove the strings, dish carefully, and pour brown gravy or tomato sauce [illegible].

Tomatoes are stuffed [illegible] and baked [illegible] the [illegible].

Human Chess Pawns

A strange game of Japanese chess, played with living men instead of ordinary chess men, drew attention at Osaka. Each man, wearing a white cap and gown, marked with the symbol of a chessman, took his proper place on a huge platform or board, and moved at the command of the two expert players matched against each other. The game was in progress for three days. Moves in chess require deep study and many hours often elapse between, so the strain on the human chessmen while waiting for something to happen may be imagined.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN'S FAVORITE.

"Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortals Be Proud."
(Published by Request.)

Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?
Like a swift fleeting meteor, a fast-flying cloud,
A flash of the lightning, a break of the wave,
He passeth from life to rest in his grave.

The leaves of the oak and the willow shall fade,
Be scattered around and together be laid;
And the young and the old, and the low and the high
Shall moulder to dust, together shall lie.

The infant a mother attended and loved;
The mother that infant's affection who proved;
The husband that mother and infant who blessed,
Each, all, are away to their dwelling of rest.

The maid on whose cheek, on whose brow, in whose eye,
Shone beauty and pleasure—her triumphs are by;
And the memory of those who loved her and praised,
Are alike from the minds of the living erased.

The hand of the king that the sceptre hath borne;
The brow of the priest that the mitre hath worn;
The eye of the sage and the heart of the brave,
Are hidden and lost in the depths of the grave.

The peasant whose lot was to sow and to reap;
The herdsman who climbed with his goats up the steep;
The beggar who wandered in search of his bread,
Have faded away like the grass that we tread.

The saint who enjoyed the communion of heaven,
The sinner who dared to remain unforgiven,
The wise and the foolish, the guilty and just,
Have quietly mingled their bones in the dust.

So the multitude goes, like the flower or the weed
That withers away to let others succeed;
So the multitude comes, even those we behold,
To repeat every tale that has often been told.

For we are the same our fathers have been;
We see the same sights our fathers have seen—
We drink the same stream and view the same sun—
And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thoughts we are thinking our fathers would think;
From the death we are shrinking our fathers would shrink;
To the life we are clinging they also would cling;
But it speeds for us all like a bird on wing.

They loved, but the story we cannot unfold;
They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold;
They grieved, but no wail from their slumber will come;
They loved, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb;

They died, ay! they died, and we things that are now,
Who walk on the turf that lies over their brow,
Who make in their dwelling a transient abode,
Meet the changes they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yea! hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
We mingle together in sunshine and rain;
And the smile and the tear, and the song and the dirge,
Still follow each other like surge upon surge.

'Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath;
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death,
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud—
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

A case that caused much amusement was heard at Cootehall, Ireland, in which Michael Reilly, a carpenter, pleaded guilty to having a quantity of timber illegally in his possession. Finally he imagined he was to be court-martialled and shot as a traitor, and he cut his throat.

STRANGE GRAZE FOR TATTOOING

Religious Subjects Chosen by Many—King George and Greek Prince Sport Dragons

The fashion of decorating the skin with religious subjects seems to be steadily growing. According to a London tattoo artist, he is often called upon to tattoo hymns, texts, and copies of famous religious pictures on the bodies of religious enthusiasts, as well as original symbolical designs.

A well-known bishop has upon his upper arm a representation of the Sun of Righteousness and a cross crushing the head of a hideous dragon, typifying sin, while a young clergyman has a picture of a skull with a serpent thrusting its head through one of the eye-sockets and a radiant butterfly flitting away, symbolical of death and eternity.

The head of Christ crowned with a halo is carried about the wilds of Africa by a stalwart missionary on his chest, and a lady who devotes her time to church work bears an anchor, a cross, and a heart—faith, hope and charity.

One of the most remarkable examples of tattooing of religious subjects is that provided by the case of an engineer storekeeper on one of the White Star liners. He has, perhaps, the most wonderful tattooed body in the world. From his neck to his waist-line he is covered with pictures and inscriptions. Displayed on his body is a wonderful piece of the tattoo artist's work. It is nothing less than a faithful reproduction of Leonardo da Vinci's picture "The Last Supper."

The greater part of his body is taken up with tattooing of a religious nature. On his back are the Lord's Prayer and the hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee."

There is also a lady who has had Leonardo da Vinci's great picture of "The Last Supper" tattooed on her back, the picture being produced with marvelous fidelity; which calls to mind that some time ago a woman entered a London hospital and the nurses discovered that the upper part of the right arm was entirely occupied with a pictorial representation of "The Rock of Ages," while on the lower part of the arm was the scene of the Crucifixion.

Perhaps the most extraordinary tattooing idea ever carried out was that of a coachman, who, at the time of the Dreyfus trial, had his body and legs covered with no fewer than one hundred and twenty illustrations of the case, including portraits of the leading personages. Altogether the work occupied nearly two years, three months being devoted to a picture of the terrible ceremony of degradation when Dreyfus was stripped of his decorations and uniform.

WOMAN OF TH PAST

Lived in the Stone Age; Bones Found in Peterborough Clay Pit

Workmen excavating for clay in the yards of a brick company at Peterborough found the skull and other remains of a woman which paleontologists believe may equal in age the skull of the primitive woman which was discovered in a pit at Piltdown Common, Sussex, and which evoked so much interest in the scientific world.

The skull is small, the occipital angle (back part of head) is acute, and the thigh bones are large. The top of the skull is fractured. The bones were found in the superficial gravel, and are in a good state of preservation. They were huddled together in the posture peculiar to burials of the Stone Age.

Near the place of the discovery is the site of the prehistoric river which once flowed over England from the Greenland glaciers, and the remains may have been brought down by the ice. There is no trace of the smaller bones, though most of the teeth are still in the skull.

HELPING THE GIRLS

Italian Society Brings Cheer to Those Who Toil

It is not often that charitable institutions are able to pay their own way and have profits to expend upon the beneficiaries. There is such an institution in Italy called the Laboratorio della Consolata. This was started by some charitable ladies to rescue working girls from the temptations of factory life and to save them from being sweated. Apprentices are paid enough to live on, and women workers make as much money as, if not more than, if they were employed by ordinary dressmaking establishments, says the "World's Work."

During the dead seasons when girls employed in other dressmaking places are discharged, the Consolata girls are still employed. Work is done at lower prices, ladies bring odd pieces of material to be made up, and everything is done to "keep things going." Thus, while every other dressmaker is out of work in February and August, the Consolata girls are provided for. Also, the working day is one hour shorter than that of other workrooms, and each girl goes for a fortnight in the summer either to the country or to the sea, in each case free of expense.

LEPROSY AND FISH

Noted Surgeon's Death Recalls His Theories of Disease

Sir Jonathan Hutchinson, the famous surgeon, who died at Haslemere, England, at the age of eighty-five, devoted much time to the study of the origin of leprosy. He formed the theory that the disease was due to the eating of diseased or imperfectly cured fish, and to confirm his view he set out at the age of seventy for a long tour in India and Robben Island, Cape Colony. His writings did much to procure better conditions for leprosy sufferers.

In bygone times, he once wrote, I used to call leprosy "fish-eaters' gout"; but he latterly preferred the description, "fish-eaters' tuberculosis."

Leprosy, he said again, advanced in inland districts of Europe with the advent of Christianity, and the observance of fish fasts, and it disappeared when Protestantism threw these fasts into disuse. This contention brought him into conflict with the heads of the Roman Catholic Church.

Sir Jonathan, who lived in Haslemere for fifty years, was the founder of the educational museum there, the superintendence of which he counted as one of his recreations.

No Decrees for Drink

Judge Wakely, at Athlone Quarter Sessions, said he never gave decrees for drink supplied over the counter. There was a man in Sligo who, on finding this out, entered such transactions in his books as "nails." This recollection of his honor evoked laughter, which was renewed when Mr. Kelly observed that there was a case on record of people being supplied with "bacon" in a bottle.

Plucky Invalid

A plucky rescue was witnessed on the Tay at Perth, when the five-year-old daughter of John [illegible] was saved from death by an invalid. While playing the little girl fell into the river. Alexander Gallacher, a gardener, who was just recovering from a serious operation, had his attention drawn to the drowning child, and, weak as he was, he threw off his jacket and plunged into the flooded river. After a severe struggle Gallacher managed to bring the girl to the bank, both being in an exhausted condition.

MRS. HELEN HATHAWAY BRITTON Owner of the St. Louis Cardinals.

This society woman probably knows more about baseball than any other female in the world. Her uncle, Stanley Robison, former traction magnate of Cleveland and baseball capitalist, owned the team for years and when he died left the property to her.

Just how much she loves the game is told in this remark she made: "I'd rather own a winning team than be a princess of an empire!"

She is ambitious to make baseball more popular with women, to force recognition of her ability as a business woman, and to bring society leaders to the games.

Mrs. Britton goes to every game. She's always there at the start, sitting in the front row of the grandstand, right behind the catcher.

With her splendid gowns and animation, she is a striking figure and she "roots" with enthusiasm.

SALT HAS ITS USE IN EVERY ROOM

In a Hundred Ways It is Valuable Other Than For Culinary Purposes

Salt is a universal household remedy. For instance, you may economize and use salt instead of tooth powder and have whiter and better preserved teeth than if you used the "very best" dentifrice. Try it and see what a nice, clean taste it leaves in the mouth.

Salt baths are most invigorating. Delicate women often suffer from colds, sometimes with serious results. These may be avoided if the throat, chest and arms are vigorously rubbed with a coarse towel wrung out of strong brine. The rubbing must be so vigorous that the skin is in a perfect glow.

Some women prefer the dry salt towels; these are prepared by letting towels lie in a strong salt solution until thoroughly saturated and then drying them. Several of these may be prepared at a time, which will greatly add to one's convenience if boarding or traveling. Sea-salt is better for these, but, if not easily procured, use rock salt—or, none other being at hand, common coarse salt will answer admirably.

A lotion that should find a place on every toilet table is a bottle of salt and water, a tablespoonful of salt to a quart of boiled water. This is most useful for bathing weak and inflamed eyes, for gargling the throat night and morning and for cleansing the mouth after being out in the dust and dirt. If used faithfully, at the first sign of an approaching cold, it will nearly always break it up. Many doctors advise the use of the nasal douch with this solution warmed.

The housewife, more than any other, should never "forget to remember" the use of salt. All green vegetables are the better for being cleansed in salted water; cereals should be boiled with a pinch of salt; roast meats are basted with salted water.

If a spoonful of salt is spread upon freshly spilled wine, the linen will show no stain when laundered.

Salt will set all light-colored, delicate fabrics if they are dipped into brine; it will also set the color of black stockings.

Salt, moistened with lemon juice, will remove iron rust, if laid in the sun or held over the steam of a boiling kettle. If one application does not suffice keep on until the stain disappears.

Tired, aching feet are refreshed and made to feel like new if a handful of salt is thrown into the hot foot-bath and the feet are kept in it from ten to fifteen minutes.

Many new cottons, particularly curtains, are full of lime. If they are soaked over night in salt and water, the lime will dissolve and be quite easily washed out.

Cement Mushrooms

Among the most uncommon uses to which concrete has been put in Belgium is the making of mushrooms for decorating gardens, and [illegible] figures of gnomes for supporting the garden seats. BUSINESS-LIKE QUEEN

Her Majesty Superintends Expenditures of Royal Household

Queen Mary believes in prompt payment. She never lets her housekeeping bills run on, and she is very particular as to details. Each tradesman must send in a bill with the goods on delivery, even if it is only soap and candles. All bills are filed by the Clerk of the Kitchens, who enters up the amount to the account of the various tradesmen. All accounts made out in detail are submitted by the Master of the Household to the King and Queen at the end of each month. Her Majesty is the chief scrutineer, and never fails to draw attention to any increased item of expenditure. The Queen abhors the idea that carelessness, waste and extravagance should be considered Royal prerogatives, and sets an admirable example of good management. After the accounts have been passed they are promptly paid by cheque, through the Treasurer of the Household.

Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my knees and elbows swollen, drawn and stiff; could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the [illegible] twice to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908 done me no good. I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,
Yours truly,

SIMPLE REMEDIES FOR SLEEPLESSNESS

Sometimes a Change of Food Is Necessary, at Others a Stimulant or Warm Bath

Sleeplessness arises from a great variety of causes, and one has to choose his remedy according to the nature of his own particular malady. There is the primary form of insomnia, in which the brain remains active and supplied with too much blood because the vessels have lost tone. Anaemia may be the cause, or excessive tobacco smoking. The proper remedy is removal of the cause, but anything that will draw the blood down into the body helps to bring about sleep.

A glass of hot milk or a cup of beef tea will often do this and when the feet are cold these remedies are assisted by a hot-water bottle. Then there is the secondary insomnia, due to some cause outside the brain, such as dyspepsia, mental worry, cough, physical pain, etc. Except in the case of dyspepsia, attention to food is of no great value in these forms.

Overwork is another potent cause. In this case a warm bath, followed by some stimulant, generally proves quite effective. But the appropriate stimulant has to be discovered by experiment. When the brain is tired out a large cup of hot weak tea will often send one to sleep if it is taken after getting into bed. Beef tea is even a better remedy in this case.

Then there is elderberry wine of very good repute. Milk punch with hot milk, whisky, and nutmeg is a remedy both in mental and physical exhaustion, and better, in some cases is "Bristol milk," made with hot milk and sherry.

These are most effective when the sleepless person is unaccustomed to the use of stimulants. But they have their dangers. Mark Twain tells how, when he suffered much from insomnia, he began the search for relief by drinking a glass of beer before going to bed.

"This gave a little relief for a short time. Then I exchanged my beer for a small prescription of whisky. This worked the desired cure"—for a time. But then he found he needed a larger dose, and so "sought another remedy and found it. Yes, sir, an infallible remedy." This was a child's German grammar, and he never got through a single page before sleep came along.

As to late meals, most people have their sleep disturbed unless a couple of hours elapse between a substantial meal and bed time. But an empty stomach is worse than a full one. When the last meal is taken two and a half or three hours before going to bed, something—a few biscuits or a sandwich, etc.—should be eaten in case of sleeplessness.

Coax Your New Gloves

Before wearing new kid gloves, if they are laid between the folds of a damp cloth for an hour, they will be found much easier to put on. The damp causes the kid to become more pliable and to stretch to the shape of the hand without splitting or cracking. If rubbed with a piece of stale bread every time they are taken off, it will be necessary to send them to a cleaner's much fewer times.

Seven Smokers' Teeth

A new cigar cutter consists of two disks of metal about the size of a dime, a sharp edge on one clipping the end from a cigar as it is thrust through a hole in the other.

BOYS AND BALL

"The first thing a boy needs to become a good batter, is good eyes.

"He must have nerve, too. Strength is necessary, but almost every ball player is strong. The exercise he gets, playing, is bound to strengthen him. The big thing is nerve, though. Unless a boy has plenty of nerve he cannot hope to succeed. It requires nerve to stand up to the plate and let the pitcher throw at your head. The good hitter will duck out of harm's way and return to his position and dare him to do it again. If a batter backs away because he is afraid of the ball, he is gone.

"There are any number of pitchers whose stock in trade consists of a 'bean ball' and a prayer. They throw the ball at the batter's head until they drive him from the plate and then sneak a couple of fast ones over the middle.

"A batter needs just as much nerve in a minor league as he does in the majors. In fact he needs more, for many minor league pitchers are 'bean ballers.' I mean that many are shy of control, not that they throw at your head more frequently than the big fellows.

"My receipt for batting is to look upon the star pitchers as if they were alien conquerors. If a recruit gets the idea that the great pitchers are going to beat him, he never will get anywhere. No player can afford to be afraid of a pitcher. I think this feeling helps me when I face such men as Mathewson. I know such men have such good control that they will not hit me and I simply wait until I get a good one."

Mrs. R. N. Bridges, widow of Colonel Bridges, has been appointed for the second year churchwarden at Kilmington, Devon, where her husband also was churchwarden.

A Blind Bowler

August Stenack, a blind youth, made a score of 174 in a bowling tournament at New York. Stenack and eight other sightless persons played 168 games in the tournament scoring an average of above 100 each. Rarely did the ball go down the gutter. When pins were left standing after the first ball was sent down the alleys, the bowlers were aided by shouted directions as to the location of the remaining pins.

Are You Sleepy, Tired, Worn Out?

Here is Good Advice to All Who Feel as if Their Vigor and Life Has all Oozed Away.

This Condition Can be Quickly Cured by a Good Cleansing Medicine.

Your experience is probably somewhat similar to that described by Mr. J. T. Fleming in the following letter from his home in Lebanon: "I think I must have the most sluggish sort of a liver. In the morning my mouth was bitter, and that foul, sick feeling that tells you, 'No breakfast needed here this morning.' A cup of coffee would sort of brace me up, but in two hours I was disposed to quit work, all energy having oozed out of me. Supper was my only good meal, but I guess I didn't digest very well, for I dreamt to beat the band. A friend of mine put me wise to Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I think they must have taken hold of my liver, perhaps my stomach, too, because at the very start they made things go right. Look at me now—not sleepy in the daytime, but hustling for the mighty dollar and getting fun out of life every minute. That's what Dr. Hamilton's Pills have done for me—they have rebuilt and rejuvenated my entire system."

To keep free from headaches, to feel young and bright, to enjoy your meals, to sleep sound and look your best, nothing can help like Dr. Hamilton's Pills. 25c. per box, five for $1.00 at all druggists and storekeepers or postpaid from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Local Barber is Ambitious.

One of Peterborough's leading barbers whose shop is located not a thousand miles from the Oriental Hotel, has decided that he has a remedy for the present high cost of living. Jimmy objects to paying 40 cents a dozen for cold storage eggs. Yesterday he purchased four hens and is now going to raise his own chickens and eggs. If the hens purchased do not die before spring, of old age. Mr. T. McDonough, manager of the Oriental, has contracted for the excess product of these hens.

A Drop in Candy.

Yesterday morning as a commercial traveller, living near the corner of Weller and Park streets, was starting for town in his auto, he let a big box full of candies fall into the road by accident. Like crows scenting a dead horse, small boys gathered from seemingly nowhere and collected the sweets. Mr. Major, the local painter, secured the dropped cardboard box and gathered in as many of the candies as he could. He then gave the half filled box to school children near the convent.

When Freights Were High.

Yesterday a Times representative in conversation with Mr. John Bell, the local poet, happened to bring up the subject of the Trent Canal. Mr. Bell said he would like to see the waterway completed. "Why," he remarked, "in 1876 when I quit business in Montreal and moved here, I brought several thousand dollars' worth of mirrors and pictures. I shipped them by boat to Port Hope. From Port Hope to Peterborough over the old Midland Railway, the freight for the 30 miles was more than double the boat carriage from Montreal to Port Hope.

"SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR CONSTIPATED CHILD

Delicious "Fruit Laxative" can't harm tender little stomach, liver and bowels.

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. CARSON DENIES TAMPERING WITH THE BRITISH ARMY

Foul Lie for Anyone to Say Ulstermen Were Playing That Game---Orders Must be Obeyed

London, Dec. 4.—During Sir Edward Carson's huge meeting at Manchester last night a black cat strolled leisurely across the platform. It sidled up to Sir Edward, who, amid much amusement, gently stroked it. Lord Derby, chairman, amid loud cheers, exclaimed: "That is a good omen."

Despite the continuance of heated rhetoric on both sides, some progress towards peace is observable. It is felt Sir Edward Carson made an appreciable contribution last night when carefully refrained from echoing the declaration of the Unionist extremists that no settlement is possible unless Ulster is excluded from Home Rule. He was satisfied to stipulate that Ulster would not be humiliated or degraded. Further that Ulster must get no treatment different to that of other parts of the United Kingdom.

Carson Relieves Tension.

This opens the way for a discussion of the schemes of broad devolution, securing all Ulster really desires, without imperiling Home Rulers' conception of Ireland as a national unit. The Manchester Guardian tells its friends of the Ministry that Sir Edward's present attitude places the Government under a moral obligation to meet him half way. He also helped relieve the tension of the situation by declaring: "Of course the army must obey orders, even if the orders are to shoot down loyal Ulstermen." He asserted it a foul lie to say Ulster Unionists were trying to tamper with the British army, but the first time the Government by means of the army tried to enforce Home Rule, the manhood of England would rise to declare: "You shall not do this terrible thing."

Comes to Because of Orange Sentinel

Berlin, Dec. 4.—A despatch to the Mail and Empire says: The action of the Berlin Library Board in banning the Orange Sentinel from the Library has called forth condemnation from the Protestant Benevolent Federation of Peterborough. This association expressing the opinion of 1,200 citizens, has forwarded a resolution to the City Council asking that all newspapers, including those of a controversial and religious nature, be admitted to the library. The Berlin board action, the communication said, has placed Berlin in an unenviable light. It was referred to a committee.

BRITISH FIRM TO MAKE BIG GUNS FOR RUSSIA

Vickers Firm Will Establish Extensive Gun Works in the Czar's Country.

New York, Dec. 4.—A cable from London to the Tribune, says:

The big British armament firm of Vickers, in conjunction with a leading bank in St. Petersburg, has obtained from the Russian Government a concession for the establishment of extensive gun works in Russia and a company has been formed with a capital of $7,500,000 to carry out that project.

The enterprise is regarded as one of great importance to Anglo-Russian commercial relations. The concession is granted by the Russian Government for fifteen years, during which period the Vickers firm will be the technical advisers of the Russian artillery works.

As consideration for their services Messrs. Vickers will receive a substantial remuneration in cash and an interest in the profits of the new gun works.

THE MUNICIPAL POT IS NOW ON THE BOIL

The sharp contest for the mayor's chair, now assured by the entrance of Aldermen Gillespie and Buller, as candidates, has already put ginger in the campaign. Several new names have been mentioned as likely to enter the race for the coveted position of chief magistrate, which makes the situation interesting. These are:

Ald. George Duncan, who is one of the retiring members of this year's council, and who has made a capable chairman of the Board of Works.

Ex-Ald. Robt. Hicks, who has had considerable municipal experience, and who has also been chairman of several important committees, is being urged to stand by many ratepayers. Mr. Hicks will announce his decision in a day or two.

Ex-Ald. J. J. Hartley is also being asked to enter the mayoralty contest, and may do so, as he has many supporters.

The Times was given to understand last night, that Mr. W. M. Lang, of East City, has signified his intention of being a candidate for Aldermanic honors in the East Ward.

Mr. Hall presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of a number of accounts. The report was adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

Last evening a meeting was held in the Boston Cafe with a view to promote the formation of a Junior Hockey League. The president of the O.H.A., Mr. Picard, was present, together with two representatives from each of the following Clubs:—Arrows, Collegiate, Alerts, Boston Exploits, City Reserve, Y.M.C.A., and Wanderers. Mr. J. Craig was chosen to preside. The Collegiate representatives decided to retire, to make the number even. A committee of six was appointed to interview Mr. J. Meharry and ascertain at what cost the Brock street rink could be secured for one or two nights a week. If practicable terms are secured, another meeting will be called. After the meeting had formally broken up the bright suggestion was made that the City Fathers should be approached and asked to flood a portion of one of the parks, so as to provide an outdoor rink for hockey.

SIR GEORGE PAISH SAYS HE HAS NO FEARS FOR CANADA

Dominion is Well Able to Carry Burden of Debt Incurred --Borrowing Will Diminish Soon

Toronto, Dec. 4.—"I have no anxiety about the ability of the Canadian people to meet the interest upon the great sum of capital they have borrowed," said Sir George Paish in the course of an address to the Canadian Club this afternoon, "and I am hopeful that in a few years the growth of their productive power will be so great that they will again think it desirable to make further extensions of their railway system, and will give the British investor the opportunity of supplying the necessary capital."

In opening, he said, "I think you will agree with me that the subject selected for my address to you to-day is not without a certain amount of importance at the present time. The subject is, indeed, of interest not merely to you, the business men of Toronto and not merely to every citizen of Canada, but is one that is in the minds of business men, and especially upon the minds of bankers, throughout the world. Indeed people everywhere are asking, what is the financial outlook of Canada?

Rests Needed.

"Of course, no one acquainted with the natural and potential wealth of Canada doubts that the country is making and will continue to make enormous progress. Indeed, most persons who have given thought to the matter expect that the course of affairs here will resemble more or less closely the course of events in the United States during the past century. The country, as you are aware, from decade to decade made great progress, but after about ten years of activity came two or three years of rest."

Re-Forest Trent Canal Land

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—That either the Dominion Government or the Ontario authorities purchase forest reserves in the Trent Valley district, is the recommendation which the Conservative Committee will make in a report which it is preparing. So general has been the forest depletion in the Trent watershed that it is feared the flow of water may be affected so as to make the Trent Valley Canal useless.

The project of reforestration is one that Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., is actively promoting and to him, probably more than any other man, is due the work now being done by the Commission.

HINDUS ARE WARNED BY THE PRESS NOT TO TRAVEL

Responsible Journals Satify London by Sane View of the Affair--Caste Bar Worse Than Racial Laws

London, Dec. 4.—Much satisfaction is expressed to-day over the action of the Punjab Government in issuing a communique warning intending Hindu emigrants to British Columbia that they run considerable risk of failing to secure admission owing to the anticipated congestion of the labor market.

The responsible Indian press realize it is impossible for British Ministers to dictate to Ministers responsible to the Dominions.

Racial Bar to Stand.

A leading Calcutta journal, The Englishman, says Lord Crewe would be simply courting a rebuff if he attempted to do what a recent Indian deputation requested. "To expect Afrikanders to consent to the abolition of the racial bar is as futile as expecting that caste divisions in India will disappear. The racial bar is not such an evil as the caste bar."

The Times of India, of Bombay, The Bombay Chronicle, The Bombay Gazette, also recognize Lord Crewe can only seek to persuade General Botha; he cannot drive him.

WHO WILL IT BE

Local Liberals Will be Obliged to Select a Leader

The political situation in West Peterborough, at present is somewhat clouded so far as the Liberal party is concerned. The retirement of Hon. J. R. Stratton, on account of ill health, makes it necessary to choose a new leader, who will in all probability be the candidate for the Federal Parliament when the next election takes place. The choice will likely be from among the following gentlemen: R. R. Hall, ex-M.P., A. G. Gordon, D. O'Connell, and Warden J. H. Garbutt, Smith.

THE LEGISLATURE.

Candidates for the Ontario Legislature will also have to be chosen by our Liberal friends. It is not unlikely that one of the above named gentlemen may be chosen. Mr. R. R. Hall took a fling at it on the last occasion and may be inclined to make another try, although Mr. Garbutt, of Smith, has many friends who would like to see him brought forward, and he may get the nomination when the time comes.

LADIES MUSICALE WAS WELL ATTENDED

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Ladies' Morning Musicale was held yesterday morning at the residence of Mrs. (Rev.) Rollins, St. Andrew's Manse, when a most attractive musical program was presented as follows:

Program.

The following interesting program of events was run off:

Mrs. Rollins—Paper.
Mrs. Ferguson—Solo.
Mrs. Boyd—Violin Solo.
Mrs. Porter—Solos.
Miss Richardson—Song.
Mrs. Wood and Mrs. Buchanan—Duet.

The next meeting will be held at Mrs. Wood's, 366 Simcoe street on Thursday, January 8th, at 10.30.

HAD MET AFFINITY, WROTE MRS. WHITE

Newark, Dec. 5.—Mrs. Anna G. White, defendant in a divorce suit brought by Dr. J. Louis White, of East Orange, acknowledged at a further hearing of the case before Vice-Chancellor Stevens to-day, having written to her husband, April 19th last:

"I have met my affinity; he's a dandy chap."

The letter was shown to Mrs. White by Henry C. Hunt, counsel for Dr. White, after a series of questions about her relations with Robert I. Cunningham, one of the two corespondents named by Dr. White, and whom she admitted having met at the Hotel Iroquois, Atlantic City, the day before writing the letter.

Asked by Mr. Hunt whether Cunningham was the "affinity" mentioned in the letter, Mrs. White replied, "Positively not."

Further queries by Mr. Hunt elicited the explanation that the "affinity" reference was merely a figment of imagination.

Mrs. White acknowledged having received letters from Robert G. Burek, of Philadelphia, the other correspondent named by her husband, under the respective names of "Charlotte Dean" and "Edna Van Buskirk." The "Charlotte Dean" letters, she explained, were received by her from Burek several years ago, while she used the "Edna Van Buskirk" pseudonym more recently.

SIR WILFRID TO PUT SOME SEASONING IN FOOD POLICY

His Hamilton Free Food Does Not Meet With Liberal Accord---Mr. Rowell in Ottawa to See Him

Ottawa, Dec. 4.—N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the Liberal Opposition in Ontario, in Ottawa to-day had a long conference with Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Liberal leaders.

It is said that he discussed with them the new Liberal policy of free food. The new policy has not been received with enthusiasm by the party and it is said now that it is being revised and that at the Fielding banquet in Montreal on Dec. 16, there will be added some brand new [illegible].

The Western Liberals are protesting at the pronouncement of Sir Wilfrid in regard to reciprocity, "Let the dead past bury the dead." They want reciprocity continued as a part of the platform.

Representatives of rural ridings in the east are also vigorously objecting to the free food policy. They claim that Sir Wilfrid is sacrificing the farmers for the sake of city consumers, and if the present policy is continued it will mean overwhelming defeat in districts which have hitherto been Liberal strongholds.

It is now said that the next Liberal announcement will include some concessions to the farmers.

NEW PRIVATE HOSPITAL FOR PETERBORO' SOLD

The handsome residence on Hunter Street, belonging to Mr. John Crane, Manager of the Dominion Bank here, has been purchased by Mrs. Harvey Thompson, formerly of Bobcaygeon. The deal was put through by Messrs. C. J. Carroll & Co. The price paid was $9000. The purchaser will convert the house into a private hospital. Miss Thompson, who will be in charge, is a graduate of St. Luke's Hospital, New York, and has had many years' experience.

Willie's Prayer.

Willie, aged five, was taken by his father to his first football game. The extent to which he was impressed did not become evident till he said his prayers that night. Then, to the horror of his parents, Willie prayed:

"God bless papa,
God bless mamma,
God bless Willie;
Boom! Rah! Rah!"

GUILTY OF PETTY GRAFT

Toronto, Dec. 4.—Joseph Goodman former inspector for the Medical Health Department, who was charged by two restaurant keepers with having accepted bribes from them for "passing" their premises as clean, was found guilty before Judge Morgan in the Sessions to-day and fined $50.

Jim Forst one of the complainants swore that Goodman had told him his place was "dirty," but that he could keep him out of court for $2. The money was paid, but Goodman returned next day and got $3.75 more.

Tea and Coffee Drinking

Tea and coffee are not foods. Anything not a food which is taken into the system makes the eliminative processes work overtime to throw it off. Often the unprofitable thing, when taken regularly, accumulates faster than it can be eliminated, and becomes a destroyer.

Besides tea and coffee contain caffeine, a subtle, poisonous drug—from 1½ to 3 grains to the cup. It is well known that caffeine frequently causes heart trouble, nervousness, sleeplessness and biliousness — serious handicaps to progress and comfort.

If something is hindering your efforts, try the simple test of leaving off tea and coffee ten days and using POSTUM.

If after a few days you begin to feel better — sleep well, nerves steady up and brain gets clear, you will know how to avoid that kind of trouble.

Postum, made only of prime wheat and a small percent of New Orleans molasses, is a pure food-drink—wholesome, nourishing and delicious. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

Postum now comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled to bring out its delightful flavour and food value.

Instant Postum—(the new form) is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful stirred in a cup of hot water makes a delicious beverage instantly. Add sugar and cream to taste.

BEAUTIES OF INDIA

A Missionary Writes of His Observations in the East

"The first marvel and interest," which the stranger to India experiences on arrival in that country, is the beauty of the people who move about in the open air, according to the Rev. Robert F. Horton, a missionary who has written letters about his travels in the East to the London Daily Chronicle. "Custom gradually stales the marvel," he says, "and the residents are quickly unconscious of the charm. But there it is, confronting you at once. Men and women and children are moving everywhere with garments so scanty that the beauty of the human form is not hidden; and such garments as are used only add to, and rarely detract from, that beauty. A white cloth wound gracefully round the head, a slight loincloth, a clinging fold of drapery, white, or brilliant red or blue, or yellow, or green, does not conceal that color and shape of man or woman or child which surely was meant to be the fairest sight of the world. They say that the dark color is itself a kind of garment, and that white men and women would never seem decent or comely in this scant attire. And, indeed, the color, or rather the colors, are a small part of the beauty. Some of the skins are almost black, some brown, some tawny, but all are rich, glossy as silk, smooth and shapely. The shoulders and the bare arms of men and women, and the comely, chocolate-colored children, possess the eye with a sense of satisfied loveliness. The gay plumage of birds and the spots and stripes of the jungle beasts are not really more beautiful than the bodies of human beings in this land of wonders. For it is not the colors alone; it is the shape of the bodies that move on bare feet, and are exercised by carrying burdens on the head. The boatman, putting his vallam along the backwater, or the woman with the bundle poised on the head, is a figure for a sculptor to marvel at rather than to imitate. It is a scene of living sculpture, a colored cinematograph everywhere in progress."

CHARLES RICHARD SHANE of Waterloo, Iowa, a "91 per cent pure" baby. He was weighed, measured and examined, and his ancestry delved into before a number of learned scientists gave it as their opinion that he lacked only nine points of perfection. The average baby grades much lower than this—in theory.

Recalls Long Past Events of Big City's History

Mr. Charles A. Gregory of Montreal, although nearing ninety years of age, has the reputation of being the best [illegible] player in Canada. Incidentally he has a fund of reminiscences of what is now the biggest city in the Dominion.

Mr. Gregory faintly recalls the burning of the Parliament buildings, and the rotten egging of Lord Elgin through the streets of the city. He first journeyed to Montreal on a train from St. John to Laprairie, which was pulled by horses—a wooden railway, in fact—the only one in the world, it was understood at the time.

Almost his first experience in Montreal was the execution of twelve [illegible] on Fletcher's Field, at the time of the rebellion—a fact which is stamped on his memory, but the details of which he was so young he does not remember. He recalls, however, that his father told him all about the circumstances involved in the case.

Influence of Missions

When Bishop Stringer in 1909 went to the Village of Kittigagyuit, where his earliest labors had been, the change that had come over the natives was astounding. He found them no longer careless but anxious not only to learn but to practice what was taught them. The first baptism among these people took place on this visit and was followed by several others, and in the year 1910 one hundred and thirteen became Christians.

An idea of the marvelous change which had taken place will be gained when it is stated that no case of theft had been heard of for years. Besides this the last murder was committed nine years ago and that murderer lives now without fear of vengeance. Infanticide ceased; polygamy is abandoned, and lying extremely rare. The weekly bath has become an institution, besides daily washing, and in place of their foul igloos, they have well ventilated huts, with three to eight times the air space afforded by the old dwellings, while the doors no longer open into a passage filled with dogs, but give access to the free air. It is interesting to note that Dr. Wilson, assistant surgeon to the R.N.W.M.P., says that he does not consider more than 2 per cent. of the Eskimos are tubercular, an extraordinarily small number considering the weakened condition of the race, owing to their contact with the whalers, and the diseases introduced by the latter.

Free Mutton For Poor

As one result of Sir John Kirk's visit to Australia, Mr. W. J. Tunley, president of the Queensland Immigration Society sent over 150 carcases of sheep, which were cut up and given to the poor of London.

Feminine Colonels

A picturesque custom prevalent in continental Europe is the investing of the feminine members of Royal families with the title of Honorary Colonel. There are numbers of grandes dames who are proud to ride at the head of their troops before the commanders-in-chief.

One of the most enthusiastic of these soldier-women is the Empress of Germany. Whenever there is to be a grand review she is to be found leading her men, while the Emperor, as her Commander-in-Chief, reviews his gallant army. The Czarina of Russia shares with the beautiful Crown Princess of Roumania, Commander of the 4th Regiment of Hussars, the reputation of being the best-looking soldier in Europe. Both the Czarina and the Crown Princess Marie are very fair, and present a striking appearance in their brilliant uniforms.

You cannot tell a good husband that his wife has a defect.

Ugly and beautiful daughters all have one face to a true mother.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Now it is a Boston doctor who says that colds are often caused by kissing. That may be true, but most pretty girls do not mind a little thing like a cold.

Once more the world lays its laurel wreath on the brow of Guglielmo Marconi. Ten years ago every man, woman and child on the ill-fated Volturno would have perished.—Boston Herald.

It is only a question of time when we will have to stop telling the little people that Santa Claus comes down the chimney and places his gifts on the mantelpiece, for in most modern houses the only way that he can reach the hearthstone is to crawl through the steam radiator.

Nearly a million less hours have been lost by the workmen of Canada through trade disputes during 1913 than in 1912. This is a somewhat effective answer to the politicians who belittle Mr. Crothers' administration of the department of labor.

PROSPERITY REIGNS.

Postal revenue figures for the first seven months of the fiscal year show that the country is as prosperous as ever and indicate an ever-expanding development. They are about the best possible answer to the croakings of the h,nairain Liberal press. The figures for the seven months show an increase in 1912 of half a million dollars. Compared with the postal revenue for the same period a decade ago, the figures for this year show an increase of five millions, the total to October being $8,097,400. The revenue for the month amounted to $1,347,700, as compared with $1,318,456 for October.

PRAISE FOR GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

A correspondent writes The Times as follows: "I have just returned from a business trip to the West including Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon and Edmonton, and at the latter point, having a day or two at the week end to spare, took the opportunity of running down over the Grand Trunk Pacific line to Tete Jaune, B.C. The sight of Mount Robson alone repaid me for the trip, but the scenery generally was magnificent. The track was as smooth as some much older roads in other parts of the Continent, and it is marvellous how the Grand Trunk Pacific route was discovered, which gave almost a level grade for the entire distance through the mountains, thereby avoiding the steep grades, long tunnels, and snow sheds which are necessary owing to routes of some of the other railroads crossing the Rockies. The service the Grand Trunk is offering to the travelling public between Winnipeg, Saskatoon and Edmonton far exceeded my expectations. The standard sleeping cars and also tourist cars are the most modern type and the service of the dining card is beyond criticism. The courtesy and attention shown to passengers by all their employees on the train is of a nature that commended itself very highly to me. The time on the Grand Trunk Pacific trains between Winnipeg and Edmonton is several hours shorter than by other routes, but although I travelled on two or three different trains, found them always on time, and in view of the excellent tract could not but be impressed by the fact that running time between Winnipeg and Edmonton could be reduced very much if necessary and the shorter time schedule maintained. "The McDonald," the new Grand Trunk Pacific Hotel at Edmonton is beautifully located on the heights overlooking the Saskatchewan River and its opening next year is being looked forward to by many."

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through [illegible] the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary but will always cure permanently.

Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure, use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

AGED BRIDE OF YALE YOUTH DIES

Hartford, Ct., Dec. 5.—Mrs. Lucinda M. C. Trust Goddard, aged 78 whose marriage to Charles A. Goddard, a 21-year-old Yale law school student in 1900 brought her to public notice at the time, is dead at her home here.

Death was due to an apoplectic shock and although it occurred yesterday, did not become generally known until to-day. At the time of her marriage to Goddard she was said to have considerable property, and her son, A. A. APPLYING THIS PASTE MAKES HAIRS VANISH

(Toilet Tips)

The popularity of the delatone treatment for removing hairy growths is due largely to the fact that it is quick in action and does not mar the skin, and since its introduction many beauty experts use it in preference to the electric needle. To remove the hair or fuzz, you mix some powdered delatone with a little water and apply to the objectionable hairs, then in 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs have entirely vanished. Excepting in rare instances, one treatment is sufficient.

Bright, Ruddy Cheeks For Pale Girls

NO LONGER ANY NEED TO BE PALE, WEAK AND ANAEMIC.

By Following the Advice of Miss McEwen You Can Quickly Become Strong Again.

The pallid girl always lacks appetite. What little she eats is badly digested.

At night she is restless, she dozes, but doesn't sleep soundly.

Vital force must be increased, new blood must be supplied and a general rebuilding take place before she will feel like she ought.

Dr. Hamilton has invaluable experience in these cases and found nothing so prompt in building up young women as his vegetable pills of Mandrake and Butternut.

Dr. Hamilton's Pills "bright" by cleansing the system and purifying the blood; they also improve digestion and make food ready for absorption. Additional nourishment is quickly supplied and the patient is [illegible] strengthened and invigorated.

Full of spirit, ruddy and strong is the girl that assists her system by the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

The following recent letter from Miss Rita McEwen, of Haliburton, speaks for itself:

"In using Dr. Hamilton's Pills I find my system is wonderfully built up. It is certainly the most effective remedy I ever used. I have now a good appetite, sleep more soundly, and awaken in the morning feeling quite refreshed.

"Formerly I felt tired and depressed. I looked as if a severe illness were hovering over my head.

"Nothing could give quicker results than Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I strongly advise every young woman to use them."

All dealers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00, by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN :—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my success in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

November 29th, 1913.

PETERBOROUGH TAX RATE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Some few months ago you set an agitation on foot for re-adjustment of assessment values, promising that you would investigate conditions in other cities similarly situated to Peterborough, with the object of showing that our General Tax Rate is too high. With the approach of an interesting civic election would it not be advantageous to the ratepayers to have the results of your investigations given publicity, or if your report is not ready may we not hope to have an expression from you relative thereto.

CENTRE WARD.

Peterborough, Ont., 3rd Dec., 1913.

Reply.—In our issue of July 9th, The Times published statistics, taken from official sources, showing the tax per head for Peterborough is $7.12, which is the fourth lowest among the cities of Ontario. The only places being lower are Kingston, Guelph and Woodstock.—Ed. Times.

THE BELLS OF SHANDON.

(Published by Request.)

With deep affection
And recollection
I often think of
Those Shandon bells,
Whose sounds so wild would
In the days of childhood,
Fling around my cradle
Their magic spells.

On this I ponder
Where'er I wander
And thus grow fonder,
Sweet Cork, of thee—
With thy bells of Shandon
That sound so grand on
The pleasant waters
Of the river Lee.

I've heard bells chiming
Full many a clime in,
Telling sublime in Cathedral shrine,
While at the glib rate
Brazil tongues would vibrate;
But all their music
Spoke naught like thine.

For memory, dwelling
On each proud swelling
Of the belfry, knelling
Its bold notes free,
Made the bells of Shandon
Sound far more grand on
The pleasant waters
Of the river Lee.

Headgear of Old

In ancient days in England women wore gigantic head-dresses, all of which completely hid their hair, excepting in their own homes, when the elaborate coiffure beneath was revealed. But with the Norman conquest came in the fashion of wearing two long braids. And in the time of Richard II. the mysteries of the head-dress were further revealed and gold and silver wire nets for containing the hair were shown. These had long been used but hidden from view. During the same period were worn the jewelled cauls, a style so ancient as to have been mentioned in the Bible. So costly was millinery in some of these early forms that head-dresses were often mentioned in wills as special bequests—rather a hard state of affairs to imagine in this day of fleeting fashions!

Date Bars

One-half cup of granulated sugar, three eggs, one and one-half cups of pastry flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder, one-half pound of dates, three-quarters cup of chopped nuts. Cream yolks and sugar until light; add baking powder, nuts, dates to flour, beat in gradually, then add the stiffly beaten whites. Mix well, then bake in flat, ungreased, square layer pans. When cold remove from tin, cut into oblong bars about one-inch wide and three inches long. Sift confectioner's sugar over. If an extra rich cake is desired, cover the bars with chocolate frosting.

To Avoid Finger Marks

It is not generally known that wringing out a cloth in hot water and wiping the furniture, before putting on furniture cream, will result in a very high polish that will not finger-mark.

MANY SOVEREIGNS SHUN ALCOHOL

Some Are Teetotallers and Others Drink Very Little—King Edward's Influence Did Much in England

Although it is not generally known, several European rulers are eligible for membership in a temperance society. Alfonso XIII. of Spain, and his mother, Queen Christina, are both total abstainers. So, too, is Victor Emmanuel III. of Italy, as well as Queen Wilhelmina of Holland, and her mother, Queen Emma; the two queens of Sweden and King Gustavus Adolphus, and Ferdinand of Bulgaria. Yet all these sovereigns possess cellars of historic fame and world-wide celebrity, the contents of which are offered to their guests on the occasion of every official and private entertainment.

No monarch has derived a greater amount of advantage from total abstinence than Czar Ferdinand of Bulgaria. In his case, it is not a matter of principle, or of health, but of policy, pure and simple, and in forswearing beer, wine, liquors, and stimulants of every kind he acted on the advice of his wonderfully clever mother and most sagacious political adviser, the late Princess Clementine of Saxe-Coburg, of whom it used to be said by Bismarck that she was far and away the cleverest diplomat in Europe.

Thanks to his abstinence, his nerves are always under the most perfect control, and the fact that he never loses patience or temper, never displays signs of irritation under the most trying circumstances gives him a tremendous advantage in his dealings with the passionate, hot-headed, intemperate races of the south-east of Europe, among whom his lot is cast.

With King Alfonso, total abstinence is not a matter of policy, or even of principle, but merely one of taste. He finds all wines and spirits unpalatable. He, however, drinks enormous quantities of water, and at official banquets in other lands than his own he has suffered much from the difficulty in getting plain water to drink.

The Emperors of Austria, Russia, and Germany are none of them total abstainers, but have always been extremely abstemious in the matter of stimulants, and have, both by example and by precept, done much to encourage temperance among their people.

In Sweden the present king and his consort undoubtedly were influenced in becoming teetotalers by the Dowager Queen Sophia, who for more than 60 years has been the most powerful supporter and advocate of the temperance movement in Scandinavia.

King Edward's Work

No one contributed more to the cause of intemperance than King Edward. He was not a total abstainer, but he was very sparing in the matter of stimulants, and entertained an intense horror of drunkenness. It is mainly attributable to the social influence which he exercised upon English life, from the time of his marriage, in March, 1863, until his death in 1910, that inebriety has gone out of fashion, and that hard drinking is no longer countenanced. The old saying of "drunk as a lord," has no longer any meaning, thanks to King Edward.

Conditions were very different formerly. Temperance was not only discountenanced by the throne and by society during the whole of the eighteenth century and the first half of that which followed, but was actually penalized by the state. Thus Frederick the Great, one of the most enlightened and sensible sovereigns of his time, issued in 1779 a proclamation deploring "the increased consumption of coffee by my subjects, and the amount of money that goes out of the country in consequence thereof. Everybody is using coffee. This must no longer be. My subjects must and shall drink beer." The king actually forbade the importation of the coffee berry and anyone found selling coffee was imprisoned.

Early Temperance Societies

Yet it was in Germany that temperance organizations may be said to have had their birth. The first of these was the Order of St. Christopher, formed by Sigismund von Dietrichstein on January 13, 1517, the members of which were pledged to abstain from drinking toasts. This was followed by the so-called Order of Temperance, founded by the sovereign Landgrave of Hesse in 1600. The members of this Order of Temperance solemnly vowed on the holy scriptures not to drink more than seven glasses of liquor at a time, and that not oftener than twice a day. The order in question, while it may have been one of temperance, was certainly not one of total abstinence.

An Argyllshire shepherd scaled the precipice above Loch [illegible] and brought home two young birds just hatched out by a pair of golden eagles.

Milk For the Complexion

Milk is very good for the complexion. A great many famous beauties have used it, but it has a tendency to make hair grow on the face. New milk is improved as a face wash by adding flowers of sulphur to a small amount of the milk. Let stand an hour or two to settle. Pour off the milk from the sediment and rub well into the skin. This mixture is [illegible] must be [illegible].

CIDAR PROBLEM

Cafe Keeper Heavily Fined For Selling it Without a License

The question whether cider is or is not an intoxicant was raised at Accrington Police Court when Mrs. Amelia Sherrock, of the Borough Café, was fined $100 and costs for selling cider without a license to an excise officer. Mrs. Sherrock's lawyer urged that very many people regarded themselves as being perfectly at liberty to sell cider without restriction, and said teetotalers often asked for it in the belief that it was a temperance drink.

The word "cider" at present does not indicate to the general public any standardized quality of the liquor supposed to be made mainly from apples. Cider can be made, and often is, highly intoxicating, the percentage of alcohol depending, as in other liquors, largely upon its manufacture. On the other hand, there are vast quantities of crude unpalatable liquor, also called cider, which is about as intoxicating as spring water, but much less beneficial.

Smart Dressing on a Small Income Means Eternal Vigilance

"I spend much time in putting on my clothes. I also spend much time in taking them off," remarked a Parisienne when asked how she managed to look so smart on her small income. She went on to explain that every night she spent some little time in looking over the clothes she had worn during the day, as well as those she would wear in the morning. Frayed edges were repaired, loose buttons set on, all garments brushed and no spots or stains allowed to remain. She confessed that not a single garment was hung in her wardrobe until it was brushed and pressed, if this needed to be done, so that everything was certain to be immaculate when it was taken out for wear.

She explained also that she had a pair of trees for each pair of shoes and took great interest in her footgear. Once a week all the clothes in her wardrobe were overhauled, tailored skirts were brushed thoroughly, pressed and any creases removed by ironing with a damp silk cloth between the cloth and the iron.

Her more delicate gowns had a long, loose bag with loops sewed on and they were placed in this instead of being turned inside out and hung up. Creases and a rumpled appearance were prevented by this simple invention. Blouses, which had a long case for their storage, were laid with plenty of tissue paper between the sleeves being stuffed with this, and each coat and a separate hanger, which was covered with thin velveteen so that by no chance did the lining get soiled or torn.

Protection in Mid-air

An English engineer proposes to defend his country in event of war by suspending bombs from balloons, which could be exploded from the ground when approached by a hostile dirigible or aeroplane.

Your Liver is Full of Bile; Bowels Clogged, Stomach Sour, Tongue Coated, Breath Bad.

Get a 10-cent box now.

You're bilious! You have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill-tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that most disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels are cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets—they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your liver and bowels clean; stomach sweet, and your head clear for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

TITLED PUBLICANS

Nowadays nearly every trade has been invaded by members of the "upper ten," among others that of public housekeeper.

For some years past Sir Henry Bohlin, Bart., held the license of the Seven Stars in Bledlow, Bucks. He owned other public houses, also, being the proprietor of the Wheelwrights' Arms at Marlow, and of the Rose and Crown at Woburn Green.

Sir Henry Bohlin can trace his lineage back to the thirteenth century. He belongs to an old Scottish family, and has had an adventurous career, for after being in service as a footman he joined the Royal Irish Constabulary. Then he served in the Life Guards, and later became a policeman. He was very popular behind the bar, being known as "Sir Harry" by his customers.

Another titled publican, the Hon. L. C. F. Vernon, owned the Falcon Hotel, High Wycombe, which he managed in a most business-like way. Lately he sold the inn at a handsome profit.—London Tit-Bits.

CANADIAN GIRLS OF EAST AND WEST

Will They Agree With the Description Given of Them in English Paper?

The Western girl resembles the wild rose of the open field; the Eastern girl is no hot house bloom, but she is pruned and potted to a staid perfection you miss (and bless Heaven for) when you meet the Western girl. The latter, says a writer in Canada, is a charming Diana; limb free, wearing an air of calm assurance—an undefeated air it is—riding to hounds, golfing, tennis, racquet swinging as she passes over the prairie trails, or, under emergency, sitting the binder in the grain field, and this just as gracefully as she sits at the piano in the drawing-room. The Western girl goes to public school, graduating in the ologies and the domestic arts at the same time. She studies French and drawing; painting and music are not "fads" with her; she will discuss Browning and Shakespeare with you while engaged in mending the household linen, and that with neither an [illegible] nor yet an inane air.

She holds sound opinions on all subjects, yet she never thinks of intruding herself or her opinions into public life. She controls the voter not the vote!

Trained to wait upon herself, she possesses the great virtue of adaptability, and if she becomes a wage-earner (as she usually does) you find her accepting the responsibilities attached to whatever she takes in hand; she feels no shame in her work, she rather dignifies whatever she undertakes. Accomplishments to the Western girl have real meaning: she accomplishes; she does not dabble in art but she becomes an adept in art.

The Eastern girl is somewhat proud as she is pensive; but, like her Western sister, she is wholesome in heart and mind. She, too, is the embodiment of mental and physical strength, verging (her critics say) at times upon the "boisterous." The chief characteristic of both types is cheerfulness, and this, combined with humor, gives both the charm they are allowed to possess.

In the sports la belle Canadienne holds the records, and all the while she is domesticated to high degree. She has so many distinguishing characteristics that, separating them you become bewildered; you see her in many lights, many moods, but all combining to make her what she is—sincere, capable and kind.—Yorkshire Post.

Removing Jar Labels

To remove the label from a jar or bottle is often rather difficult. This method is always successful: Wet the label thoroughly and then hold it near a fire for a moment. The steam thus generated immediately acts on the paste or gum.

Warm Water on Vegetables

Instead of plunging green vegetables in cold water to which salt has been added to remove insects, one housekeeper says a better way is to use warm water first, which thoroughly removes all insects; then plunge the vegetables in cold water.

SEWING MACHINE RIPPER

Blade Attached to Needle Bar Is Always Close at Hand

To save valuable time for busy seamstresses, a woman has designed a ripper attachment for sewing machines. Usually, when a woman wants to rip a seam in a garment, she searches about for a scissors and laboriously opens the stitches. This attachment consists of an arm that is pivotally fixed to the lower end of the needle bar and that has a hooked metal cutting blade mounted on it. When not in use this arm can be pushed up and back, out of the way. When needed, it can be pulled down in a second and the seamstress can open the seam without having to practically stop work and look for other tools. She can thus alternately sew and rip with only a few inches to go from one mechanism to the other.

A CHIC COAT BLOUSE AND A SMARTLY DRAPED SKIRT

There are but few among the new skirt models that do not show the bouffant hip. It is brought about in several ways by the tunic, peg-top drapery or the pannier, as shown in 8060. In this instance a soft satin is used with trimming bands arranged to hold the drapery in place. Another feature which makes this skirt distinctive is the box-plaited lower section. A plain yoke may be substituted for the draped hip if preferred with equally smart results.

8050 is one of those coat blouses which are so popular at the moment. They are most effective, especially when the material used is in decided contrast to the skirt. A softly colored brocade or moire with a plain dark skirt is an attractive suggestion. In the illustration the coat is of copper colored poplin and the skirt is black.

To make 8050 in size 36 it requires 3⅝ yards of 42 inch material.

The skirt (8060) requires for size 26 6⅛ yards of 42 inch material.

Long waisted effects in children's fashions still hold first place. They are quaint and becoming.

8062 is fashioned of blue satine belted in Roman stripes.

This coat may be made in size 6 with 3 yards of 42 inch material.

No. 8060—sizes 22 to 32.
No. 8062—sizes 2 to 14.

Ingenious Spiders

The Royal Society of Great Britain was recently entertained by a distinguished traveller with an account of a spider living in Australia which makes its habitation along the seashore, in the crevices of the rocks, between high and low water marks. But when the tide is in their homes are covered with water. Instead of deserting them, however, the spiders solve the difficulty by means of closely woven sheets of silk, which they stretch over the entrances, behind which they manage to retain sufficient air to keep them alive during the time they remain submerged.

Securing a Veil

A good way to keep a veil tidy under the chin, and so that it may be easily lifted when required, is to slit a piece of the finest round elastic, about an inch and a half in length, through the foot of the veil in the middle, about a quarter of a yard, [illegible] both sides. This is a much better way than twisting the veil round, which, if spotted, generally [illegible] stitches and tears.

Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from Rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my knees and elbows swollen, drawn and stiff, could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the Banff Springs, three months in 1910, twice to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908, done me no good. I heard of SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is about all gone. I am going around the house on crutches, also my joints are bending and straightening, and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable, and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,
Yours truly,
John J. Lane.

P.S.—You can show this letter to anyone you feel like, and send them to me as I can tell them better than I can write it.

FAKE MONEY IN ITALY

Of all the so-called "Great Powers," Italy has the most unstable and most unsatisfactory currency. Not alone is the exchange subject to fluctuations, but there is a great mass of counterfeit and worthless money floating about the country for the undoing of the unwary. In the first place, the engraving on the paper money is of inferior quality, and hence easy of imitation; secondly, there are so many worthless or doubted coins in circulation that the temptation to add to their number is not easily resisted.

The paper money is allowed to remain in circulation until disgracefully dirty and nearly obliterated, and therefore difficult of recognition as counterfeit or genuine. To add to the confusion, French silver is generally accepted, while the coins of Switzerland, Belgium, and Greece, although officially recognized, are, as a rule, refused in commerce. Numerous Papal and Roumanian coins are still in circulation, although valueless and accepted only by unwary foreigners, whom the Italians regard as fair prey.

In addition, none of the large number of one-lira pieces coined before 1863 can be passed, although intrinsically of equal value with those of later date, since the period arbitrarily fixed for their redemption has passed and the government refuses to accept them further.

The Italians [illegible] a mania for mutilating and perforating the five and ten centesimo copper coins; but, owing to their small denomination, this usually acts as no bar to their acceptance.

A remarkable divorce case, which surely has no parallel in fiction or fact, aroused great attention in Paris.

A lady, described as the Comtesse de R., aged twenty-seven, and living apparently very happily with her husband, was divorced by him without her knowing anything about it. The count succeeded in legally severing the marriage tie without letting her know of it, and actually gave a dinner, with his wife, to a number of friends on the day when the divorce was pronounced by the courts.

Pushing his audacity still further, the count, while continuing to live with the countess, became engaged to marry another lady of great wealth, and had the banns published also before the countess became aware of it. The secret leaked out quite accidentally. A lawyer who was a friend of the countess, met her on the street, and inquired what she planned to do. She was mystified and could hardly be persuaded that the man had seen the papers in the case. Determined to know the truth, she went to the town where her marriage had taken place. There she found her divorce inscribed at the registry. Returning to Paris she found the banns published of the forthcoming marriage of the count. She immediately asked to have a stay in the proceedings. It was too late, the courts told her. The papers had all been duly signed by her, and the divorce had become effective.

Light now dawned upon the countess. She had had a blind, implicit faith in her husband, whose word she had never seen any reason to doubt. One day after luncheon he had told her that he had great worry of mind about some business undertaking of his which was on the point of failing. The only hope that he could see of saving the situation was to apply for a separation of property. In order to obtain this she would on a certain day be asked to go to the house of a friend, and there a process server would present her with a legal summons to sign, the papers presented to her, and say she was satisfied. This she did and the count's way was clear.

Aged Woman's Heroism

She called to the only other occupant of the house, a young [illegible] who lodged with her, and, getting no reply, went to the door of his bedroom. She opened the door and saw her [illegible] unconscious in bed and the room on fire.

She then dashed into the burning bedroom and hauled the heavy man off the bed, down the stairs, and into the street, where her cries aroused the neighbors. She was badly burned.

Found a Roman Well

While excavating for new premises of the [illegible] and [illegible] Building Corporation in Gracechurch street, London, workmen discovered a well [illegible] being in a splendid state of preservation.

AMPHIBIOUS FISH.

From long habit we have been accustomed to think of fishes as living exclusively in water; or being incapable, in fact, of supporting existence under any other conditions. Nature, however, does not always draw a hard and fast line between aquatic animal life and that which belongs to the land. From the accounts of naturalists whose names are sufficient guarantee for their veracity there exist fish which walk on dry land, and others which traverse in like manner the floor of the ocean.

Dr. Francis Day, of India, discovered several cases of the migration by land of fishes from one piece of water to another, whilst Layard once encountered some fish evidently belonging to the perch family traversing a hot, sandy road at noon on a sultry day. Humboldt was once astounded to behold a species of dorse progressing over the dry ground by a succession of leaps, supported by its pectoral fins, and he also heard of another specimen that had climbed a hillside twenty feet high.

In a certain part of India a party of English officers were encamped when a rustling sound in the grass and leaves attracted their attention. They found, on investigation, that the noise was caused by countless numbers of little fish that were moving slowly over the ground and making steadily in one direction. Their method of locomotion consisted in using their sides and small fins as feet, and their progress was anything but smooth.

The fish these officers saw are known as the climbing-perch, which have long taken prominent rank among the curiosities of Nature, and they were being compelled by drought to traverse a tract of dry land in order to regain their native element. Constantly the streams they inhabit become dried up in the heat of the summer season, and when this happens these extraordinary freaks climb up the banks, and, guided by some instinct, make a direct bee-line across country to some river that still contains a modicum of water.

It is well over a hundred years ago that this wonderful fish was first brought before the notice of naturalists. A specimen was then captured nearly at the top of a lofty palm tree, having probably ascended the trunk in order to obtain any moisture that might have collected in the hollow of the leaves. This at first was regarded as a traveller's tale, but when M. Daldorf found one of these perch actually engaged in ascending a tree, it was amply sufficient to place the climbing-perch in the lengthy category of Nature's oddities.

Didn't Understand Poultry

Yesterday a gentleman living on George street north discovered that he was not an expert on poultry. A few Saturdays ago he bought five young pullets from a woman in the market. The price paid was a stiff one as the birds were guaranteed to be young hens that would soon lay. For some days he thought his hens, which had never laid, were quarrelsome to an unladylike degree. Yesterday one of them began to crow. He now finds that four out of the five birds are roosters.

"THE GLAD EYE"—LONDON'S RECORD SUCCESS FOR US.

The "Glad Eye," the merriest of little comedies, had its origin in Paris by Messrs. Armond and Nancey. It had a good run of nine months at the Renaissance Theatre there. Transferred to London, translated into English, it was the record success of the season, 1911-12. It ran uninterruptedly for fifteen months, and has been touring ever since with four companies in Britain, one in Australia, one in South Africa, and now one in Canada. Mr. Louis Meyer has fitted out a beautiful production for this country, everything being carried, the scenery, furnishings, all the beautiful draperies, cushions and dresses. The company, too, is all-British, chosen from among Mr. Meyer's best organizations, and, judging from the praise extended to them in Montreal, and to the jolly play, it is in for a big success with us. Grand Opera House, Tuesday, Dec. 9th.

"The Glad Eye" is eminently French in theme. It is the tale of an innocent little deception, whereby two husbands invent the mythical [illegible], whenever they wish for a little jaunt to Paris. Contrary winds, however, on one of these occasions, blow the real [illegible] of her course, and, not knowing of the accident, the two husbands come near to being discovered. It is their efforts to hide their little indiscretion that provide the spicy and clever comedy with which the play abounds.

The tour of "The Glad Eye" is an all-Canadian one, extending from Montreal to Vancouver. After Peterborough, and one or two other cities, the company goes to Toronto, Royal Alexandra Theatre, and from thence to Winnipeg and the far West.

The seat sale will open Saturday Dec. 6th, at box office.

WIND AND WATER HELP THE POLICE TO OUTWIT WOMEN

Mrs. Pankhurst Arrested and Taken From Liner as Port is Reached—Suffs too Late for Rescue

Exeter, Eng., Dec. 4.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader, was lodged to-day in Exeter jail. The police who had arrested her on board the Majestic on her arrival from New York, outwitted the women who had been watching. After they landed from the tug at a dock on the Tamar River, they started off in the direction of London, but afterwards changed their route, and made direct for this city, and reached their destination without encountering any obstruction.

Plymouth, Eng., Dec. 4.—Contrary to expectations there was no disturbance when Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the militant suffragette leader was arrested on board the steamship Majestic on her arrival from New York to-day.

Mrs. Pankhurst was transferred to a tug which had been chartered by the police and was taken to Devonport dockyard.

The police officers boarded the Majestic as soon as the liner had anchored shortly after noon.

The police tug with the prisoner and the officers on board steamed off directly for Devonport. Everybody except officials was excluded from the Government dock yard and Mrs. Pankhurst landed without incident.

Police Expected Trouble.

Two motor cars were waiting in the dockyard and the small party consisting of the prisoner and a number of detectives entered the vehicles and started off immediately in the direction of London.

A body of militant suffragettes had congregated in the meantime in Plymouth and after parading the streets with a band at their head marched to the docks.

The police authorities feared that the militants might start a campaign of window breaking when they learned that their leader had been spirited away.

Women's Boat Swamped.

Both wind and sea helped the police to evade the body of suffragettes who purposed the rescue of Mrs. Pankhurst under the provisions of the "cat and mouse act." A heavy sea was running in the harbor and this, while it did not affect the powerful police tug to be tossed about like a cork, the little motor boat which the suffragettes had engaged to head off the police had not such good luck. The occupants who included "Gen." Mrs. Flora Drummond and other leaders were drenched to the skin before they reached the liner which under police orders anchored outside the breakwater. The sea had delayed them so much that the suffragettes did not arrive at the side of the big vessel until the police were leading Mrs. Pankhurst down the gang plank. Then they shouted to her:

"Don't you land. The cats are after you."

HUMANITY SHOULD AID DUBLIN; NUMBING WEIGHT OF STARVATION DEADENS SENSES; LOOTING NEAR

Thirty Thousand Women and Waifs, Dublin's Submerged, Dependent Solely on Wages That Should Have Come to Them

Dublin, Dec. 5.—No matter what side is at fault, it is time humanity took a hand in this awful struggle. For fourteen weeks 20,000 have been workless, and at a moderate estimate there are 30,000 women and children dependent solely upon wages that should have come in. Dublin cannot help herself; scores of small merchants are ruined; pawnshops with shelves bulging have closed their doors, unable to give more loans. One little food ship unloads every few days, and the meagre strike pay of 50 cents to a dollar weekly, cannot begin to stem the tide of starvation.

Real Sufferers Are Women.

The following figures from trades union officials show, too, that only a few get the benefit:

Irish Transport Union and the Women Workers' Union, 11,500 men and [illegible] women.

Builders' laborers, 1,100; bricklayers, 530; amalgamated carpenters, 600; stationary engine drivers, 130; plasterers, 70; painters, 20; paviers, seven.

In addition to these there are 10,000 unskilled laborers and farm hands, and behind all, the real sufferers in this almost mediaeval warfare—starving, homeless, women and [illegible], Dublin's submerged—don't live; they barely exist. For the numbing weight of fourteen gaunt weeks has deadened the senses.

Still Pin Faith to Larkin.

At Liberty Hall there is the same daily scene of mob orators to keep the strikers determined. Larkin is still the guiding star to which they have pinned their hope; and they think that somehow by some miracle Larkin will get them back into their employment, now slipping away from them by the increasing number of "free laborers."

There have been distressing scenes this bitterly cold day in the homes of many strikers, who have been evicted by the Merchants' Warehouse Company.

Sixty families were served to-day at Eastwall, and the army of police and bailiffs had a hard task to prevent a riot. The 400 employers seem determined not to give way; trade has been lost which will never return. The great port is still: to all intents and purposes is idle.

LECTURE ON ROME IN NORMAL SCHOOL

Professor DeWitt of Victoria University, who has spent a year in Rome, gave an interesting lecture last evening in the Normal School on "Rome, Ancient, Mediaeval and Modern." Fifty stereopticon views took the audience through the Forum, the Coliseum and the Catacombs; showing them also Mediaeval Rome as represented by St. Peter's church (the monster building that makes the great C.P.R. building in Toronto look like a match box, as the Professor said), and also modern Rome. In addition to the students a large number of the general public listened to the lecture with great interest.

Presbyterians Against Home Rule

The Presbyterian General Assembly in Ireland, by a vote of 921 to 43—the largest vote and the largest majority ever recorded on any question in the history of the Assembly—declared itself opposed to Home Rule as at present contemplated. Evidently the Home Rulers are not Presbyterians. Is this opposition well grounded, or is it simply prejudice?

FORMAL TEST OF THE REID INCINERATOR A HUGE SUCCESS

Peterborough Now in Position to Treat its Garbage, Refuse, Etc., in an Approved Sanitary Manner. No Odor.

With the Grand Old Union Jack flying from its 110 foot high stack, the city's new incinerator was formally tested yesterday afternoon in the presence of Mayor W. H. Bradburn, the Aldermen, other city officials, a large gathering of influential citizens and its patentee and manufacturer, Mr. A. H. Reid, of Toronto. Filled with wet garbage, and but little refuse, the machine's terrific draft quickly generated an intense heat of almost incandescent hue, which quickly consumed entirely the miscellaneous assortment of waste matter fed to it, and without emitting any odor whatever. In fact, any person viewing the stack would hardly credit that the incinerator was in operation. The hot blast tubes are marvellously controlled, completely governing and holding the high temperature gases generated. When the blast tubes were opened up the action and roar created by the [illegible] air for draft purposes put to blush the noise created by a fan or blower driven by steam or electricity at high speed. One would almost think a fan was in operation when the blast tubes are open, the action of which in this (Reid's) incinerator dispenses with the use of engines, motors, boilers, fans, etc., used in all other types of incinerators for the production of forced draft. This incinerator operates with natural draft exclusively.

Peterborough's incinerator, formally tested yesterday, is Mr. Reid's own invention, and its scope, capacity and quality reflects great credit upon his inventive genius and the discernment of our Council Board in knowing a good thing when they see it. Mr. D. MacGregor, formerly of this city, now of Toronto, was responsible for the incinerator's construction, under the personal supervision of Mr. Reid himself.

An incinerator plant of this capacity—twenty ton unit—is valued at $25,000, and well worth it to any community. The vexed problem of garbage disposal in this city is now solved in a manner which will enhance the sanitary standing of Peterborough, and conserve the health of its citizens. Our garbage destroying machine is capable of getting away, in an inoffensive manner, with any undesirable vegetable, animal or metal garbage and refuse from an inanimate animal to a tin can, and should be appreciated. The credit of this acquisition, departmentally speaking, belongs to the city's Property Committee, of which Ald. George Duncan is the indefatigable and exemplary chairman.

The try-out yesterday afternoon resulted in a united expression of astonishment and gratification at the wonderful powers of the Reid Incinerator, together with a [illegible] of decision on the part of all present—officials and citizens alike—that the installation of this plant is one of the best pieces of legislation by the Council of 1913.

Mr. J. B. McWilliams has been urged to stand for the office, and has consented to do so. There is no man in the city better qualified for the duties of that position than he, and his friends will rally to his support in large numbers.

No action has been taken by the Council of the Montreal Bar, but it was stated to-day that if a signed petition were presented to him he would bring the matter to the notice of the council so that some action could be taken.

CRESSMANS' BIG RECEPTION

Peterboroughs Leading Department Store Thronged by Hundreds of Our Citizens

This week Messrs. Cressman Limited held a most enjoyable reception in their establishment, Peterborough's leading department store. The four floors of this big emporium were crowded for two short hours. The words "short hours" are used advisedly, as the dazzling array of latest styles and fabrics on exhibition could not be fully seen by the many hundreds present in so short a time.

Much interest was taken in the new departments recently inaugurated. The idea of the reception was not to sell goods, as none were disposed of. It was to feature the departments, recently inaugurated, on the third and fourth floors. On the third floor the furniture and home furnishings, carpets, wall papers, etc., attracted much attention from the thrify housewives who are always on watch to secure bargains. Here the products of the world's best looms showed carpets of every make and price; here were also displayed the "last word" in expert furniture makers' art. The prices for the goods displayed were surprisingly low.

The new fancy goods department also drew special attention from those with thoughts of Christmas in their minds. The company has the largest and best assortment of goods specially adapted to the Christmas trade ever shown in this city.

The Grand Opera House orchestra gave a splendid musical program, on the main floor. In the fewest words, the reception was a pronounced success and reflects much credit upon the enterprise of Messrs. Cressman.

BURGLAR SLEEPS ON JOB.

Carmarthenshire, England.—Albert Lithgoe, aged 21, was sentenced at Carmarthen Quarter Sessions to three months' hard labor for burglary. Lithgoe hid under a bed and fell asleep, not waking till early in the morning, when his movements in the dark roused the household.

TEMPORARY WIRES ON THE HYDRO POLES

Yesterday afternoon His Worship Mayor Bradburn and Ald. W. J. Johnston, chairman of the Power Committee, called on the Times and explained that on account of the fact that one of the city street franchises for electric light poles will not expire for some weeks, the city will be obliged to string some wires of that kind attached to the new Hydro poles. Cross arms will be adjusted to carry them. Both the Mayor and Ald. Johnston desired the Times to emphasize the fact that this will only be necessary for a short time. The policy of the city has been to abolish all wires from the streets and this policy will be maintained.

Ald. Johnston stated that the new magnetite lights will be turned on not later than the 20th of this month unless some unforeseen contingencies occur.

CHINESE SUNDAY SCHOOL HOLD ANNUAL SUPPER

St. Paul's church has fifteen classes of Chinese in its Sunday School. The Chinese think that one teacher to one scholar is the right proportion; there are just as many scholars as classes. Thirteen of the fifteen gathered last night in the lecture hall for the annual entertainment and supper. More than half the scholars took their parts, with more sang-froid than the average Saxon young man would manifest. Solos in English were given by Hum Jack and Low Ching; two twelve year old lads Hum Quo and Hum Kow, sang "Jesus Loves Me," in English, after which Low Ching and Mark You gave the same song in Chinese. An English Scripture reading was given with fair pronunciation and two little speeches expressing appreciation of the school were delivered by Low Quin and Hum Jack. A very interesting bit of English, composed and written in a fair English hand, by one of the scholars was read by Mr. Logan. This address spoke of the "delicious Gospel" taught in the Sunday School and referred to the four seasons as manifesting God's care over us.

Mr. Medill presided. Rev. Mr. Payne, and Mr. Logan gave short addresses. The proceedings closed with a bountiful supper, provided by Mrs. Sharp and several lady helpers.

HUNT SOLDIER AS MURDERER.

New York Dressmaker Slain—Body Hid Under Blankets.

New York, Dec. 5.—A former Swiss soldier, who lived at the house of Mrs. Agnes Guth and had been introduced as her second husband, had disappeared to-day and efforts to solve the murder of Mrs. Guth centred in the attempt to find. Mrs. Guth, a prosperous West Side dressmaker, was found dead in bed last night with four knife wounds in her body, almost any of which might have caused her death.

Mrs. Guth's sons said that $100 in currency and a cheque for $40, which she possessed yesterday could not be found to-day. Whoever stabbed the dressmaker to death hid her body under blankets in the bed, where a son found it.

TO FORBID IMPORTATION OF ARMS INTO IRELAND

Dublin, Ireland, Dec. 4.—The importation of arms into Ireland is about to be forbidden, according to a newspaper here, which declares that the issue of a proclamation to that effect may be expected in a day or two.

Augustine Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, is here in conference with the Earl of Aberdeen, the Lord Lieutenant, and the result, it is thought, will be that the Government will take this step against the plans of rebellion of the followers of Sir Edward Carson, the Irish Unionist leader.

Shipments of rifles and bayonets in large quantities into Belfast have been, it is said, on the increase during the past few weeks.

MORRISON MAY NOW WIN MACDONALD MINUS CONTEST

Chances are Liberals of West May Allow Him Free Re-election

Ottawa, Dec. 5.—There is considerable interest at the capital to-day in the nomination proceedings in South Lanark and MacDonald by-elections which take place to-morrow. Despite the Liberal decision to run a candidate in MacDonald, it would not be surprising if there was an acclamation for Alex. Morrison, the Conservative nominee, who resigned his seat.

There is a lovely row in Manitoba over the election. The Provincial Liberals did not want to make a fight, as they felt another overwhelming defeat, which seemed certain, would severely injure their chances. However the machine at Ottawa ruled otherwise and a hurried representative was sent west to make certain a man was put in the field. Hon. Frank Oliver and J. G. Turriff, M.P. were at the convention and despite the opposition of Provincial members succeeded in forcing the nomination of a candidate.

Last Moment Candidate.

The convention which developed into a beautiful squabble lasted until after midnight and it was only at the last moment a candidate was secured. A large Conservative majority again seems certain under the circumstances.

In South Lanark also there is also an interesting fight through the fact that there are two Conservatives with Mr. Arthur Hawkes as third man. Dr. Hanna is the regularly nominated Conservative candidate and will be supported on the platform by several cabinet ministers. It is postponed that Hon. W. T. White and Col. Sam. Hughes will speak in the riding. Col. Balderson is the Independent Conservative candidate. It is not believed Mr. Hawkes will cut much figure on election day.

FORMAL OPENING OF QUEEN MARY AND KING GEORGE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

These Two Fine Structures Now Equipped and Ready for Work--Proceedings at the "Opening"

The formal opening of the Queen Mary and the King George Public Schools took place yesterday afternoon and with the completion of these buildings the city of Peterborough is not surpassed for school accommodation by any city of its size in the Province of Ontario.

The location of these buildings on the extreme westerly and easterly limits of the city was chosen by the Board of Education after careful thought as being the best available sites for the purpose. The grounds are four and six acres in extent respectively and of high altitude where an abundance of pure air is always obtainable. The grounds are being graded, are ample in extent, and the walks are carefully laid out.

The buildings are imposing in appearance and well adapted for the health and comfort of the pupils. Each building is 90 feet by 110 feet and is constructed to the ground line of concrete; above this point of brick, faced with Hamilton pressed brick and belt sill courses and trimmings of Indiana lime stone, with cornices and balustrading of roof of galvanized iron.

There are three principal entrances to each of the buildings besides separate entrances to the boys' playroom, to the boiler room, and to the Kindergarten room. The entrances at the ends are the most imposing as these are used by the pupils.

Above the basement there are 12 standard class rooms each capable of accommodating from 5 to 48 pupils and with each class room there is a cloak room. In addition to these rooms there is provided a Principal's room, a store room, a lady teachers' private room, a janitor's room and a library room.

In the basement of each school there are three large class rooms to be devoted to Kindergarten, Household Science, and Manual Training classes. In addition to these there are a boys' playroom, and a girls' playroom, with lavatories adjoining, and a boiler and fuel room. The corridors in the basement are well lighted and divided at the centre of the building into boys' and girls' divisions.

The corridors above the basement are wide and well lighted. The stairs are placed at the extreme ends of the corridors and are sufficiently wide to admit four pupils to march out abreast, so that in case of fire the buildings can be cleared within the space of a minute.

The above accommodation has been obtained at a cost for both schools of a sum not exceeding $90,000.00, exclusive of sites. A single eight-roomed school recently built in Berlin cost $75,000.00.

In the plumbing of the schools, individual automatic water closets have been installed. There has been provided sanitary drinking fountains on all floors, sinks with hot and cold water in the Janitor's room and also in the Household Science room. Lavatories and water closets are provided in the teachers' rooms, also a separate lavatory in connection with the Kindergarten room.

The heating and ventilating system is known as "The Standard System" of Steam Heating and Ventilating, and is that now almost universally used in all the large schools that are being erected in English, American and Canadian cities. No other town or city between Toronto or Montreal, outside of Ottawa, has a school with a heating and ventilating system in the same class.

The main feature of the system is the total separation of the heating part from the ventilating part. This prevents any possibility of the con-

PETITION FILED AT OSGOODE HALL TO UNSEAT TRUAX

Protest Against Election in South Bruce Filed This Afternoon--Over A Hundred Specific Charges

Toronto, Dec. 5.—Based upon some one hundred and fifty charges of corruption, a petition to unseat Reuben E. Truax, M.P., who polled the most votes in the South Bruce by-election was filed at Osgoode Hall this afternoon by Mr. W. H. Price, Garvey & Company. The charges include bribery, treating, personation, undue influence and other corrupt practices by agents, and it is understood the Conservatives claim to have about fifty [illegible] charges of bribery, etc. against Mr. Truax.

The petition is signed by Mr. James T. Crawford, a prosperous farmer living within a short distance of Walkerton, and Mr. James A. Garland, also a prosperous farmer and a councillman of the township of Brant. They ask that the election be adjudged void, or in the alternative, that Mr. Wellington D. Campbell, of the township of Greenock, in the county of Bruce one of the candidates, ought to have been and was duly elected.

For some time since the election the Conservatives have been working quietly in the riding gathering evidence, so they claim, to be able to show that Mr. Truax conducted a wide open campaign for three or four weeks before the polling and that during the latter part of that time his agents became reckless, thus leaving abundance of material for the array of charges which are to be preferred.

THE KINGSTON PEN ENQUIRY SHOWS TUBBING WAS FREQUENT

Guards Admit Having Helped to Dip Unruly Convicts in Cold Water

Kingston, Ont. Dec. 5.—The prison Reform Commission went into session again to-day and at the very start of the much talked about "tubbing" system for convicts was in the limelight.

Samuel McCormick, a guard who did duty in the insane ward, told how a colored convict had been given this treatment. The convict was strapped and given two "dips" in the water. He knew of other convicts who had been placed in the tub. Each one had been given this treatment for misconduct.

Insane, But Got "Tubbing."

One man given a tubbing was in the insane ward, although the witness declared he knew well enough what was doing. The convict was "tubbed" without an order from the superior officers. The convict attempted to bite an ear off one of the guards and for this he was punished. An order was received from the surgeon not to do any tubbing and it was stopped for a time, but afterwards resumed when the convicts became unruly.

The convicts he had reference to were undressed before being bathed.

Not on Own Authority.

To Mr. Whiting the witness said he was not doing duty when the "tubbing" was resumed in the insane ward. He could not swear that it was resumed.

To Mr. Dorsey the witness said he had never "tubbed" a convict, a convict on his own authority. James Pope, a witness on Thursday was recalled.

"I could not say that any guard had been persecuted by the Deputy Warden or that the deputy had shown any favoritism to any guards," said the witness when questioned.

Several guards were named, but the witness declared that he could not say that any of these had been shown favoritism.

Forearmed.

Terence appeared at the club the other day with a radiant, contented smile.

"What's the joke?" asked a friend.

"Well, yer see," explained Terry, "O'Brien is always slappin' me on the chist and breakin' me cigars. But O'll be even with him this evenin'."

"How?" asked the friend.

"O'i've a stick of dynamite in me cigar pocket," said Terry; "O'll fool him this toime."

FAMOUS REFEREE

Corri Needed the Wisdom of a Solomon on One Occasion

Best known of all referees is Eugene Corri, the great English arbitrator of boxing, whose name is as familiar to followers of the game on this side of the Atlantic as it is across the water. Corri is the last word in the sport in England and referees all the bouts at the National Sporting club.

"I have had 'hot times' in the ring frequently," said Corri to a newspaper man when discussing ring affairs in general and the refereeing angle in particular. "Perhaps the most unpleasant moment and the one requiring the quickest action of mind was when two young fellows were fighting at the old club in London, some years ago. There was a great deal of betting on the outcome. I don't remember the names of the boxers, but they were called Jack and Bill. They had been fighting like two wildcats for 13 rounds and it was a toss-up as to which had the better of it.

"First one would score a knockdown and then the other. The crowd was wild with excitement and the [illegible] continued furious. In the [illegible] Jack began to pile up points and had away the best of it. I did not see how the fight could go another round.

"The climax came in the fourteenth. They rushed and let go rights at the same time. Both landed on the point of the jaw and both went to the floor for the count of 10.

"The excitement was of the wildest, the crowd demanding a draw, but when the men were brought to their senses, I gave the decision to the one who was leading on points at the time of the double knockout."

A HIGH OFFICE

Famous Duchess of Marlborough Was First Mistress of the Robes

Mistress of the Robes is the highest dignity to which any woman in the British Empire can aspire. But she must be British-born, and should be the daughter of a peer, though this latter qualification has sometimes been dispensed with.

The Mistress of the Robes is the head of the entire household and court of the Queen consort, having full authority over the latter's ladies in waiting and maids of honor, lords in waiting, etc. It is she who arranges the "waits"—that is to say, the terms of attendance of the various ladies of the Queen—and the latter's Lord Chamberlain, Vice Chamberlain, Treasurer, private secretary, and equerries, are also under her orders.

She has all sorts of prerogatives and perquisites, the latter including the robes of State worn by the Queen at the coronation. On that occasion only she bears the Queen's train, but at all other court functions and official ceremonies, stands either immediately by the Queen's side or else walks right behind her. The salary is merely nominal, amounting to about [illegible] a year; and, of course, the mistress of the robes has certain of the royal carriages and royal servants always at her disposal.

So far as can be ascertained the office, as now constituted, dates from the reign of Queen Anne, when it was held by Sarah, first Duchess of Marlborough, who, as every reader of English history knows, exercised the most extraordinary despotism, not to say terrorism, over that monarch. In those days the badge of office was a golden key, and when Queen Anne at last plucked up sufficient courage to emancipate herself from the tyranny of the Duchess and to dismiss her from the post, there was a difficulty about recovering the key. The Duchess absolutely refused to surrender it, and at length her husband, the victor of Blenheim, was ordered to secure its restitution. It is on record that when he notified her of the demands which he had received and of the necessity of complying therewith, she in a more than usually violent outburst of temper flung the key at his head.

THE KING OF GREECE

Constantine, King of Greece, is of Danish and Russian blood, his father being a son of Christian IX. of Denmark, and his mother being the eldest daughter of the Grand Duke Constantine, a brother of Alexander II. King Constantine was born in Athens, and brought up under an English governess and German and Greek tutors. Later on he went to Berlin, where he received his education as a soldier, being attached to the Second Regiment of Prussian Foot Guards. In 1897 he took command of the Greek troops in the war with Turkey, but his army was crushed in Thessaly. At the outbreak of the Balkan war he was appointed inspector-general of the forces, and he proved himself a soldier of merit.

On Solitude.

There can be no very black melancholy to him who lives in the midst of Nature and has his senses still. There was never yet such a storm but it was Aeolian music to a healthy and innocent ear. Nothing can rightly compel a simple brave man to a vulgar sadness. While I enjoy the friendship of the seasons I trust that nothing can make life a burden to me. The gentle rain which waters my beans and keeps me in the house today is not drear and melancholy, but good for me, too. Though it prevents my hoeing them, it is of far more worth than my hoeing. If it should continue so long as to cause the seeds to rot in the low lands it would still be good for the grass on the uplands, and, being good for the grass, it would be good for me.—From Henry David Thoreau's Essay on "Solitude."

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,

The banana is believed by some people to be the forbidden fruit which is mentioned in the story of the Garden of Eden.

In any case, it is one of the curiosities of the vegetable kingdom, being not a tree, a palm, a bush, or shrub, a vegetable, or a herb, but an herbaceous plant with the stature of a tree.

Although it sometimes attains a height of thirty feet, there is no woody fibre in any par of the structure, and the bunches growing on the dwarf banana plant are often heavier than the stalk which supports them.

No plant gives such a quantity of food to the acre as the banana. It yields forty-four times more by weight than the potato, and one hundred and thirty-three times more than wheat.

Famous Agitation Recalled

A famous incident of the long conflict between Berwick fishermen and Tweed bailiffs is recalled by the death of Mr. William Patterson, Berwick, who was one of two men who were wounded by a shot fired from a Government gunboat. Deceased was one of the crew of a fishing boat which, on ignoring the gunboat's order to lie to, was fired at, and Patterson was wounded.

BRITISH METHODISM AND HOME RULE

The Irish Methodists, so far as we can judge, says The Christian Guardian, seem to be practically a unit in opposition to Home Rule, and they have appealed to their British Methodist brethren to help them in the struggle. But so far British Methodism has declined to enter the lists either for or against. No doubt there are not a few British Methodists who feel like responding to the call for help, but so far the fear of entering politics has prevented any concerted action. But the pressure is increasing, and recently, at a luncheon of the Nonconformist Union Association in London, Rev. Dr. W. L. Watkinson, made a most vigorous onslaught on the present policy of silence. He referred to Home Rule as something that "would hand over the education of the children to the most absolute clerical despotism for all time to come," and he argued that the present apathy of English Nonconformists is due largely to the fact that the question has never been permitted to be stated to them. "Unfortunately," he declared, "the Nonconformist press is in the hands of men who place their party before Protestantism." and referring to the distinctively Methodist papers he said: "The attitude of our papers on this matter has been simply disgraceful. At the least they ought to have permitted capable men on the other side of the channel to present their situation to their religious brethren on this side, and it has done us a great injustice that they have been denied this opportunity." The Methodist Recorder, replying to the doctor's vigorous condemnation, says: "The obvious answer to Dr. Watkinson is that we have invited no representative men, whether on that side of the Channel or this, to write on Home Rule, for or against. Such invitations would have plunged us at once into purely party-political warfare, which we deemed to be undesirable in the interests of that political catholicity which ought to prevail in every church." Whether this attitude is a defensible one from the religious standpoint the Recorder must decide for itself, but we venture to say that Irish Methodism will feel that it savors little of the old-fashioned British virtue of courage.

"I am only thirty years old, yet almost two years I have felt more like seventy-five. I have found it difficult to sleep at night, and in the morning felt so depressed and heavy that effort was difficult. My hands were always clammy and the perspiration on slight effort would break out all over me. It was not unnatural that I should begin to brood over the chance that I should be unfit to do my work, and this dread made my sleepless nights perfect misery. After repeated trials of medicines and mixtures, Dr. Hamilton's Pills gave me the first gleam of hope. From the very first I could see they were different in action from other pills. They didn't gripe and acted as naturally as if nature and not the pills were cleansing my clogged-up system. My spirits rose. I felt much better. The sluggish action of the system gave way to normal activity. Dizziness and headaches ceased, appetite, good color and ambition to work returned, and have remained. I am like a new man, and I thank Dr. Hamilton's Pills for it all."

This was the experience of J. B. Parkhurst, a well known grocery dealer in Jefferson. 2. It means that the home market is to be taken away from the Canadian farmer.

3. It means that he will take measures to prevent the west from shipping food away from our markets.

JELLEWER VS. THE THIEF IN A BATTLE OF WITS

Many New Safety Devices Protect Valuable Stock From Motor-car Bandits

When the craze for jewel-snatching by armed men in motor cars spread from Paris to London, it caused the big jewelers to spend anxious hours over the question of securing the safety of their stock. Security devices of all sorts were fitted up literally by scores within two or three months.

The device most generally adopted was that of a safety-bolt, worked either by a button below the counter or by a lever pressed by the foot. With the latter particularly, the door to the safety of the street can be silently barred without rousing the slightest suspicion on the part of the most observant operators.

If a jeweler is showing trays of rings, and if, after putting one aside, he does not at first get the count right, it gives a person rather an eerie feeling to reflect that one is a prisoner till he does. The beauty of this electric safety-bolt is that not only can the thief be kept in, but any accomplice can be prevented from coming to his assistance.

A similar safety device is a button arrangement connected with the sliding curtain which has taken the place of the old shutter system. A touch on the button, and there is an iron wall between the bandit and the car that is waiting for him.

Many jewelers adopted the street-gong system. The button in this instance not only works the safety-bolt or iron curtain, as the case may be, but sounds a loud gong on the outside of the shop—a warning that police help is urgently needed within.

But for an unarmed jeweler's assistant deliberately to lock an armed jewel thief in with himself demands some courage. So in scores of jewelers' places revolvers are kept in a convenient place just below the counter.

The cunning jewel thief chooses his time. Lunch-time is a favorite occasion, or immediately before closing-time, when there is possibly only one assistant on duty, the rest being either at lunch, or tidying themselves for the street. So in a good many shops the meal-time hours were rearranged to ensure there being always two men in the shop.

It is not to be supposed, however, that jewelers were helpless in the hands of jewel thieves before these extra precautions were taken. Many big jewelers have long had—ever since the window-snatching epidemic of some years ago, indeed—safety window shelves, which, the moment the glass is broken, sink out of sight and out of reach of grasping hands. Moreover few jewelers' counters have overhanging rims nowadays. The change dates from a very clever trick that brought big hauls many years ago. The thief, well dressed, would walk in, and look over some rings. At an opportune moment he would slip one of the finest out, and casually fix it on the underside of the overhanging rim, either with a piece of wax or a simple staple. In a second or two its absence would be noticed, and the customer challenged. Indignantly he would demand to be searched. Naturally, he went scot-free, or got, at most, a few hours in the cells.

Meanwhile, a confederate would have strolled in ten minutes after the incident, on the pretext of making some small purchase, and walk off with the ring.

Col. Allen of New Zealand Speaks of Agreements Made and Broken

London, Dec. 4.—The New Zealand naval defence bill passed its second reading yesterday by 31 to 21 votes. Colonel Allen, in moving it, said that the Australian part of the agreement of 1909 had alone been performed. The only part of the China unit in existence was the battle cruiser New Zealand. When he left the Dominion he supposed that the submarines and destroyers would be obtained according to the agreement, but the Admiralty declared that such vessels were unsuitable to New Zealand waters, and this decision must be accepted, though he respectfully differed. An Imperial squadron based on Gibraltar was an unsatisfactory arrangement for Australia, as was also dependence on foreign alliance for safety on the Pacific.

Agreements Broken.

The payment of a subsidy without Parliament would not work. The Imperial Conference, he said, could be developed. It should meet more frequently, and occasionally in the Dominions.

THE SILENT SISTERS

No Sound of Human Voices Disturbs This Community

Not far from Biarritz is a community of women who pass their lives in silence. They live and die in the Convent of the Silent Sisters, and are buried in silence in the little cemetery within the walls of the grounds. At four o'clock, winter and summer, they leave their bare cells, and for three unbroken hours tell their beads and say their prayers, until they are summoned to their Spartan breakfast. Two more hours they spend, later in the day, with their rosaries and prayers in a secluded corner of the chapel, the rest of the day being devoted to work of various kinds and to meditation. In the refectory, a dark, uninviting chamber with sanded floor, along which run wooden tables and benches, the tables are spread for the midday meal, with an array of brown water-jugs and wooden spoons and forks displayed on coarse serviettes, which take the place of a tablecloth. During the meals not a sound is heard—a whisper, even, would be a grave offense bringing swift penance; and every Friday the Sisters eat their meals on their knees. The Sisters must first spend two years of probation, at the end of which they are free to depart if they wish. If they decide to take the vows they can never pass beyond the convent walls again, even in death. The survivors themselves dig the graves, which are unmarked, save for a few shells.

LOVE FANCIES

To dream of a basin denotes many lovers to a maiden.

When there is love in the heart, there are rainbows in the eyes, which color every black cloud with gorgeous hues.

What a beautiful thing is love. However poor our circumstances, humble our homes, mean and uncultivated our faculties or limited the number of our friends, love can make a heaven in the breast.

The girl who dreams of a peacock will marry a handsome and vain young man.

To find out how long you have to wait for the wedding day, pull a hair from your head, and thread it through a borrowed wedding ring. Then hold the ring on the hair as steadily as possible just below the top of a half filled tumbler of water. You will soon find that the ring will swing gently until it touches the glass. And as many times as it sounds against the tumbler, so many years will elapse before the wedding day.

FASHION CORNER

A prominent New York newspaper is now conducting a contest featuring the typical Girl of To-day. Well-known artists, couturiers, actresses and literary men, a renowned advocate of the feminist movement and a modern Beau Brummel have been consulted as to their impressions of this somewhat elusive individual, and great has been the diversity of opinion. The modern maiden has been described as everything from pattern-ed to over-daring, from an imitation of her English sisters to the most original and independent of things feminine. Upon one point, however, all critics agree: she is essentially an outdoor product. The sport-loving proclivities of American womankind none can deny. Acknowledgedly the most beautifully built women in the world—a tribute which even a somewhat hypocritical French dressmaker, recently visiting our shores, has not hesitated to concede her—the American is, perhaps, seen to best advantage in outing garb.

POSTER-LIKE GOLF SUIT
PLAIN AND STRIPED VELOUR DE LAINE

Establishments which cater exclusively to the needs of the motorist and golfer, the tennis and yachting enthusiast, the equestrienne, the [illegible] "gun" and the staunch apostle of the cross-country "hike," are springing up in our larger cities. A recent visit to a shop of this kind revealed many interesting innovations designed to add to the comfort and attractiveness of the sportswoman.

Sweaters have become a thing of beauty, assuming the cutaway, Norfolk and straight-up-and-down lines of the latest modes. Vivid colors, such as hunter's green and scarlet, vie with the distinctively decorative tones of brick red, purple and olive in the newest productions. Fur-trimmed sweaters are being featured by many of the shops, and wool sweaters in two-toned effects, with cap to match, are a pleasing novelty. Quite unusual are hand-knitted designs in Shetland and medium-weight wool sweaters in cutaway style, with collar and cuffs of silk in contrasting shades.

Importations of all-silk sweaters have made their appearance, designed on severe, tailored lines and in medium length. The more brilliant hues are chosen for these garments rather than somber shades, and no objection, we are told, is being raised to the brightness of color. Sweaters of this kind are shown in solid tones and in narrow two-toned stripes. Usually they are collarless, cut in V-shape at the neck, having patch pockets and buttoning in a straight line from the bust to the lower edge, with loops of silk and large crochet silk buttons. [illegible] Made on Norfolk lines and belted, the sweaters have much the appearance of the popular sports coats.

Even without the sweater, sets of knitted caps and scarfs are worn with many types of outing garb. In the first illustration, a set of this kind is shown with golfing togs. Cap and scarf are white, in accordance with the black-and-white scheme of the outfit. The long peplum blouse is of black velour de laine striped with white, and very charming it is in the unbroken simplicity of line. White porcelain ball buttons form the fastening and trim the natty patch pockets. The skirt is a simple four-gored model of plain black velour de laine, cut very short to permit freedom of movement.

Motor apparel also assumes unwonted charm. The new coats, quite as cozy as the old-time shapeless affairs, are infinitely graceful in line owing to the exquisite draping qualities of the new coatings. Many of them have enormous fur collars, the pelts of the more shaggy animals being used for this purpose. Some of the lighter-weight coats are lined with brilliant, contrasting fabrics, as in the case of the garment which the fair motorist in our second illustration carries on her arm. The coat itself is gray duvetyne and the lining of red-and-white polka-dot silk, which latter fabric is repeated in her natty cap and in the girdle of her gray crepon gown. This gown, while supremely serviceable, is quite fitting for an informal luncheon or dinner at a wayside inn. The skirt is in one piece, draped up adroitly at the front, according to the latest dictum of fashion. The vest is of white satin, untrimmed save for a row of buttons, and the revers and cuffs are of gray cloth in a darker tone. Her headgear is unmistakably derived from the jockey cap, and typifies a new kind of model recently brought out. Some of the caps of this type are fitted close to the head, true jockey fashion, instead of with loose crown, as in the illustration.

Outing hats grow constantly more interesting. Gaily-colored models much on the lines of the Alpine, having a trig little stick-up at the side, are extremely fetching. Models in suede and glace leathers are well suited to withstand wear and weather. A motor bonnet of shaggy wool cloth in deep Russian green is prolonged at the sides into scarf ends at least a yard in length, which, wrapped about the neck, are impenetrable by even the bitterest of gales.

Tramping boots are being built on lines quite fashionable; some models resembling to a perceptible degree the top boots, which are one of the style novelties of the season. Low-heeled footwear, rubber soled, and provided with practical dust and water guards, is, we are informed, being adopted for general rainy-day service as well as strictly outing purposes.

Novelties in high-toned wool gloves and mittens are being offered the sportswoman, together with new variations of the fur and fur-lined styles. Leather gauntlets are undoubtedly the smartest handcovering for all outing occasions, and of these we see the usual quota of good-looking types the usual quota of good-looking types.

THINGS TO SAVE

Remember These Points When Using Lemons or Eggs

Lemon juice is much better if the yellow rind is taken off before the lemon is squeezed. Conserve the rind at once and put it away for fruit cake, mince pies, and flavorings. Save orange rinds for the same purpose.

Wash eggs thoroughly before they are broken. It is a good idea to wash them as soon as they come from the market. Then save the shells for the clearing of soups and jellies, and for coffee if you boil it. Simply crush the shells in your hands, put them on a plate at the oven door until they are thoroughly dried. Keep them in a jar. To utilize them soak them in cold water for twenty minutes. Four of these shells will clarify a quart of gelatine or the same quantity of soup.

Cold poached eggs, almost always thrown away, may be recooked and put aside for garnishing the dinner salad, or may be added to cream sauce for fish.

SCALING A FISH

Fish should be cleaned as soon as possible after being caught, a curry comb being the very best article with which to remove scales. If fish is dipped in boiling water a minute they will scale much easier. Begin at the tail with sharp, upward strokes until every scale is removed. If the fish is to be boiled or broiled do not remove either tail or head. Handle fish as little as possible. Do not wash it in more than one water or much of the juice will be lost. Wipe clean with a cloth, with a pinch of salt. When all the blood and scales are wiped away wrap the fish in another clean cloth and set aside until time to use.

Many of the fresh water fish have a muddy taste. This can be removed by rubbing with dry salt and let them stand a few hours or over night or soak them in salted water for an hour, with the skin side of the fish up. To freshen salt fish allow to soak in sour milk for four hours.

DANISH WOMEN

During the Last Half Century Their Progress Has Been Rapid

Standing face to face with a Government measure admitting them to full citizenship, Danish women looked back over a difficult way. The modern woman, as Denmark knows her to-day, dates back but fifty years in the history of the nation. Before that time, said Thora Daugaard, a woman leader of Copenhagen, all Danish women "sat behind the panes with downcast eyes." Since that time progress has been steady.

First came Mathilde Fibiger pleading for the mental enfranchisement of women. She was the first woman to be employed as an officer in the State Telegraph Company, and her views and achievements made her the target of relentless opposition. Then came Pauline Worm, pleading for women's economical freedom. Both virtually gave their lives to their causes. Then decade by decade the sentiment of the country changed, until in 1908 Danish women were given full municipal suffrage. In the interim legislation had been enacted in women's favor. The married woman's earnings and property were secured to her by law. The word "obey" was eliminated from the marriage ritual.

Professionally and economically women made their way up. There came to be women doctors, lawyers, dentists, journalists, and authors in the State of Denmark. Women got into State positions. Telegraph offices and postoffices ceased to make any distinction between men and women clerks. "The railroad and custom house employ women. So do private savings banks, and woman has her place in the offices of both Ministry and municipality."

According to Thora Daugaard's figures, there are 24,000 Danish women farmers and 24,000 Danish "business women," that is, employed in commerce. About 11,000 are engaged in home work—that is, in gainful occupations in the home. Six thousand women are proprietors of factories, there are 4,000 forewomen and 40,000 "hands." Fifteen hundred women are in the dairy business. Four thousand women teachers rule over mixed schools and schools for boys, and there are 70,000 women workers in the arts and trades.

In the Interests of Suffering Humanity

February 28, 1913.

The Sanol Manufacturing Co. Ltd.,
Winnipeg, Man.
Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five, I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way. My knees and elbows swollen, fingers stiff; could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, went to the [illegible] Springs three months in 1906, twice to Hot Springs, Arkansas, two months in 1907, four months in 1908 done me no good. I heard of SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is about all gone. I am going around on crutches, also my hands are [illegible] and [illegible], and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and in fact has been pronounced incurable, and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,
Yours truly,
John J. Lane.

P.S.—You can show this letter to anyone you feel like, and send them to me as I can tell them better than I can write it.

WHOLESOME FOOD FOR KING'S SAILORS

Substantial Bill of Fare on War Vessels and Many Delicacies at Reasonable Price

Within the past decade the dietary in the Royal Navy has altered greatly for the better. Gone are the days of biscuits so full of weevils that they had to be rapped on the table before being eaten; of salted meat so tough and hard that it could be manufactured into snuff-boxes; and of beer and water which, through long keeping in wooden casks, was as often as not quite unfit to drink.

Beer—of which the Elizabethan seaman received a gallon a day—has been supplanted by rum; while the water on board is now kept in iron tanks, which are refilled from the shore, or by the distilling apparatus on board, at frequent intervals.

All modern ships are fitted with bakeries, so Jack receives his fresh, newly-baked loaf every day of his life. There is also a refrigerator on board, in which is stowed enough fresh meat and vegetables to last every man in the ship for a month, so the sailor is no longer subsisting on salt beef and pork within a few days of leaving harbor.

Like a Big Hotel

A modern battleship, in fact, only carries about two days' salt meat—that is, if she is fitted with a refrigerator; and it is then carried merely as a "stand by," to be served out in very exceptional circumstances.

The ordinary daily menu of every man in the Navy is 1 pound of fresh bread, ½ pound fresh meat; 1 pound fresh vegetables; 4 ounces sugar; ½ ounce of tea, or 1 ounce of coffee for every ½ ounce of tea, if preferred; ½ ounce of drinking chocolate, or 1 ounce of coffee if preferred; ¾ ounce of unsweetened condensed milk; 1 ounce of jam or marmalade; and 4 ounces of preserved meat on one day of the week in harbor, or on two days while at sea.

Mustard, pepper, vinegar, and salt are served out as required, while ½ pound of biscuit or 1 pound of flour is issued instead of the bread if the latter is not available. A man over the age of twenty receives one-eighth of a pint of rum daily, but those who desire it can receive money instead.

Origin of Grog

The rum itself, to all men except warrant and chief petty officers, is served out in the form of "grog"—three parts of water to one of rum. It is called by this name as the mixture was first issued by Admiral Vernon in 1740, for he, from the fact that he wore breeches made of a stuff called grogram, was known to his men by the nickname of "Old Grog."

The sailor, in addition to his stated ration, is granted a messing allowance of 8 cents a day by the Government; and with this sum he can purchase extras from the stores on board. All the ordinary articles, such as bread, meat, vegetables, tea, coffee, cocoa, condensed milk—everything, in fact, except rum—can be bought in this way, but additional delicacies like tinned salmon and rabbit, raisins for puddings, dried beans and peas, pickles, suet, etc., can be procured if required.

All these articles are of the very first quality, and as they are bought by the contract department of the Admiralty in enormous quantities, there is no doubt that Jack gets the finest value for his money.

Economy is Possible

A man, moreover, is not forced to take up his full allowance of provisions. He must draw one-third of his amount of meat and vegetables, but for the remainder, if he likes, he can be paid their equivalent value in hard cash.

Once a month each sailor can buy one pound of tobacco free of duty. It is issued in leaf for 24 cents a pound, and as many officers smoke nothing but this brand, it speaks well for its quality. All this tobacco comes from special tobacco plantations in South Africa, and could not be bought ashore under $1.50 a pound.

Birds That Change Their Food

It is well known among naturalists that while many birds are exclusively flesh-eaters, few are exclusively vegetarians. The latter seek a change of food, not because of its scarcity, but from choice, and this choice is nearly always exercised when they are feeding their young. All gardeners know that sparrows are ordinarily vegetarians, yet they eat insects off of plants.

New Fertilizer

A method for producing potash fertilizer from feldspar or any other mineral containing potassium by treating it in an electric furnace has been invented by a [illegible].

A NIGERIA DEPUTATION.

Among a party of Nigerian chiefs who arrived at Plymouth was one huge fellow about 6 feet 6 inches in height and broad in proportion. The chiefs came as a deputation to the Colonial Secretary to urge that certain rights of the natives should not be infringed. The names of the visitors were: Prince Bassey Duke Ephraim, Prince James Eyo Ita, Chief [illegible] Goodhead, Chief Richard [illegible].

They wore European dress and talked fluently in English.

Prince Bassey Duke Ephraim was educated in England for six years, returning to Nigeria in [illegible]. Neither he nor his companions would say anything definite about their mission except that the result would affect millions of natives. He expressed gratitude for the advantages brought to their country by Great Britain, but said that they would now rather govern themselves.

They were granted certain rights, he said, when the protectorate was established, and they were anxious to preserve them. They had, he said, abolished the title of King among themselves, recognizing that they could only have one King—he who had established the protectorate over them. They had substituted the title of Obon for their chiefs.

While admitting that the late "King"—the last to hold that title—had 100 wives, Prince Bassey Duke Ephraim would not say how many wives he had.

For obtaining the number of tons of hay in a stack, the first step is to measure the width and length with a tape line, and then what is known as the overthrow, that is, pass a tape line from the bottom of the stack on one side over to the bottom on the other side, and divide this measurement, which is called the overthrow, by three, then multiply the length by the width, and this by one-third of the overthrow—this gives you the number of cubic feet in the stack. Of course, if the stack is different widths or different heights you will have to take the measurements in several places and obtain the average of these by adding them together and dividing by the number of measurements made.

The number of cubic feet of hay per ton varies considerably with the length of time that it has been stacked. With newly stacked hay it will take about 500 cubic feet to equal a ton. If it has been stacked for two to three months from [illegible] to [illegible] cubic feet will equal a ton. After you have obtained the number of cubic feet in the stack, divide by the number of cubic feet in a ton taking into consideration the length of time that the hay has been stacked.

Offensive Breath Caused Usually by Catarrh

A Simple Remedy that Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. It's rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

"I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c.; trial size 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

FORMAL OPENING OF SCHOOLS

tamination of the fresh air by coal gas or otherwise.

The steam is generated by a Kewanee fire box steel boiler. The boiler is bricked-in in the peculiar Kewanee way. The Kewanee Boiler is built in the largest steam-heating boiler plant in the world and has the reputation for being very economical on fuel.

The radiators are the Safford screw nipple pattern made by the Dominion Radiator Company and are those almost universally used in this country.

The ventilating part of the system is very superior, being similar to that installed in the Ottawa Public Schools within the last ten years.

The fresh air for ventilating purposes is forced into the rooms through galvanized ducts and is delivered in them about eight feet above the floor line by high power fans which are designed to provide four changes of air per hour per room. The fans are driven by five horse power motors made by the C. G. E. Company. The fresh air is heated by forcing it through stacks of Vento Hot Blast Radiators. The foul air passes out of the foot which lead to the roof and is delivered out at that point.

The heating is rendered more easy by the fact that only one side of any class room is presented to the outside atmosphere.

The Building committee is as follows: Messrs. R. F. Ackerman, Dr. J. E. Middleton, Col. J. W. Miller, J. J. Turner, Jr., and Dr. M. A. Morrison.

Architect: F. Bartlett.

Contractors: W. J. Johnston, and Messrs. Langford and Hartley, respectively, for the East and West Ward. The sub-contractors being: For the East brick work, J. J. Hartley; cut stone, Sherwood & King; plastering, Mr. Jos. Johnston; heating and ventilation, R. A. Sturgeon & Co.; plumbing, Messrs. Duranceau & Archibald; roofing, Mr. Maitland; lighting, Messrs. Alexander & Miller; painting and glazing, Mr. Ralph Curtis; galvanized iron cornice work, Mr. W. R. Turner.

Sub-contractors West Ward: plastering, Wolstenholme Bros.; painting, Mr. Deane; roofing, Archibald Moore. Mr. H. Sharter executed the concrete work in the East Ward School and laid the walks to both east and west. Mr. W. James did the grading at both schools.

With the completion of these two schools, the Board of Education has accomplished the plan it outlined seven years ago namely, to provide adequate and suitable school buildings for the Public and High School children of the city.

The King Edward School, the Collegiate Institute, the six roomed addition to the Queen Alexandra School, the reconstruction of the Central and the old Collegiate Buildings, and finally the two new buildings just opened have all been erected or reconstructed during the past seven years.

The value of the School buildings seven years ago was $11[illegible],000.00; now their value is approximately $[illegible],000.00.

The extent of the playgrounds seven years ago was less than 4 acres; now they comprise 22 acres.

The outlay in buildings, grounds and improvements during these seven years has been a quarter of a million of dollars.

This expenditure has been made necessary by the rapid growth of the city. The number of Public School pupils enrolled in October 1906 was 1600, while in October, 1913, it was 2300. The number of Public School teachers employed in 1906 was 35, while in 1913 there are 50 and 4 special teachers.

On an average three additional class rooms are required each year to accommodate the increased number of Public School pupils. There are 13 regular class rooms in each of the new schools and already 9 are in use in the Queen Mary School, and 8 in the King George School. This will show that it is only a matter of a very few years until all the rooms will be occupied.

That the buildings are necessary is readily seen and that good value has been obtained for the outlay is so evident.

King George School.

Yesterday afternoon Dr. Middleton, Dr. Merchant of Toronto and Mr. Mowat, Inspector of Schools, inspected the new King George School, from the boiler rooms and Kindergarten department to the roof.

A little after three the scholars were dismissed, and the staff with a number of visitors assembled in the Principal's class room for the formal opening. Dr. Middleton, a member of the Board of Education for East City, presided. Dr. Merchant of Toronto delivered a very similar address to that given by him at Queen Mary School.

Mayor Bradburn, Ald. Gillespie and Ald. Anderson all referred to the controversy about the site of the school and congratulated the Board in building in such a splendid situation.

Mr. E. A. Peck, M.P.P., gave an interesting account of the development of education in Ashburnham since the days when Mr. John Wood taught a one-roomed school.

Police Chief Thompson, Fire Chief Howard, the architect, Mr. Bartlett, and Rev. F. J. Sawers also addressed the meeting. The last named specially referred to the excellence of the staff working in this excellent new building. The meeting concluded with prayer by Rev. Mr. Sawers.

We understand that the school, which opened in September, has an enrolment of 300 under a staff of nine teachers.

Queen Mary School.

The new West Ward School, known as the Queen Mary, although already populated by some 400 pupils, was formally opened yesterday afternoon.

Among those present were: J. H. Burnham, M.P., Ald. Buller, Messrs. L. M. Hayes, John Crowe, Rev. Mr. Rollins, D. W. Dumble, V. Eastwood, R. F. Mason, Chief Howard and Thompson, D. Walker, Dr. Morrison and a large number of ladies.

In one of the large rooms some short addresses were given. Mr. Ackerman called the meeting to order with a short description of what the Board of Education had done for the present and coming generations of local children. There has been an enormous increase in the school attendance of late.

Ald. Buller said the present site has been well chosen. He described briefly the fire drill, whereby the 400 children of Queen Mary were dismissed from the various rooms in 45 seconds.

Chief Howard paid a strong tribute to the Board of Education and the City Council in erecting so splendid a building.

Rev. Mr. Rollins said it gave him great satisfaction to be present. The education of our children is largely a matter of the personal equipment of the teachers. Peterborough has a splendid class of teachers.

Rev. Mr. Russell said whenever he went into a school his sympathies went out to the teachers. Go land has a better educational system than Canada.

School, next gave a few words. Six- Mr. D. Walker of the Normal teen years ago, when he first came to Peterborough he sent in a report that the former West Ward School was unfit for use. In the U.S. the schools are made social circles for parents and children. He advocated a "Parents Association."

Dr. Merchant of Toronto, on behalf of the Minister of Education, thanked the Board for his invitation to be present. The great idea of education is to develop the latent sparks of knowledge inherent in the child. The school is to train the child's intellect. He thought "what is a child playing?" should receive deep study. He thought the Board showed good judgment in building the two new schools. We have modern buildings at reasonable cost. He praised the Board for acquiring such extensive playgrounds.

Rev. Mr. Webb and others delivered short addresses.

TO HAVE SMOOTH WHITE SOFT SKIN ALL WINTER

(From The Woman Beautiful).

Does your skin chap or roughen easily in this weather, or become unduly red or blotchy? Let me tell you a quick, easy way to overcome the trouble and keep your complexion beautifully white, smooth and soft the winter long. Just get an ounce of ordinary mercolized wax at the nearest druggists and use a little before retiring, as you would cold cream. Upon arising, remove the coating with soapy water. The wax, through some peculiar attraction, flecks off the rough, discolored or blemished skin. The worn-out cuticle comes off just like dandruff on a diseased scalp, only in almost invisible particles. Mercolized wax simply hastens Nature's work. Used as required, it keeps the face constantly free from devitalized scarf skin and only the healthy, young-looking skin is in evidence. It's the best treatment known for weatherbeaten, rough, muddy, freckled, pimpled and all unbeautiful complexions.

Deep skin wrinkles easily in winter. There's no excellent remedy is a harmless wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in ½ pint witch hazel. This will quickly eradicate every line.

Your Temple of Music
The unmatched beauty of the Greeks' early temples has been the inspiration of architects for 2000 years. But their music is gone—forgotten. No genius can "restore" it as we do the crumbling columns of her Acropolis.
We have caught the spirit of their art, however, in the design of the modern temple of music—the Grafonola.
The Favorite, for instance, embodies the same principles of proportion and contour, and as an example of cabinet-making pays the same tribute to modern music as the architecture of the Greek temples did to ancient music.
Grafonola music is worthy of this tribute.
You can put this modern Temple of Music with its inexhaustible repertoire in your own home for as little as $20.00.
You pay for it in convenient monthly amounts, whether you purchase the Grand at $[illegible] or a lower priced instrument.

WILSON SECURES HIS OWN WAY ON THE CURRENCY BILL

Republicans Seem to Have Blundered Again, Just as They Did in Tariff Bill Progress

Washington, Dec. 8.—The currency bill will pass the senate before congress adjourns for the Christmas holidays.

The bill, as finally decided upon by the Democratic senators, differs in a good many details from the Glass-Owen bill as it passed the house of representatives; it differs also in some respects from the draft bill reported by the majority of the banking and currency committee. It, however, retains intact the essential features of the administration's bill. The currency is to be national currency and the government, not the banks, will control its expansion and contraction. Regional banks are to be established with the national banks of the country as member banks and are to be under the supervision and control of the federal reserve board to be named by the president with the advice and consent of the senate. The decentralization of bank reserves, the at least partial divorce of the banks from Wall street and the loaning of the national credit through the banks to the business of the country, by rediscounting prime commercial paper and paper secured by first mortgage on farm lands, will be the cardinal purposes of the legislation.

The Republicans seem to have blundered with respect to the currency bill in much the same way as they blundered when the tariff bill was under consideration. When the Underwood bill came to the senate and was sent to committee, there was an [illegible] effort by many senators to [illegible] political differences and unite in perfecting the proposed legislation.

The Cold Storage Curse

Eggs at 70 cents a dozen in Montreal and the cold storage speculators of the big cities with millions for sale! If the men responsible for these deals in the necessaries of life do not overstep the mark and outrage public sentiment until criminal prosecutions follow, it will be surprising. Cold storage facilities, modern inventions which promised so much for humanity, is proving a curse when made the vehicle for such shameful speculation. The owners of cold storage plants are doing more by these outrageous methods toward forcing government interference than all the Socialists in the country.

U.S. CONGRESS WILL VOTE TO-DAY ON NAVAL HOLIDAY QUESTION

Washington Dec. 6.—An agreement to vote Monday at noon on the Hensley resolution to authorize President Wilson to co-operate with Great Britain to arrange a naval holiday, was made to-day in the house. Several speakers were heard in support of the resolution.

MEXICAN ARMY WILL NOW BE REINFORCED BY DRAWING LOTS

Every Town Forced to Send its Quota of Men—Rich and Poor Must Serve

Mexico City, Dec. 6.—Special envoys, representing the Constitutionalists are in the city to-day making earnest efforts to turn the populace against Huerta. While they are [illegible] their crusade and [illegible] to influence the people against the dictator, the government is so badly hampered that 2000 women were thrown out of employment when the clothing factories closed to-day for [illegible]. They manufactured clothing for the army.

[illegible] of government funds to pay [illegible] caused the shutting down of the factories.

New Army Bill.

Members of the Mexican congress, in view of the threatening attack on the capital, to-day prepared a bill providing for recruiting the army by drawing lots, with every town forced to send its quota of men. This plan will take in the high class and middle class residents, who up to this time have not been forced to do any army duties. Gen. Maass, former commander for the 29th infantry, has assumed the duties of military commander of the City of Mexico. With bands of rebels and brigands operating in the entire country surrounding the city, the rebels are now drawing closely to the federal district for the beginning of operations against the capital city.

[illegible] has fallen into the hands of the rebels. Fighting about Monterey is reported and the Town of Colima, estimated to be of much military importance, is now reported as taken.

MAY ADD FLOOR TO EAST WING OF PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS;

Space Would be Made Also for Good Roads, Medical and Workmen's Compensation Commissions

Toronto, Dec. 6.—One of the problems of immediate concern to the Ontario Government is the housing of the Hydro-Electric Commission. Already it has been before the cabinet on several occasions, but the time has passed when it can be longer put off with a legislative discussion. The congestion of business and the necessary addition to the office staff have made a move within the near future imperative.

It is now understood on good authority that the shift will be to Queen's Park, and not as was commonly rumored to a new building in the downtown region. To make a place in the building which are now apparently filled to a bursting point the proposal is to add another storey to the eastern wing. Such a consideration has already been before Hon. Dr. Reaume, minister of public works, and an announcement will be waited with unusual interest by several parties.

When the rapid increase of business in the commission first warned of a dangerous congestion, investigations were at once made to find a convenient site for a new building. At the same time it was suggested that the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway and the Ontario Railway Board, both of which organizations at the present time are [illegible] under certain space restrictions, would be glad to share in the new accommodation provided. With this in view the prices of land blocks in various city sections were taken. The terms asked were in the majority of cases exorbitant, so much so as to discourage the commission in their quest. The desire was to erect a building to the value of about $200,000.

THREE KILLED WHEN WATER MAIN BURST

Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 6.—One white and two negro laborers were drowned by the bursting of a 48-inch water main at the bottom of a trench 24 feet deep at Rockwood avenue crossing of the Pennsylvania Railway, near Eastern avenue, here to-day. The men were employed by a construction company, which is building the Rockwood viaduct, and were at work in the trench when the main [illegible] and water engulfed them.

BROKE INTO JAIL TO ATTACK PRISONER

Two Threw Acids Upon Him—Mounted Police in the Chase.

Kerrobert, Sask., Dec. 6.—Yesterday the local jail was broken into by two men and a prisoner named Pettit who was recently brought back from Toronto, was attacked, and a mixture of sulphuric acid and other corrosives thrown on him. He was left unconscious, but revived later and made his way to a Royal N.W.M. Police detachment. He is now in the hospital suffering from burns and concussion of the brain. The mounted police have taken up the chase.

Pettit has had his trial postponed. It is believed that some of the men implicated in the death of several horses at Loveland attacked Pettit, fearing disclosures against them.

LOOKING FOR WIFE IN TORONTO HOSPITALS

Northern Ontario Man on Desperate Search.

Toronto, Dec. 6.—Andrew Cynhalista, a Pole, came to Toronto from Cartier, Northern Ontario, on Saturday in search of his wife. He states that he left her in a hospital in Sudbury, Ont., last month, but that on Nov. 27 she disappeared from that institution. She had spoken of coming to Toronto for treatment at the big hospital here and on learning this, her husband, who had just returned from the bush, immediately left for this city to look for her.

Enquiry at the principal hospitals for the missing woman, who had but recently undergone an operation, failed to show any trace of her, and the anxious husband has placed the matter in the hands of the police.

SOUTH LANARK IS HAVING HOT FIGHT

Profane Language is Indulged in—Three Men in the Field.

Perth, Dec. 6.—Hot words passed between Dr. A. E. Hanna and Lieut.-Col. Balderson at the nomination meeting here this afternoon. Both men were named, one as the candidate of the straight line Conservative, the other as nominee of the Independent-Conservatives.

Dr. Hanna, the first speaker prodded the colonel into profane language by declaring that the colonel had seen an agreement that an Ottawa minister had framed up for a new convention.

"It's false," cried Col. Balderson, and he brought forth witnesses.

Arthur Hawkes, the first "Canada First" candidate, poked fun at the other two to the intense delight of the crowd.

Political feeling runs high in the town to-night and a warm campaign ending next Saturday in the polling for the South Lanark Dominion seat is certain.

DISEASED CONVICTS USED COMMON CUPS AT KINGSTON JAIL

Ex-Guard Patterson Gives His Evidence in the Penitentiary Enquiry

Kingston, Dec. 6.—The first witness at the Penitentiary enquiry today was Robert Patterson, annex guard, who was questioned as to the tubbing of convicts by C. R. Webster, acting for H. C. Stewart. Patterson told about convicts in the insane ward being put in the tub. He said the convicts were stripped and put under water.

Witness stated that no matter what kind of disease a convict was suffering from he drank out of the same cups as other convicts did.

Mr. Webster said there was a charge against the deputy warden of giving false evidence at the enquiry, and asked witness if he knew anything about it. Witness said "Yes" and stated that it had to do with the supply of gravel, but could give no date of the alleged offence.

Witness served as a guard for 11 years, and was dismissed in October, 1912, as "physically unfit," but had never had any serious illness during his term of service. "I was one of the most able men on the staff," said he. "Whenever there was a hard case to deal with in the isolation ward or the dungeon cell, I was always asked to help with the prisoner."

To Mr. Whiting he stated that he was away only ten days in a year, but Mr. Whiting read from the prison records to show that he had been away thirty-nine days suffering from influenza and bronchitis, and another record showed he had been away 15 days.

Witness claimed he had been dismissed because he gave evidence against the deputy warden with his regard to ensuring gravel, and added that he thought it would queer every man who had testified against the deputy.

He blames the Deputy and Dr. Phelan for his dismissal. When he was given his walking ticket he had told the surgeon that he was able to handle any convict in the penitentiary.

It was agreed that all evidence against O'Leary and Dr. Phelan must be in by next week. The prosecution had two months to range it up.

THE WEATHER.

To-day—Cloudy and unsettled; a little cooler.

FIFTY ARE DEAD IN TEXAS FLOOD

Crests of Brazos and Colorado Rivers Flood Hundred Miles.

Bryn, Texas, Dec. 7.—The known death list in to-day's floods were increased to more than 50 to-day. At least 25 of the victims were white persons.

Motorboats from Houston and Galveston got into the flooded Brazos River bottoms in South Central Texas, rapidly removing hundreds of exhausted and half frozen refugees from trees and house tops.

The crests of both the Brazos and the Colorado River floods swell the last hundred miles of the river's respective courses, doing fresh damage, but on a diminishing scale.

Mrs. Emily McDougal Reesor, Born in Muddy York Ninety Years Ago, is Dead

Toronto, Dec. 6.—Emily McDougal Reesor, widow of the late Senator Reesor, and one of the oldest residents of Toronto, passed away at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. A. Holmes, 68 South Drive, Rosedale, Saturday morning. Mrs. Reesor was 90 years old at the time of her death and had spent her whole life in and near Toronto. She was the daughter of the late Daniel McDougal and was born at Glen Grove, now part of Toronto, in 1823. The city at that time had a population of not more than 5000 people and the journey to Muddy York was a long and tedious one. The late Hon. William McDougal was a brother of Mrs. Reesor.

Mrs. Reesor was married in 1876 to David Reesor, and all of her children one son and three daughters survive her. William Reesor, her son now resides in Greybourne, Alberta, while her daughters are Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. H. E. Stinson, Gerrard street, Toronto; Mrs. Coburn, Walkerville, and Miss A. Reesor, Hamilton.

After her marriage Mrs. Reesor lived for several years in Markham and then moved to her late home in Rosedale, where she has resided ever since. She was one of the oldest residents of Rosedale, having moved there in 1876.

MYSTERIOUS ROOM OF A PARIS HOTEL

Every Occupant for Last Two Years Have Met Violent Deaths

Paris, Dec. 6.—One of the best known hotels in Paris has a haunted room—a chamber of death. About a year ago—perhaps you may remember—a man and a woman were found lying dead—each shot through the heart—side by side on the bed of a room in this hotel. For three months the death chamber remained closed. Then when the tragedy was beginning to be forgotten, the room was entirely renovated and once more figured in the hotel lists. An old gentleman engaged it one morning. That evening after leaving his room he made some mistake in entering the lift, and was crushed to death. Again the room was closed, this time for six months.

The servants hushed their voices, and hurried their footsteps as they passed it. About a month ago the room was again occupied—this time by a vigorous man in the prime of life. In the morning following his arrival at the hotel the waiter who brought up his coffee received no reply to his knock. Pale and trembling—for he knew the story of the room—he ran down to tell the manager. The door was forced. The occupant of the room was found dead in bed. He had succumbed during the night to an embolism. The room has now been walled up.

ROBBER STILL AT LARGE

Winnipeg, Dec. 7.—Although three days have elapsed since the Bank of Montreal at Pine Coulee was robbed and Manager Arnold killed, the desperadoes who perpetrated the crime have not yet been apprehended. The belief still exists that the men are hiding in Winnipeg or vicinity, and the search for Jack Krafchenko, wanted by the police is kept up. Officers of the morality department turned out at two o'clock this morning and searched the resorts in [illegible], but found nothing.

THE OTONABEE POWER COMPANY ASK FOR TEN YEARS' FRANCHISE

Local Company Appeal to the Council to be Allowed to Continue in Business

The following is a copy of a letter addressed to the Mayor and Council, which speaks for itself:

Peterborough, December 3rd, 1913.

To the Mayor and The Corporation of the City of Peterborough, Peterborough.

Dear Sirs:—The Otonabee Power Company, Limited, beg to apply to your Council for a renewal of their Franchise, which expires in January, 1914. We would like a renewal for a term of ten years, the same as the original franchise, and would be willing to take it on the same terms as set forth in the franchise or with such modifications as your Council and our Company may agree upon. We are serving a very considerable number of customers in the City of Peterborough with light on a flat rate basis and we find that there are a number of people in the city who desire to buy their electricity on this basis in preference to the meter system. We have, as you know, a very considerable indebtedness in the Power Plant and Distribution System and we do not presume you will refuse our request for renewal.

In addition to this I may say that our largest number of shareholders reside in Peterborough and the immediate vicinity, and that they are extremely anxious that this renewal should be obtained. We would ask you to call a special meeting of your council, to consider this matter, so that the by-law can be advertised and voted upon at the January elections.

Yours truly,

Otonabee Power Company, Ltd.,

Per William G. Ferguson,

President.

Mr. Ferguson, President of the Otonabee Power Company, Limited, was seen by the Times, and said that the Company's application is a most reasonable one, and the shareholders of his Company have good grounds to anticipate that their application will be favorably considered, owing to the fact that his Company did more to reduce the cost of lighting to the ordinary consumer and place electric light within his reach than any other influence that has ever been at work in the city, and also that his Company has always pursued the policy of selling its power and light on the flat rate basis, and without a meter. It costs a great deal of money to put in a meter and it costs a great deal of money to take the readings of the meter from month to month, and that of course adds to the cost that the consumer must pay for his light. Any person who has tried both the flat rate and the meter rate are only too glad to get back on to the flat rate.

VERMONT MARBLE CO IS NOW WORKING WITH A BIG STAFF

A great many of the citizens of Peterborough have followed the developments of the Vermont Marble company, since the day when it was known that they were trying to locate here. Some people were strongly in favor of them, and others were the reverse, thinking that their action was only a bluff. The vote for the By-law was taken on April 22 last, and the company were after that, assured that they had the support of the public, as the vote was carried with a large majority. The agreement with the city and the company was, that if the by-law carried they would spend a certain sum of money within a certain time, and they have more than carried out their agreement. The company sent representatives here to select a suitable location, and after looking around for sometime it was finally decided to locate on Maria street, at the south end of Mark street, where a plot which was deemed suitable in every respect was found. No sooner was the law carried, than work commenced, and it has been with a large, and unabated amount of interest that many of Peterborough's citizens have watched the factory erected in its several degrees.

The main building is of frame construction, measuring about 230 feet long by approximately 65 feet wide. It was erected upon a cement base, thus raising it from the ground for a distance of about 2 feet. The building is a one-storey structure but is raised to one and a half storeys at the extreme east end to allow the taller machinery that must needs be installed. This is by no means a graceful factory, such as the De Laval, which has just been completed at the south end of the city, but is one that is to all intents and purposes, built for work.

The Vermont Marble Co. at Proctor, Vt., U.S.A., is well known in many parts of the world and it is from this source that we have the present company, which has located in East City.

The facilities it has are some of the best. The C.P.R. have constructed a siding, from the main line to the factory and the river runs within a stones throw. The power is provided by the Peterborough Light and Power Co.

The company have been busily working at their plant since soon after the beginning of May and are still hard at work, but it is expected that all will be completed within the next month. The work of building the cement base was done by Mr. F. Mehood, the local contractor, and the work of erecting the building was done by the company's construction gang. Inside, there is a gang of men at work, who are going just as hard as they can go putting up shafting for the various types of machinery that will ultimately be used. A great deal of this is up, and is some of the most modern and scientific machinery that has been invented for the turning out of marble in its completed stage. Electricity is again showing its utility, as no other power is being used. By its aid, sawing, rubbing and finishing machines are run, and also an air compressor.

The plumbing for the factory was done by the local firm of R. G. McPherson, and an efficient heating system has also been installed.

Small cranes are erected at intervals throughout the shop to hoist the marble blocks.

Outside there have been installed [illegible] firm cement foundations [illegible] strong iron girders, upon which in the near future, a travelling crane capable of lifting a heavy load will run its course. A platform for unloading from the cars has also been built.

As the firm has at present not extraordinarily large premises, the offices are but of corresponding size to the other part of the building, but all that could be done for the comfort and convenience of the company has been done. Mr. T. N. Howard, of Syracuse, is the energetic manager of the local concern, and the company will doubtless progress with rapid strides under his judicial leadership.

The strength of the company in Proctor, Vt., is of such a character that it will stand for many years to come, and it behoves the citizens of Peterborough to uphold a firm that will spread renown, not only through our own province and country, but to many other parts of the world, where the Vermont Marble Company is known.

The number of men that will be employed at first, will be about 30, and this number will be increased as time goes on. The factory will for a time too be practically a school of scientific instruction, as it will be no easy task for the men to learn the work in a short time.

From what can be seen at present, the prospects for the company are most satisfactory, as a large number of orders have already been booked, and a large number more promised, and many men at work.

The company means a great deal to Peterborough in more than one respect. It will in no indirect way be responsible for the development of real estate and the company in going far beyond its premises has given the city a strong industrial establishment, that will go toward making Peterborough notorious as an industrial centre. Other cities in the province recognize that they are making rapid strikes, and the C.P.R. also holds the same opinion, and it is up to the citizens then to get the industrial concerns here, and to hold them.

He Didn't Like the Minister.

The young lawyer didn't like the minister, and so he thought to corner him. "Now, doctor," he asked, "suppose the parson and the devil should have a lawsuit, which party do you think would win?"

"The devil, unquestionably," replied the minister.

"Ah!" chuckled the young lawyer, "And will you tell us why?"

"Because he would have all the lawyers on his side."

DRESSING FOR WORK

The Housekeeper Should be Suitably Dressed in the Kitchen

The way in which a woman dresses for her work is, under normal conditions, a pretty accurate test of her attitude toward that work. To go disheveled, in shapeless, ugly garments indicates that the work is a hardship to be got through somehow—anyhow, and the woman feels that she is much put upon in being obliged to perform such menial tasks. In the business world it is a well-established principle that the suitably-dressed girl is the efficient worker. Now suitable dress for the office and the kitchen vary only in degree. Both must be the acme of neatness and cleanliness and the result is much easier of attainment in the home, where washable materials are essential. A plain, wash dress, neatly made and well fitted, a generous apron cut on good lines and of a color not to be called dingy, and a becoming mob cap—most women look their best in such a costume. One must wear a cap while sweeping to protect the hair and it is a necessity while baking so why not make it part of one's costume? Boots are not as noticeable as caps but quite as important. I say "boots" advisedly—not low shoes, nor pumps nor down-at-heel slippers. Consider the nurse. Her work is in some respects similar to that of the housewife, in that both are directly concerned with the welfare and health of humanity; both give much time to routine work, both spend much time on their feet and both should have equally comfortable footwear. A perfectly fitted boot with low heels of rubber is considered absolutely necessary for the professional nurse and surely the comfort of the housekeeper is of equal importance.

AVIATOR CHEVILLARD

He is the first flyer to purposely turn a "cartwheel" in the air and the picture gives some idea of the position of his machine when doing it. This flight took place at Hendon Field, near London. First he goes up about 500 feet, then starts flying in a circle till the tilt of the wings of his machine is almost perpendicular. Then comes a sickening "flop," the biplane seems to turn end for end as it drops about 300 feet. Chevillard says it is easy, but there are no volunteers to try it with him.

Owners to Honor Memory of Child Who Found First Nugget

It is just 100 years ago that a girl of 14, Katie Bogdanoff, while playing on the banks of the River Melbowka, found a glittering stone, which afterwards was found to be a solid gold nugget. Katie, whose chance find led to the discovery of extensive gold deposits in the Ural Mountains, had her nugget roughly snatched away from her, and received as a reward twenty-five strokes of the birch, administered by order of a foreman of the then existing Demidoff iron works.

This man, in his ignorance, feared that the Russian Government, to whom belongs by law all precious metal found in the soil, would on hearing of the find put him out of employment and begin only gold mining in the region. The news of the nugget [illegible], however, not be entirely suppressed in this way, although the first gold [illegible] [illegible] until [illegible] years later.

Now the Ural gold mines produce more than fifty tons of gold every year. The mine owners have now decided, by way of tardy recognition, to erect a statue of little Katie on the spot where she found the first nugget.

Court life in Roumania is perhaps the dullest in Europe, although this is hard to believe of a court over which "Carmen Sylvia," the brilliant novelist and woman of letters, presides.

That the old friends of Queen Elizabeth seldom ask for an audience now is said to be due to the fact that the queen is surrounded by three old women who prefer to sit and knit and cannot understand why one should want to talk about books and art. So, when the court is at Sinaia and the old ladies have gone to Wiesbaden for their annual cure, the old friends of the queen come back. But in Bucharest the queen sees none of them. Even when they ask for an audience she does not know of it, because her maids of honor refuse on the ground that her majesty is very tired.

The queen is a splendid needlewoman herself and makes many beautiful things for her invalid niece Princess Elizabeth of Wied, who is so delicate that she lies literally wrapped up in cotton wool.

Famous Agitation Recalled

A famous incident of the long conflict between Berwick fishermen and Tweed bailiffs is recalled by the death of Mr. William Patterson, Berwick who was one of two men who were wounded by a shot fired from a Government gunboat. Deceased was one of the crew of a fishing boat which, on ignoring the gunboat's order to lie to was fired at, and Patterson was wounded.

A COLLEGE ON WHEELS

The C. P. R. Better Farming Special, which was run recently through the Maritime Provinces, the Province of Quebec and the Province of Ontario, in conjunction with the Board of Agriculture, proved a gigantic success, and very beneficial results were derived by the farmers in the extensive district through which it passed, and the Canadian Pacific have received many letters of congratulation in respect to the trip made by the train. The Better Farming Special was inaugurated a year or two ago and has since been made an annual affair owing to the agricultural experts being able to reach the farming element in a way such as has never been done before. The College on wheels was visited by many thousands of people, including many of the gentler sex who were considerably interested in the poultry lectures and the demonstrations which were given by the experts who accompanied the train. Although the actual figures are not forthcoming as to how many visited the special throughout the whole of the Provinces, an official statement from the Department of Agriculture at Quebec states that on its way east the train visited thirty-nine places and no less than 10,800 farmers examined the exhibits on board and listened attentively to the lectures, besides asking a great many questions. The Hon. James S. Duff, Minister of Agriculture in the Province of Ontario, in expressing his opinion of the Canadian Pacific Railway's Better Farming Special, says: "The people of Ontario are anxious to see a new representation of any question, and they seem to appreciate this particular one. The train is not only interesting from a standpoint of instruction but doubly so because of the effectiveness from the standpoint of demonstration.

Mr. J. B. Daggett, secretary of agriculture in New Brunswick, states: "There is a great demand in our province that a similar educational campaign be carried on in parts other than where the lines of the C. P. R. operate."

Dr. D. V. Landry, agricultural commissioner for New Brunswick, says: "If we can form any opinion of the value of the system of running the mixed farming specials by the large crowds that visited the train and the enthusiasm manifested it has been a very great success in the province".

Mr. J. D. Caron, of the Department of Agriculture of the Province of Quebec, says that: "Such an organization as the mixed farming specials continues to the increase of the agricultural production of the province in causing the best methods of tilling the soil to become known, and it contributes to the improvement and development of our chief agricultural industries."

Successful in Nearly Every Case.

That miserable nervousness and half-sick tired-all-the-time condition in due nine cases in ten to a clogged-up system. You grow irritable and despondent, you lack ambition, energy seems all gone. Surest road to health is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they will make you feel like new all over in a short time.

Writing from his home in Barcelona, Mr. Frederick G. Meyer states: "I think no one ever suffered as severely as I did for nearly six months. So many serious symptoms were developing as a consequence of this evil condition of my system that I realized I must find a remedy. The strong pills of various kinds I tried seemed after their first effects were over to make me far worse and I did not know which way to turn for relief. I saw Dr. Hamilton's Pills advertised, and the first box used satisfied me. I found a true remedy. Instead of griping with undue activity, Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted as naturally as if physic had not been taken. I never had to increase the dose and indeed, within a month I reduced it, and when the system finally acted of its own accord as a result of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, I took a dose twice a week only just to make sure the old condition would not come back."

No other remedy cures constipation and biliousness so easily or safely as Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they are an ideal family remedy for all diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels. Sold in 25c boxes, five for $1.00, all druggists and storekeepers or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

WINTER CARNIVAL

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your valued paper yesterday that Lindsay is going to hold a winter Carnival on Feb. 19th and 20th. You ask very pertinently "Why should not Peterborough do the same?" I quite agree with you, Mr. Editor, that this city might change its present system of only sending money out of the city. As you say, why should not Peterborough get up some semi-civic attraction that will not only save the home dollars but bring in dollars from outside?

A Silk Gown Impression by Artist Randall

Rather exaggerated perhaps, but artists must be allowed a little latitude in the expression of their ideas.

Beware of Gaudy Raiment

Even when bright combinations or vivid colors are in fashion it is well to be careful of them. For they will look hopelessly out of fashion the next season if there is then a rage for soft, dull hues. There was once a young bride, who was married in an era when bright color combinations were the rule, who filled her trousseau with gowns made of vividly contrasting colors. But the next season ushered in an era of soft, harmonizing tones. Grey was much worn. Dull mauve and violet in subdued tones were worn. The little bride, who had started out with a wardrobe much too large for her simple social life, found her hands filled with gay raiment that looked gaudy and unfashionable. She was forced to go about in a vivid blue suit with a waist of cerise and blue, or else one of yellow and green. And all her clothes looked wrong. So be careful of the vivid contrasts of colors, or you may find yourself in the poor bride's predicament.

The Little Word "Nee"

"The word "nee," pronounced with the accent "nay," which is frequently used in announcing a postnuptial or wedding reception, is French, and, translated, means "born Smith" (or whatever the surname may be), the Christian name being unnecessary. It answers to the German "geboren," which is used in the same way.

SHOES OF THE PAST

The early shoe seems to have been a sandal. In the Roman, Egyptian, and Greek days men wore sandals of hide or leather or wood.

When we read of shoes in the Bible we know that sandals were meant. In Egypt they made sandals woven from palm leaves and papyrus. It was the fashion for a conquering Egyptian to have painted on the soles of his shoes the figures and faces of his conquered enemies.

In early times the sandal took on many forms. In Greece the sock was used for comedy and the buskin for tragedy. The buskin reached to the knee, something like a Wellington boot. The sock reached only to the ankle and was worn whenever quick movement was desired.

It was in Rome first that the sandal began to take shape like our modern shoe. There are in Eastern Europe many people whose civilization is derived from Rome, who still cling to the un-reformed sandal. But in the days when Rome was in her glory shoes were far from a simple affair. For instance, the shoe gear of the patricians was decorated with golden clasps and elaborately embroidered.

The sandals of Egyptians had wooden soles. And the French peasant of the present generation derives his sabots from that source. Emperors wore purple buskins, and red was even permitted the nobility, but the common people were forced to content themselves with the plain sober colors.

In the early years in England extraordinary developments took place in the shoe line. The Plantagenets had the toes of their shoes turned up like horns or drawn out to a long length and pulled up to the knee. These were brilliantly bedecked with jewels and precious stones. Rosettes and ribbons were also attached.

All nations recognize that footgear is the most important part of an army's equipment. It has been claimed that the sturdy sandals of the Teutonic tribes enabled them to overrun Europe to the walls of Rome, and that if it had not been for the stability of their shoe apparel they would never have been successful in conquering the Romans.

The fielders are permitted to either throw or swim with the ball while attempting to catch a "runner."

THE AGE OF BEAUTY

Portrait Painter Places the Time Anywhere Fifteen to Fifty

"At what age is a woman most beautiful?" was the subject of a somewhat spirited discussion in Parisian art circles. M. Ferdinand Humbert, the head of the School of Fine Arts, owned to two ideals. As an artist his favorite feminine type was between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five—the time of "radiant youth." As a mere man, he considered that women of from twenty-five to thirty-five years old are the most fascinating and charming.

The veteran painter, Harpignies, was not so generous, for he set the time of beauty at from sixteen to twenty years—the age of youthful simplicity unmarred by the cares and anxieties which years bring in their train. M. Gabriel Ferrier, on the other hand, accorded to beauty a lengthy reign. He considered the woman of to-day is beautiful from the age of twenty-five to fifty, for she has become mistress of the art of how to make the best of herself with the help of skilled dressmakers and modistes.

M. Bartholome, the famous sculptor of the beautiful Parthenon statues, set the time of beauty at between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five, but with the reservation that there is no true beauty without goodness and that beauty of face and form, without beauty of soul, had no appeal to him.

Jean Boucher, another famous sculptor, said that woman is at her best between the ages of sixteen and thirty, though from youth to old age she is adorable! What would appear to be the most comforting opinion of all, however, from the point of view of the fair sex, is that expressed by the famous portrait painter, Francois Flameng. "A woman's greatest beauty may dawn at any time between the ages of fifteen and fifty," he said. "Let every man form his own opinion according to individual taste, as to which of these years a woman is at her best."

A NINE-FOOT REACH.

Daubert Can Corner in Anything That Comes Near Him

In Jake Daubert the Brooklyn team has the greatest little animated telescope in baseball.

Six feet one inch in height, he can and does, reach out and get many a wild toss, and still manage to keep his foot on the bag, to the general discomfiture of the batsmen trying to get on the initial corner. It takes a very wild heave to draw Daubert from the bag.

It is figured that Jake can get a throw nine feet from the bag when the ball comes to the right, stretching his full length, and still hooking the sack with his toe.

Having to reach across his body with his gloved hand when a ball is thrown to the left side of the bag, he naturally loses some distance in catching these throws, but he can get those that come within eight feet and two or three inches. Of course, if the worst comes to the worst, he shoves out his left hand, and, although bare, takes a throw with it in this way getting the benefit of a nine-foot reach.

When reaching into the diamond for a low heave Daubert has another telescopic trick. Of course, he does not have to stretch quite so far to get a low one, for he can judge his ball and take it on the bound if there is time to wait for it.

Going after a high one is his specialty. Naturally, when the ball is thrown some feet over his head he cannot keep his foot on the bag and get it, but he goes up like an aviator after an altitude record, and the ball has to be ten feet above the ground to get by him safely.

Some admirers think that he goes a bit higher than this, but a two-foot leap straight up with the body extended is a good leap when it is remembered that the athlete has to take it from a standing start and has not time to prepare for the spring.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

When the late M. Henri Poincaré, the mathematician and a cousin of the President of France, was admitted into the French Academy, an amusing controversy arose over the derivation of the name.

M. Frédéric Masson, the historical writer, suggested that the name ought to be "Pointcarré," not Poincaré, since the mere notion of a "square point" (point carré) was intolerable to the geometrical intellect.

The philologists took the matter seriously, and after much research found duly recorded in the year 1408 the name of a student of the university called "Petrus Pugniquadrati" (Peter of the clenched fist), and in the registers of 1418 the name of "Johan Poinquarré"—who lived to be secretary to the notorious Queen Isabeau, the wife of Charles VI., and the mother-in-law of Henry V. of England.

Thus was the origin of the President's name elucidated.

PRINCE HUMBERT

heir to the throne of Italy. He is also called the Prince of Piedmont. Although only seven years old he has already commenced his military training.

EUROPE'S TINIEST STATE

Moresnet Only as Big as a Good Sized Farm

When the Ambassadors of Europe agreed that the peninsula of Athos, in Macedonia, should be regarded as an independent State, many people thought that they had at last discovered the smallest state in the whole world.

Athos, however, has an area of 180 square miles, roughly. It is a huge country compared with Moresnet, a tiny neutral state on the borders of Belgium and Prussia. Its area is reckoned in acres, not square miles! Its size, in fact, is 1,400 acres—just a good sized farm!

Moresnet was made a separate state in 1815, after Napoleon had been finally crushed at Waterloo. The reason that the little country has remained independent is rather curious.

As has been said, the tiny state is on the borders of Germany and Belgium. It possesses what was once the most important and valuable zinc mine in the whole world. Belgium wanted that zinc, and so did Germany. As they couldn't agree on the amount of compensation to the other, Moresnet remained independent.

The tiniest country in the world lies four miles away from Aix-la-Chapelle, and possesses one village. There's not room for two! The total number of inhabitants is under 3,000. Recently Germany began negotiations with Belgium to acquire her tiny neighbor, though the Moresnetians say they prefer to be under Belgian rule, if they can't be independent.

About Borax

To make a "saturated solution" put plenty of powdered borax into a bottle or tumbler, and pour pure water on it until the vessel is filled; then add more borax until the water will take no more, and there is a sediment in the bottom of the vessel.

Use borax in preference to ammonia for softening water for toilet purposes. A teaspoonful to a basin of water is the right proportion.

After washing them in the usual way, dip your lace and muslin curtains in a rinse of a hot solution of borax, made by adding borax to boiling water—proportions one tablespoonful to every quart of boiling water. This will whiten them.

To prevent starch from sticking when ironing is done, use a tablespoonful of powdered borax to each pint of boiling starch, stirring well until it is dissolved and thoroughly mixed.

To keep baby's milk bottles clean and sanitary, wash them, fill them with cold water in which a teaspoonful of borax has been dissolved and let them stand for an hour or until needed, rinsing them with clear water before using.

INDIAN CENSUS

Tribesmen Thought it Foreshadowed War and Rejoiced Greatly

A report containing the statistics for Baluchistan, obtained when the last census of India was made, contains some humorous passages, notwithstanding the long delay that was experienced in getting it into print. The sending forth of his servants by the mighty King-Emperor to reckon his subjects, even to the meanest, was as may be imagined, the subject of much discussion among the tribesmen. Many were the amusing explanations offered by the natives.

To the frontier tribesman, everything connected with the census pointed to war, and the preparation for war. So far from this having any disturbing influence, it found a sympathetic echo in their warlike hearts, and left them with the comfortable feeling of having discovered what the extraordinary trouble was about. The one thing they were unable to square with this rooted idea was the fantastic counting of the womenfolk.

Though nothing could shake the general conviction that the primary object of enumerating the blind, the deaf, the leper, and the insane was to weed wastrels from the fighting strength of the tribe, it was gravely argued by some that the benign Government was contemplating a form of old age pension for these unfortunates. The tribesmen were at first exercised by the nature of the inquiries. But they soon fell into the spirit of the thing. "I should like you to put down my poor old sheep dog," said one waggish Pathan. "It's a great pity," quoth a hoary-headed Brahui lady, "that you're leaving out our cooking-pots; you would otherwise have numbered everything there is to number among us."

The fisherfolk of Sonmiani went one further, and gravely presented the enumerators at the close of the check of their village with a list based on their catches for the season, in which not only the numbers but the names of the fishy tribes on the Bela coast were faithfully recorded. All told, 834,703 souls were enumerated, and, apart from journeys by rail and sea, the three chief organizers covered 6,041 miles of the road between them.

To preserve eggs "new laid" rub them slightly over with good butter and put in a jar of salt. Care should be taken that the salt covers them all. Cover the jar so that the air cannot get into it. Eggs preserved in this way can be boiled, and are quite fresh after being preserved for two years.

SHOES OF THE PAST

The early shoe seems to have been a sandal. In the Roman, Egyptian, and Greek days men wore sandals of hide or leather or wood.

When we read of shoes in the Bible we know that sandals were meant. In Egypt they made sandals woven from palm leaves and papyrus. It was the fashion for a conquering Egyptian to have painted on the soles of his shoes the figures and faces of his conquered enemies.

In early times the sandal took on many forms. In Greece the sock was used for comedy and the buskin for tragedy. The buskin reached to the knee, something like a Wellington boot. The sock reached only to the ankle and was worn whenever quick movement was desired.

It was in Rome first that the sandal began to take shape like our modern shoe. There are in Eastern Europe many people whose civilization is derived from Rome, who still cling to the un-reformed sandal. But in the days when Rome was in her glory shoes were far from a simple affair. For instance, the shoe gear of the patricians was decorated with golden clasps and elaborately embroidered.

The sandals of Egyptians had wooden soles. And the French peasant of the present generation derives his sabots from that source. Emperors wore purple buskins, and red was even permitted the nobility, but the common people were forced to content themselves with the plain sober colors.

In the early years in England extraordinary developments took place in the shoe line. The Plantagenets had the toes of their shoes turned up like horns or drawn out to a long length and pulled up to the knee. These were brilliantly bedecked with jewels and precious stones. Rosettes and ribbons were also attached.

All nations recognize that footgear is the most important part of an army's equipment. It has been claimed that the sturdy sandals of the Teutonic tribes enabled them to cross Europe to the walls of Rome, and that if it had not been for the stability of their shoe apparel they would never have been successful in conquering the Romans.

Water Baseball

Water baseball is a new game [illegible] by E. G. [illegible], president of the American Life Saving Society. The rules are very similar to those governing regular baseball. The battery and basemen are perched on floating islands, while the basemen and fielders support themselves by clinging to cork floats. The fielders are permitted to either throw or swim with the ball while attempting to catch a "runner."

THE AGE OF BEAUTY

Portrait Painter Places the Time Anywhere Fifteen to Fifty

"At what age is a woman most beautiful?" was the subject of a somewhat spirited discussion in Parisian art circles. M. Ferdinand Humbert, the head of the School of Fine Arts, owned to two ideals. As an artist his favorite feminine type was between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five—the time of "radiant youth." As a mere man, he considered that women of from twenty-five to thirty-five years old are the most fascinating and charming.

The veteran painter, Harpignies, was not so generous, for he set the time of beauty at from sixteen to twenty years—the age of youthful simplicity unmarred by the cares and anxieties which years bring in their train. M. Gabriel Ferrier, on the other hand, accorded to beauty a lengthy reign. He considered the woman of to-day is beautiful from the age of twenty-five to fifty, for she has become mistress of the art of how to make the best of herself with the help of skilled dressmakers and modistes.

M. Bartholome, the famous sculptor of the beautiful Parthenon statues, set the time of beauty at between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five, but with the reservation that there is no true beauty without goodness and that beauty of face and form, without beauty of soul, had no appeal to him.

Jean Boucher, another famous sculptor, said that woman is at her best between the ages of sixteen and thirty, though from youth to old age she is adorable! What would appear to be the most comforting opinion of all, however, from the point of view of the fair sex, is that expressed by the famous portrait painter, Francois Flameng. "A woman's greatest beauty may dawn at any time between the ages of fifteen and fifty," he said. "Let every man form his own opinion according to individual taste, as to which of these years a woman is at her best."

A NINE-FOOT REACH

Daubert Can Corner in Anything That Comes Near Him

In Jake Daubert the Brooklyn team has the greatest little animated telescope in baseball.

Six feet one inch in height, he can and does, reach out and get many a wild toss, and still manage to keep his foot on the bag, to the general discomfiture of the batsman trying to get on the initial corner. It takes a very wild heave to draw Daubert from the bag.

It is figured that Jake can get a throw nine feet from the bag when the ball comes to the right, stretching his full length, and still hooking the station with his toe.

Having to reach across his body with his gloved hand when a ball is thrown to the left side of the bag, he naturally loses some distance in catching these throws, but he can get those that come within eight feet and two or three inches. Of course, if the worst comes to the worst, he shoves out his left hand, and, although bare, takes a throw with it in this way getting the benefit of a nine-foot reach.

When reaching into the diamond for a low heave Daubert has another telescopic trick. Of course, he does not have to stretch quite so far to get a low one, for he can judge his [illegible] and take it on the bound if there is time to wait for it.

Going after a high one is his specialty. Naturally, when the ball is thrown some feet over his head he cannot keep his foot on the bag and get it, but he goes up like an aviator after an altitude record, and the ball has to be ten feet above the ground to get by him safely.

Some admirers think that he goes a bit higher than this, but a two-foot leap straight up with the body extended is a good leap when it is remembered that the athlete has to take it from a standing start and has not time to prepare for the spring.

WHAT'S IN A NAME

When the late M. Henri Poincaré, the mathematician and a cousin of the President of France, was admitted into the French Academy, an amusing controversy arose over the derivation of the name.

M. Frédéric Masson, the historical writer, suggested that the name ought to be "Pointcarré," not "Poincaré," since the mere notion of a "square point" (point carré) was intolerable to the geometrical intellect.

The philologists took the matter seriously, and after much research found duly recorded in the year 1400 the name of a student of the university called "Petrus Pugniquadrati" (Peter of the clenched fist), and in the registers of 1418 the name of "Jehan Poingquarré"—who lived to be secretary to the notorious Queen Isabeau, the wife of Charles VI., and the mother-in-law of Henry V. of England.

Thus was the origin of the President's name elucidated.

PRINCE HUMBERT,
heir to the throne of Italy. He is also called the Prince of Piedmont. Although only seven years old he has already commenced his military training.

EUROPE'S TINIEST STATE

Moresnet Only as Big as a Good Sized Farm

When the Ambassadors of Europe agreed that the peninsula of Athos, in Macedonia, should be regarded as an independent State, many people thought that they had at last discovered the smallest state in the whole world.

Athos, however, has an area of 180 square miles, roughly. It is a huge country compared with Moresnet, a tiny neutral state on the borders of Belgium and Prussia. Its area is reckoned in acres, not square miles! Its size, in fact, is 1,400 acres—just a good sized farm!

Moresnet was made a separate state in 1815, after Napoleon had been finally crushed at Waterloo. The reason that the little country has remained independent is rather curious.

As has been said, the tiny state is on the borders of Germany and Belgium. It possesses what was once the most important and valuable zinc mine in the whole world. Belgium wanted that zinc, and so did Germany. As they couldn't agree on the amount of compensation to the other, Moresnet remained independent.

The tiniest country in the world lies four miles away from Aix-la-Chapelle, and possesses one village. There's not room for two! The total number of inhabitants is under 3,000. Recently Germany began negotiations with Belgium to acquire her tiny neighbor, though the Moresnetians say they prefer to be under Belgian rule, if they can't be independent.

About Borax

To make a "saturated solution" put plenty of powdered borax into a bottle or tumbler, and pour pure water on it until the vessel is filled; then add more borax until the water will take no more, and there is a sediment in the bottom of the vessel.

Use borax in preference to ammonia for softening water for toilet purposes. A teaspoonful to a basin of water is the right proportion.

After washing them in the usual way, dip your lace and muslin articles in a [illegible] of a hot solution of borax, [illegible] by adding borax to boiling water—proportions one tablespoonful to every quart of boiling water. This will stiffen them.

To prevent starch from sticking when ironing is done, use a tablespoonful of [illegible] borax to each pint of boiling starch, stirring well until it is dissolved and thoroughly mixed.

[illegible] baby's milk bottles sweet and sanitary, wash them [illegible] daily. Rinse in water to which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved and let them stand for an hour, or until wanted, rinsing them with clear water before using.

INDIAN CENSUS

Tribesmen Thought it Foreshadowed War and Rejoiced Greatly

A report containing the statistics for Baluchistan, obtained when the last census of India was made, contains some humorous passages, notwithstanding the long delay that was experienced in getting it into print. The sending forth of his servants by the mighty King-Emperor to reckon his subjects, even to the meanest, was as may be imagined, the subject of much discussion among the tribesmen. Many were the amusing explanations offered by the natives.

To the frontier tribesmen everything connected with the census pointed to war, and the preparation for war. So far from this having any disturbing influence, it found a sympathetic echo in their warlike hearts, and left them with the comfortable feeling of having discovered what the extraordinary trouble was about. The one thing they were unable to square with this rooted idea was the fantastic counting of the womenfolk.

Though nothing could shake the general conviction that the primary object of enumerating the blind, the deaf, the leper, and the insane was to weed unstrels from the fighting strength of the tribe, it was gravely argued by some that the benign Government was contemplating a form of old age pension for these unfortunates. The tribesmen were at first concerned by the nature of the inquiries. But they soon fell into the spirit of the thing. "I should like you to put down my poor old sheep dog," said one waggish Pathan. "It's a great pity," quoth a hoary-headed Brahui lady, "that you're leaving out our cooking-pots; you would otherwise have numbered everything there is to number among us."

The fisherfolk of Sonmiani went one further, and gravely presented the enumerators at the close of the check of their village with a list based on their catches for the season, in which not only the numbers but the names of the fishy tribes on the Baluchistan coast were faithfully recorded. All told, 834,703 souls were enumerated, and, apart from journeys by rail and sea, the three chief organizers covered 6,041 miles of the road between them.

To Preserve Eggs

To preserve eggs "new laid" rub them slightly over with good butter and put in a jar of salt. Care should be taken that the salt covers them all. Cover the jar so that the air cannot get into it. Eggs preserved in this way can be boiled, and are quite fresh after being preserved for two years.

AN ATTRACTIVE KITCHEN

The Room Where the Housewife Works Should be Made Pleasant

Has it ever occurred to you that for the same amount of money an attractive rather than an unattractive kitchen can be made? This part of the house, where the housemother spends much of her time, receives little consideration along convenient or attractive lines. Why not have it pretty? There are so many ways it can be done.

The walls of the kitchen can be painted with a yellow or Delft blue. They can be finished in wash paint that is sanitary and requires very little effort to keep clean. The wood work can be white or it may be a darker shade of yellow, both of which take very little time to clean. The shelves may be covered with white enamel, or oilcloth, neatly put on with brass-headed nails. If the closet space is limited, the saucepans may hang from brass hooks on the walls, ranging from the smallest to the largest sizes. A series of brass hooks is placed over the sink like those at the sides of the shelves, and on these are hung different sizes of enamel spoons, dippers and measures. The dishpan and drainer are kept out of sight in the sink closet.

If the kitchen is finished in blue, which is very effective, a yellow or white crash with a broad blue border may be placed on the door leading to the pantry. Dutch curtains of the blue and white crash on brass rods are placed at the windows. The kitchen table, when not in use, also has a blue and white crash cloth.

Underneath one of the windows two pine shelves may be placed and painted to match the rest of the room. They hold the cook books which are covered with removable covers of the blue and white crash.

Window boxes can be fitted for the kitchen windows, one to hold parsley, which is most luxuriant, another to contain sweet alyssum, which blooms late in the spring, and at a third window a plain board shelf may be placed where a sewing basket, book or magazine may be laid. A large rocking chair, standing at this window, affords a restful place for odd minutes, especially on busy days.—Mother's Magazine.

Fall of a Meteorite

A meteorite weighing 87 pounds is the subject of discussion in chemical circles in Johannesburg. The stone fell in Zululand a few months ago, and was not only noticed by an eye-witness some 15 miles away, but fell within a few feet of a native woman, who gave information which led to its discovery. The meteorite cannot be broken. It is known, however, to contain platinum.

SCIENTISTS HOPE TO HARNESS THE MOON

Power Now Wasted Could be Put to Work Generating Electrical Energy

There is really no reason why the inhabitants of the earth should do any work at all. The moon would do all the jobs which mankind demands—if we could only harness her. Scientists are already engaged on the solution of this problem. Day after day and night after night uncountable units of power are wasted because the brain of man has not yet devised a scheme for utilizing the terrific motive activity of the moon's "pull" on the tides. Incredible quantities of sea-water are piled up and withdrawn twice every lunar day (a lunar day is about twenty-four hours and fifty minutes), and if the lift and fall of this water could be caught and transformed into energy, all the mills in the world could be driven without our burning an ounce of coal, all the electric light could be produced, all the railroads run, all the trolleys, all the subways, all the electric automobiles, all the factories, housewives' sewing-machines, and other things of the sort, could be operated with nothing but a little attention from mechanics.

Plans have been mooted for the utilization of the tides in England. The idea is to build enormous docks or basins off the Bristol Channel, where the sea is compressed into narrow confines and the tides are consequently high. The tide would flow up into these basins twice a day—billions of tons of water—but it could only escape through tunnels containing turbines similar to those at Niagara. There is no reason why, in time, the tide at the mouth of the Bristol Channel should not then work the street [illegible] of London.

Technical difficulties still stand in the way, but Mr. William [illegible], an inventor, built a model machine to prove that these are surmountable. In his model, paddles give to the water in a tank a movement imitating, exactly, that of the ocean's tides, the water passing through a series of receptacles and round a horizontal water-wheel. In Italy another inventor, Captain Pirandello, is working on similar lines, but his machine is designed to utilize and store up only the power of the waves and not that of the tide. The motive power is supplied by a body which rests on the surface of the water, and, as that surface undulates, the body works machinery which creates electricity.

Many Unfortunates Really Clever at Making Articles From Very Inferior Materials

Many inmates of British workhouses are clever, ingenious, brainy people, who through no fault of their own are down on their luck, homeless and friendless. Many of these are old, infirm, crippled, blind, deaf, or afflicted in some way or other. But where there's a will there's a way, and the ingenious man will generally find scope for his ingenuity, even in a workhouse. A man in West Bromwich Workhouse makes dainty hatpin stands, etc., from bones. His only tool is a penknife; his other accessories are sand paper, glue, and scraps of velvet. The bones are washed perfectly clean, and after being cut the requisite size and shape they are rubbed and polished till they become as smooth and bright as ivory.

At Wolverhampton Workhouse a helpless cripple—except with his hands—made a beautiful bed-spread. It was composed of small squares of linen. The man designed the pattern for each square, no two alike, and then embroidered them with blue thread. The finished article was valued at $25.

Three inmates of Chester Workhouse, one an imbecile, completed a handsome pulpit for the workhouse church. It is worth $400, although the cost of material was an insignificant sum.

A pauper at Rochford Workhouse carved a splendid baptismal font from a solid block of Bath stone.

Kensington Workhouse contains a number of oil paintings which were executed by one of the inmates. Among them is an excellent copy of Rubens's "Descent from the Cross"; also portraits of the Royal Family.

An [illegible] of the Scottish Academy was for some time an inmate of [illegible] Workhouse. While there he painted several landscapes [illegible] now brighten the walls of the workhouse hospital.

The Walsall Guardians had a most [illegible] inmate until he turned his attention to wood carving. Among other things he made an exquisitely carved and polished oak [illegible]. Another [illegible] in the same workhouse made a salt-cellar from a [illegible] and a piece of [illegible] glass, and [illegible] out of a [illegible] bottle and [illegible].

Many clever [illegible] find their way to the workhouse. [illegible]

In Chelsea Workhouse [illegible] used to be a [illegible] [illegible] "The Searchlight." It was in the form of four closely written pages of foolscap.

Ernest Stockdale, a blind inmate of Windsor Workhouse, was paid $15 by a London publisher for ten hymns he had written.

An inmate of Newington Workhouse certainly had an eye for business. After residing there six years he succeeded in accumulating $45, being made up of pennies which he earned by writing letters for other inmates, the charge being one penny a letter.

Quite recently a clever sculptor was discovered in the Southwark Workhouse. He made a five foot lectern for use in the workhouse chapel. Although made of rough yellow deal full of knots and cracks it is a splendid piece of work. It is surmounted by an eagle with outstretched pinions. The bird revolves upon a carved pedestal. The panels of the pedestal are works of art in themselves. One depicts an angel raising a child from the ground, another an angel pointing heavenward. The same man also fashioned quite a number of small animals which he colored and stained in close imitation of the natural objects, and he is very clever with crayons, for he drew a peacock on one of the walls, every feather of which is beautifully colored with surprising naturalness.

Scotchman Got Site of New Capital For His Two Boats

The district in which the new Australian Capital City is being built is throughout associated with an Argyllshire family named Campbell. Robert Campbell was a Calcutta merchant, who went to Australia in 1798 to make enquiries with regard to a ship which had been lost in the Bass Straits, and apparently was so pleased with Sydney that he remained in that city. He became known as "Merchant" Campbell. In the early years of last century Sydney suffered from a severe drought, and the Governor desired to send ships to India for food supplies. The only two vessels in Port Jackson suitable for such a purpose were two which Mr. Robert Campbell had in the harbor loaded with sealskins. The authorities commandeered these ships, and sent them away for grain, the only compensation which Mr. Campbell received being two blocks of land, 5,000 and 4,000 acres respectively, and 1,000 ewes. The land which he selected is now part of the site of the Federal capital.

New Treatment Now Advocated for Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures.

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapor that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods act, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has win its way and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

EAST CITY NOTES

Mr. S. J. McCauley is starting well with his new barber's shop, opened two and a half weeks ago. Mr. McCauley was in business previously at 383 George St. Before that he was in the employ of Mr. Haskell and Mr. Irwin, of this city. He does good work and should be well patronized.

The boys who will soon be sleighing down the hills, ought to feel that they and their predecessors have been making history. The speeches at the opening of King George's School seemed to give the boys the credit for furnishing a convincing reply to the contention of a certain petition against the choice of site. "The boys climb the hill often enough in sleighing time" was the apt reply that turned the scale. To Mr. Courtney and other speakers indicated, if that be true the boys have laid East City under an eternal debt of gratitude.

The Times' circulation in East City is growing rapidly, and everybody has a good word to say of the paper. Ten beautiful works of art given away with each subscription. These splendid pictures are each worth ten dollars. Mr. James Edwards of our circulation staff, will be pleased to show samples.

ABOUT TRACTION ENGINES.

The owner of a traction engine was fined recently for crossing the Coboconk bridge without the use of planks for protecting the bridge.

It should be known that under the law engine drivers are required to carry planks to be placed under the wheels and the bridge has to be strengthened if necessary to prevent any injury to it if the machine weighs over 10 tons. A person travelling without properly protecting the roadway from the wheels, whether injury is done or not, is liable to a fine of $5 to $50.

Sentimental Burglars

Sentiment is believed to have deterred burglars who broke open the safe in the station ticket office in Lachine, Que., from carrying off a handsome silver tea set in a silver-mounted case, which was part of the express matter stored in the safe. The police found that the case had been broken open, but that its contents had been left untouched. In it was a card showing that the tea set was a birthday gift to W. Walls of Lachine from his mother, and it is thought that even the temptation to take the silver was overcome by the message of love written by the mother on the card. They took 23 cents in cash and the station agent's watch.

WOMEN INVENTORS

Average of Eleven Patents a Week Taken Out by Women

It is a commonplace with the misogynist that the mental inferiority of women renders them incapable of competing with men in the open field of labor; that their lack of resourcefulness and mental vision debars them from ever becoming inventors of note to name one particular sphere. This allegation is amply disproved by statistical returns in the British Isles which show for one year a total of no less than 600 women patentees in that country alone. An average of over eleven inventions a week on the part of women can hardly be regarded as negligible. One of the discoveries is the method invented by Mrs. Ernest Hart whereby fabrics of all textures from the finest of silks to stout canvases and tarpaulins can be rendered impervious to moisture. This new waterproofing process can also be applied to cordage, thus preventing steamer hawsers from becoming frozen, and so facilitating handling in frosty weather. Another patent, that of Mrs. Caley-Robinson, is on a semi-gas furnace by which expenditure on fuel is reduced by one-sixth, the furnace consuming all waste products such as soot, clinkers, ashes, smoke, etc.

Other improvements that affect the industrial world include inventions connected with sewing-machines, marine engines, automobiles, flying machines, railway coaches and wireless telegraphy. Mrs. Kaye, of Leeds, invented a metal box for collecting fares on tramcars and other public conveyances, which is now in successful operation in the large cities throughout England. Another woman devised a skilfully-constructed piece of mechanism for making paper bags. Other contrivances of a more feminine nature include safety curling-tongs and improvements in children's perambulators, which have netted the clever women who devised them thousands of dollars.

REDMOND EAGER FOR PEACE; ANXIOUS TO PLACATE ULSTER

Nationalist Lieutenant, Mr. Devlin, in Sunday Speech Indicates Desire to Avoid War

London, Dec. 8.—The urgency of the problem of financing the new naval expenditure, to which Mr. Asquith's latest speech bears witness, makes it more than ever imperative to settle the Irish problem by consent. Mr. Devlin's conciliatory speech of Sunday at Rathdrum, close to Avondale the birthplace of Parnell, gains importance from the fact that he is [illegible] as Redmond's next friend and a pronounced Nationalist advisor. Mr. Devlin said he welcomed Sir Edward Carson's latest attitude. Irish Nationalists were willing to go to any length short of sacrificing the principle of an Irish Parliament, to conciliate their Unionist fellow-countrymen; they were willing to go a good deal further than half way to sign a lasting treaty of peace and goodwill. Irresponsible politicians like Mr. Hicks, M.P., who ousted Winston Churchill from the Manchester seat, are, however, busy keeping up the hearts of party men. He said on Saturday at Warrington: "The people of Ulster have behind them the Unionist party; behind them the Lord God of battles. In his name and their name," he said to the Prime Minister, "let your armies and batteries fire. Fire, if you dare. Fire and be damned." (Cheers).

"FAMILY SQUABBLE" TO END WHEN SOUTH LANARK VOTES

Col. Balderson and Dr. A. E. Hanna Furiously Angry as Election Nears

Perth, Ont., Dec. 8.—To an outsider the situation here is full of humor although naturally enough in the minds of the Conservative citizens tragedy is the predominant note. Only once before in the history of the riding has such a thing occurred and the Liberals slipped in between the warring factions and elected their man. In a constituency where the representative of the Liberal party frequently loses his deposit, the shock was terrific, but it served a good purpose and until now the party has always presented a united front and the late Hon. John G. Haggart was returned to the House of Commons with unbroken regularity.

Signs of another storm within the Conservative ranks were not lacking in 1911, the last occasion on which Mr. Stewart asked the suffrage of the electors of South Lanark. At the party caucus on that occasion Col. [illegible] Balderson was only defeated by [illegible] votes. As a result we now have two Conservatives in the field and [illegible] of them is the Colonel, while Dr. A. E. Hanna is the other. They [illegible] hail from Perth. Mr. Sidney [illegible] of Smith's Falls, was also a [illegible], but he was eliminated at the party convention when he was defeated by one vote for the nomination. Col. Balderson's name was not put up and then the trouble began. The soldier politician was away with his regiment when the convention was called, and he claims that Dr. Hanna's friends deliberately secured delay for the caucus when they knew he would be unable to be present. The Hanna supporters say that such a supposition is absurd and declare that at an early caucus the Colonel's list of delegates for the convention was turned down by a substantial majority and the doctor's list accepted.

Request Refused.

Col. Balderson asked that another convention be called, but this suggestion he maintains was not acceptable to the other side, so he announced himself as an Independent Conservative out to defeat the "machine," which is supposed to be supporting Dr. Hanna, the official nominee. Efforts were then begun by the "powers" at Ottawa to heal the breach and both candidates made several trips to the capital, but nothing resulted. It was feared that the Liberals might take advantage of the situation, although the Colonel always maintained that he would retire if the Opposition put a man in the field. One night early last week the Hon. Dr. Reid and the Hon. W. T. White, members of the Borden Cabinet came into Perth and held a long conference with Dr. Hanna. About 11 o'clock, the ministers "pussy-footed it" across to Col. Balderson's house and it was well on the "wee sma'" hours before they crossed the threshold of the Balderson house on the way out. They brought to the insurgent a document signed by Dr. Hanna calling another party convention together, and asked that the Colonel also affix his signature and both would abide by the result. The effort was fruitless, Col. Balderson declared it was too late, and he would have none of it.

GIRL MISSING AND FRIENDS HOLD NOW TWO THEORIES

Miss Maud Guest Has Not Been Seen Since Last Thursday—Mysterious Man Figures in Case

Toronto, Dec. 8.—The aid of the police has been invoked to solve the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Miss Maud Guest, a young English girl, who left her boarding house [illegible] her disappearance was not noticed until she failed to turn up in the evening. Then becoming alarmed Mrs. Abel communicated with her employers, who declared that the girl had not been to work at all that day.

The police of the West Toronto division were notified and acting Detective Cougans learned that immediately after she left the house Miss Guest had gone along the St. John road in the direction of the Humber river. The fact that she left behind her watch, some trinkets, [illegible]

NEW MEN FOR CITY COUNCIL

The latest names mentioned as probable candidates for the Council are Mr. Harry Morgan, for years connected with the Peterborough Hardware Co., and Mr. Samuel Taylor, of the C.G.E. Co. Mr. Morgan will run in No. 2 Ward and Mr. Taylor in No. 3. Both gentlemen are well qualified for seats at the board, and would make excellent representatives.

BYRON STAUFFER ON THE PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH

George street Methodist church was crowded last evening by an eager, responsive audience. Rev. Byron Stauffer, himself a son of the race he humorously and eloquently described, discoursed on the Pennsylvania Dutchman. The Pennsylvania Dutchman was a mongrel like all the men that do real work, like the dogs that do the most tricks and the hens that lay the most fertile eggs. Swiss Mennonites from Holland, Lutherans from Berlin, and drunkards from Heidelberg all were blended in Pennsylvania.

They had a mongrel language; but it was a wonderful language for the fire side. Pathetically and eloquently the lecturer described a wedding in which he, the preacher, by mistake asked a bridegroom to obey his bride, and was met by the reply, "I don't believe I want to make rash promises." The democratic ways, the diligence, the benevolence and the [illegible] of the Pennsylvania Dutch were all illustrated by amusing anecdotes.

The lecturer touched our sense of ridiculous by his references to the skirts of 1886 and 1913, probed our consciences by his plea for the servant girl eating alone twenty-one meals a week, and made many budding socialists by his insistence on the fact that the hand of the diligent ought to make rich. The lecture closed with an eloquent tribute to the pioneer and the common man.

THE GERMAN CROWN PRINCE, [illegible] WHO IS AGAIN IN THE LIMELIGHT

LOCAL COMMERCIAL MEN SECURE QUARTERS

Referring to the first intimation of the recently formed Peterborough Commercial Travellers' Association, contained in the Times, it might be added that the P.C.T.A. have secured the commodious apartments on Water street, above the law offices of Goodwill and Bennett, formerly used as the public library. Paper hangers and painters will at once proceed to put the place into suitable condition.

KAISER IN TROUBLE WITH FIRST BORN

Berlin, Dec. 8.—The hand of the German Crown Prince was at work in the recent crisis over the incidents between the military and civilian authorities in Alsace, according to Dr. Georges Weill, a Socialist Deputy in the Imperial Parliament. Speaking in his constituency of Metz yesterday, Dr. Weill said the Crown Prince sided strongly with the soldiery and had visited the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, on Dec. 3rd, the day on which the Chancellor made his unsatisfactory speech in Parliament which resulted in the passage of a vote of non-confidence in the government.

Dr. Weill declared that the Chancellor's hazy reference on that occasion to the Emperor's anti-military orders were undoubtedly due to his desire to reconcile the wishes of the German ruler and his eldest son.

Lieut. Baron Von Forstner, of the 99th Infantry, the instigator of the trouble between the soldiers and the citizens of Zabern, told some friends to-day that he was as good as retired from the army.

TO BRING FIELDING BACK TO OTTAWA IS NOW LIBERALS' PLAN

Capital Hears This Bit of Gossip Which Is Going Rounds To-day

Ottawa, Dec. 8.—The most interesting bit of political gossip going the rounds of the Capital to-day is to the effect that Hon. W. S. Fielding will shortly enter parliament again. It is said that Robert Bickerdike, M.P. for the St. Lawrence division of Montreal, will resign to provide a seat for the ex-Minister of Finance. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the rumor goes on to say, is bringing strong influence to bear upon his old colleague to re-enter the Federal arena as his chief lieutenant.

Mr. Bickerdike's majority was in the vicinity of 700, and it is thought that this margin is sufficiently large to warrant the Liberals opening the seat. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is expected to make some indirect reference to the matter at the banquet to Mr. Fielding in Montreal to-morrow evening.

It is said that as a result of the series of conferences held this past week with his lieutenants that the latest Liberal tariff policy has again been revised.

There has been vigorous protest from the rural members against the [illegible] of the "Free Food" policy and the Western members object to the dropping of reciprocity. A new plank it is understood will be added to the "Free Food" doctrine to appease the agriculturists and Western Free Traders. It is expected Sir Wilfrid will make the announcement at the Fielding banquet.

WOODMEN OF WORLD ELECTION OF OFFICERS

The Sherwood Forest Camp of the Woodmen of the World, elected their officers last night in their hall, George street. The officers for the ensuing year are:

Council Commander—W. Clifford.
Advisor Lieutenant—E. LeBarr.
Escort—A. Spencely.
Clerk—A. A. Haskell.
Banker—J. Kyle.

Managers—W. Gibbs, R. N. Jones, G. B. Wakeman.
Watchman—G. Wheeler.
Sentry—R. Self.

Truth is Stranger Than Fiction.

A western politician running for office was very much incensed at certain remarks which had been made about him by the leading paper of his town. He burst into the editor's office like a dynamite bomb, and exclaimed: "You are telling lies about me in your paper, and you know it!"

"You have no cause for complaint," said the editor coolly. "What in the world would you do if we told the truth about you?"

FINE FEATHERS

That line of distinction so often obscured between graft and opportunity gets four people into a fearful mess in "Fine Feathers," which H. H. Frazee will present here at the Grand Opera House, on Saturday next, Dec. 13th, matinee and night.

The play comes direct from its triumphant record-breaking engagements in the Cort Theatre, Chicago, and the Astor Theatre, New York, where it ran all of last season.

It is the story of how a woman's love of finery so twisted her viewpoint that she could not see where opportunity leaves off and graft begins, and Eugene Walter, the author, has told it in a masterful manner. Much might be written of the play, of the lesson it conveys, the philosophy it presents and the varied emotions it arouses.

The story, in brief, centers around a young chemist and his wife who are fighting a sort of uphill fight against adversity with a meagre salary, until a business man, a sort of high financier, walks into their lives. He proposes what he terms an "opportunity" to the husband. It is a scheme to defraud the government by using an inferior brand of cement in fulfilling a dam contract. The wife views it as does the financier, as opportunity. To the husband it presents itself as graft. The wife carried away by thoughts of what the money will buy, prevails upon her husband to participate in the fraud. He does so, not with changed viewpoint, however, but because of his love for her.

It is upon this premise that the author has built a great big human document; a drama, pulsing with heart throbs and tears [illegible] it has developed what has been spoken of as the biggest play in the history of the American stage. [illegible] Walter has introduced characters that are so original [illegible] his philosophy.

STORM IS ONLY WHAT IS BECOMING CUSTOMARY AT EARLY PART OF DECEMBER

High Wind Down Last Night and Nice Weather is Expect- to Follow

Toronto, Dec. 8.—It seems that it is fashionable in weather circles of late years for a gale to come along about this time of December and blow the mercury down suddenly. It may be noted, however, that the cool spell following has not been of long duration in any of these cases. The high wind blowing here to-day will moderate this evening, and for to-morrow we may expect a nice fair, and cool day, which will be just the thing for Christmas shoppers.

No Baby Storm.

It was by no means a baby storm which struck Toronto and rattled the window panes sufficiently to disturb slumberers in the early hours of this morning. The official record shows that the wind was travelling at 34 miles an hour on its way from Lake Superior to the west coast of Newfoundland, carrying snow with it all the way.

The storm formed over Lake Superior on Saturday and developed all day yesterday. This morning it centred over the Bay of Fundy, where it is most pronounced. Toronto did not get as much snow as in other places. It is snowing heavily throughout the Georgian Bay district, with temperature around zero. They are also getting heavy snow in the Province of Quebec.

UNION LACKING IN CHARM FOR PROVINCE OF NEWFOUNDLAND

Canada Has Nothing to Offer, Says Hon. P. T. McGrath—Manufacturers Fear Removal of Tariff

Toronto, Dec. 8.—Newfoundland's reasons for not confederating with Canada were stated clearly and forcefully by Hon. P. T. McGrath of the Newfoundland Legislative Council, at Canadian Club luncheon this afternoon. In the first place the speaker said, Newfoundland did not care to sacrifice her independence for what Canada had to offer, which was practically nothing. During the half century, since the reciprocity [illegible] of 1866, the only issue between Canada and Newfoundland and the United States had been that regarding the fisheries. This had been practically settled by the Hague Tribunal two years ago.

Control Bait Supply.

Newfoundland controlled the bait supply. Canada had to get its share of bait by the grace of Newfoundland just as the United States had to do. Confederation would transfer the control of the fisheries to Ottawa, a change that would not of necessity be an advantage to the people of Newfoundland.

One inducement to join the Confederation had been the promise of railways. Newfoundland had built and financed her own railroads. Another inducement was a free breakfast table. The Government had given this to the people. A reduction of taxes was promised. During the past ten years taxation had been reduced by $750,000. In addition there had been a surplus revenue for that period amounting to [illegible]. Of this sum $750,000 had been spent on public works, and the balance [illegible],000, had been deposited in the Bank of Montreal as provision against possible hard times in the future.

CANADIAN LAW IS SUPREME IN U.S. IN I.O.F. AFFAIRS?

Question was Raised in Report Submitted by Three State Experts

Madison, Wis., Dec. 8.—Whether an act of the Canadian Parliament will enable the Independent Order of Foresters of Toronto to do what otherwise is admitted to be a violation of its contract with a majority of its 140,000 members in the United States, is a question of international independence raised in the report made to-day on the society by the insurance departments of Illinois, Nebraska and Wisconsin. An examination of the affairs of the Canadian organization has been in progress for several months.

The question raised is said to affect every person holding a policy of any kind issued by an insurance company or an organization of a foreign country. According to Herman L. Ekern, Insurance Commissioner of Wisconsin, if it is once recognized that insurance contracts issued in the state under a license to the company or society can be repudiated in any part under laws of a foreign country, it follows that such contracts can be entirely repudiated and such repudiation will have been to be enforced by the courts in the United States.

URGE POLICE TO FIND GIRL

New York Swallows Two More—Deep Mystery

New York, Dec. 8.—Every policeman in Greater New York had instructions to-day to look out for [illegible] peal to the Mayor to expedite the police search.

"I am positive that there is no romantic reason back of Jessie's disappearance," he said to-day. "Had there been she certainly would have sent us some word before this because she would have known how terrible our anxiety would be, and it certainly would not be characteristic of my daughter to cause her family any suffering. On the other hand she has never suffered in the least from any mental or nervous trouble, and the idea that she became ill and wandered away unwillingly does not seem to have the slightest fact to bear it out."

Mabel Vera Moulton, 18 years old, was also reported missing to-day. She has not been seen since Dec. [illegible], when she left a Broadway department store, where she worked, to meet her mother. The police to-day sent out a general alarm for the girl.

Walter Johnson's Story of an Umpire's Decision Sent by Telephone

Walter Johnson, the greatest pitcher in baseball, says the funniest incident of the game that came within his knowledge was staged in Kansas, his native state, some seven or eight years ago. An umpire played the leading role.

I wasn't a big leaguer then, said Johnson, telling the story, and did not appreciate the affair as I do now. If my memory serves me correctly, Independence and Parsons were playing. Two games were scheduled for the latter city. The umpire in the morning game was Gorman and around him centered the trouble.

That Gorman didn't like the way the fans treated him was proved when he didn't show up for the afternoon game. I am told he never held an indicator in another game, his lone experience causing him to lose any love he might have had for the job.

At the end of the ninth the score was a tie and the crowd was wrought up over the extra inning. Neither club scored in the tenth. In the first of the eleventh Independence got a man as far as third with two down, and the next batter hit a ball to deep short. The umpire's first impression, as well as decision, was that the batter was safe and that Independence had put over the run that looked big enough to win the game.

The captain and manager of the home team, seeing that the umpire had waved the batter safe, made a rush for the official. All the Parsons players followed. About this time Umpire Gorman was thinking how much pleasanter it would be back with the old folks. Seeing the home athletes on the rush, he proclaimed the batter out. The home team halted, but Independence took up the charge. [illegible] Gorman was giving an imitation of a [illegible] on a freight train, alternately making motions that he had declared the runner out and safe.

The crowd then took a hand and started to make things unpleasant for Gorman, who started on the run, beating the crowd to safety by a good margin. After reaching his hotel Gorman telephoned the ball park, got the manager of the home team on the phone and informed him that he had called the runner out and that the run didn't score.

I am sure this is the only case on record where the umpire telephoned his decision. And it stood. The contest was declared a tie, and played over.

The receipts and expenditures of the Vatican average about [illegible], and with the cutting off of certain expenses of late years, they nearly balance evenly.

The revenue is derived from the patrimony of St. Peter, including the invested capital of the church, the interest on funds invested in London securities by former Popes, the rent of buildings owned by the church, fees for the services of documents issued by the various congregations and departments and Peter's Pence. The yearly expenditure is roughly speaking as follows: For the support of Cardinals and diplomatic missions abroad, $100,000; for the maintenance of the Vatican, including the papal army, [illegible]; pontifical sites, colleges and schools, [illegible]; gifts to charities, [illegible], and miscellaneous, [illegible].

The treasures of the Vatican, picture galleries and museums, the collections of library furniture, tapestries and jewels are estimated to be worth [illegible]. No precise figures are available as to the value of landed property, but the [illegible] invested capital and rents of buildings is estimated roughly at [illegible].

Ancient Church Tower

It was the only old part of the church, and so far as the district was concerned was the only ancient building left.

Few People Allow Their Lungs to Get Full Play

Correct breathing is not only the best health-giver, but it is also the great beautifier and does much to give roundness to the figure and a healthy bloom to the cheek. Let it be understood that the human body consists of millions upon millions of cells; that each cell must have its quantum of oxygen to support life; that the more the cell breathes the more it lives; that a withdrawing of oxygen means a flagging, a slow-dying—consumption. Every cell that has sufficient oxygen for its needs is a healthy cell; the body that is composed of healthy cells is a disease-resisting body. It is known that the bacillus of tuberculosis cannot endure oxygen; therefore, to ward off consumption and other forms of disease enough oxygen must be inhaled. From personal experience extending over many years I can say that the habit of full, easy breathing—that is, filling the chest slowly from the diaphragm to the collar-bone without strain of any kind—will convert a sallow, muddy complexion into one of glowing health, for oxygen burns up the waste material, and it is eliminated from the body in a variety of ways. But what is not generally understood is that the vast majority of people cannot breathe fully and freely through the natural channel—the nose—on account of some congestion.—J. W. Williams, in the "Pall Mall Gazette."

Thirty Dairymaids Sing

Thirty dairymaids, dressed in royal blue, sang the National Anthem to greet the King and Queen when their Majesties visited the Worleston Dairy Institute, in Cheshire. The dairymaids, many of whom are farmers' daughters, were grouped on the lawn when the King and Queen arrived and, after hearing them sing, the Royal visitors saw demonstrations of cheese and butter making by the students.

I am very grateful to the owner, and I found it most convenient, for it answered my purpose in emergency. I am no practical thief, but chanced my share of luck, and came off [illegible]." "A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Possibly Winston Churchill is in training as an airman in order to escape from the suffragettes.

If moving pictures were made a feature of public school instruction, it might be feasible to dispense with the services of a truant officer.

With the Ulster loyalists, the English suffragettes, and the Dublin strikers arming, it may soon be necessary for some peaceable power to intervene to save Britain from anarchy.

Milk wagons and hearses are exempt from the general strike called by the Indianapolis teamsters. This, at any rate is partial recognition by the unions of inviolable rights in the public as the third party in stagnating labor fights. Let's get to a general arbitration basis.

THE "LAPSE" OF MEMORY

The case of Professor Cecil F. Lavell, the Columbus, O., educationist, who is supposed to be wandering about in Hamilton or vicinity in a state of mental collapse, is a peculiar one; but many such cases have been known. Professor Lavell is a victim of aphasia, or loss of memory. There are cases on record of men and women who at one stroke lost all memory of their past—could not even remember their own names—and began life anew, sometimes under new names. In some of these cases the characters and individualities of the victims underwent a complete change.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

The Algonquin Provincial Park is situated in the eastern part of the Province of Ontario about 200 miles north of Toronto and 160 miles west of Ottawa, and has become the objective point for a large number of visitors who delight in winter sports. Your Bad Taste In the Morning Is Due to Catarrh

DESTROY THE POISONOUS DISEASE BEFORE YOUR HEALTH IS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Perhaps you haven't thought of calling those unpleasant symptoms that affected your nose and throat by any particular name — but it's Catarrh just the same.

When the attack is severe, your eyes are watery and look weak. Your breath is offensive, due to inflammation in the nose and throat.

At last science has discovered a real remedy, a new scientific marvel which acts like no other Catarrh remedy on earth. "Catarrhozone" operates on a new plan; it is a direct remedy, goes instantly to the source of the trouble. Its rich, fragrant essences and healing balsams are breathed in vapor form through a special inhaler and gives instant relief.

Catarrhozone doesn't stop at the relief stage—it goes further—keeps on going till a cure is affected. Bad cases are cured, as you can judge from the following letter:—"Every morning for six months last winter I awoke with a bad taste, an awful breath and stuffed up feeling in my nostrils," writes Bob E. Rutland, of Regina. "It was simply an awful case of chronic Catarrh. Relief first came from Catarrhozone. I used that inhaler twenty times a day and took it to bed with me at night. I am cured, and by the use of Catarrhozone stay well. Now I am free from that irritable throat trouble, coughs, colds, headache, or catarrh."

No medicine on earth is so certain to cure every form of Catarrh or throat trouble as "Catarrhozone." Get the large $1.00 size, lasts two months and is guaranteed; medium size 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

POLITICAL SUICIDE.

It begins to look as if Sir Wilfrid Laurier is determined to commit kari-kari, or, in plain English, political suicide. No Conservative or Protectionist has ever pretended that it was possible to protect one part of the community without protecting the others. Yet Sir Wilfrid proposes to leave the Canadian farmer open to world-wide competition while leaving the tariff on manufacturers! Surely Sir Wilfrid must see that the farmer will resent this treatment. Already a wave of indignation is rolling over the agricultural class. We have often heard the phrase "robbing the farmer," but this is the first time we have ever met it face to face.

GILLESPIE FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

November 29th, 1913.

CITY IN PARAGRAPH

SUNLIGHT AND SHADOW ON THE DIAL OF A CITY LIFE

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of the Y.M.C.A., was well attended last night.

Mr. Ted Cavanagh shipped a number of men out to the Peterborough Lumber Company's camp yesterday.

A chimney fire at 677 Water street gave the brigade a run yesterday morning. No damage.

The men of the City Fire Department are holding their annual banquet on Thursday, December 18th.

The Peterborough Curling Club held a meeting last night of an informal character.

Mrs. Reader, you will help out many a hard worked merchant and their clerks by buying your Christmas supplies early.

Col. Harry Ward, ex-M.P., Port Hope, is likely to succeed His Honor Judge Benson, who is likely to be raised to the County Court Bench of Ontario.

Port Hope papers have discovered that Prof. Lavell of Columbus, Ohio, has disappeared. It was some two weeks ago since this prominent educationalist was lost.

Twenty-five years ago, the Trades and Labor Council of Peterborough advocated the nomination of Mr. Harry Denne, now of the Quaker Oats Co., as Mayor of the city.

Twenty-five years ago, a petition was circulated here asking for the repeal of the Scott Act. The act was repealed by an almost ridiculously large majority, later on.

Fire Chief Howard is in receipt of a letter from the Canadian Fire Writers Association, recommending that care should be taken with exposing Christmas decorations to the chance of possible fire.

A contemporary asks shall we soon be wearing paper clothing. Judging by some of the political editorials in our George Street contemporary, and clothing made from that sheet would be warm.

His Honor Judge Edmison, County Magistrate will give his judgment today in the case of King, a Norwood hotelkeeper, who was charged with selling liquor to two Ontario government spotters. The result of his judgment is a safe bet.

In yesterday's police court Norman [illegible] was assessed $5 for a Sunday drunk. Harold, in the box, said he was 19 years of age. He said he got his liquor at a Hunter street Hotel. He had beer first and then two glasses of whiskey. He drank alone. He never drank in that bar before. He was arrested at 3 a.m. Sunday morning in the public lavatory. He had no drinks previous to entering the bar. This was the first time he ever drank intoxicants.

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of poor shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, [illegible]

Columbia

Double Disc Records are guaranteed to have five times the usual record's life

The Incomparable Tone is Indelibly Engraved on these Durable Low Price Records

WHEN great artists sing for the Columbia — when Ysaye or Hofmann plays — when the famous bands render their inspiring music—the living tone is caught and perfectly engraved in hundreds of minute sound grooves on Columbia Records.

The material from which Columbia Records are made is the most perfectly adapted to the purpose—and, incidentally, the most expensive.

We pay more for the material and skill used in producing our records—and charge less for the perfected result. Columbia Records are made five-ply—with a reproducing surface so superior that we guarantee them to wear five times as long as any other. Read our guarantee on the record envelope.

When Columbia Records are played on a Columbia Grafonola you hear, perfect and flawless, the actual voice—or violin—or piano—or orchestra. Even when played on other than Columbia instruments the perfection of these records is such as to produce music almost free from criticism. "It's in the record."

TACKLING THE "BULL."

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I am pleased to see the fearless attitude of The Times on all public questions, particularly in regard to matters in which the Roman Church is concerned. As long as you advocate a policy of even-handed justice to Protestants and Catholics alike, there should be no kick coming. But why, oh, why, do you not take the bull by the horns and let more light into the dark places, both as regards church organization politically, and municipal matters?

Consistency.

Reply—The Times would be sorry to advocate through its columns a policy that would favor anything but equal rights between Protestants and Catholics.—Ed. Times.

ENGLISH SOCCER

It's a Rough Game and Requires Great Skill and Courage

Association or "soccer" football as it is better known, is the national sport of England—not cricket.

Cricket is society's sport, but soccer takes the place of baseball with the English masses. The English season extends from September to April, and no day is cold enough or wet enough to keep the crowds away.

The players do wonderful things with their heads, their stomachs, their chests, their backs and their heels. Here is a fellow running down the field towards his opponent's goal, with a half dozen men trying to get the ball which he is juggling between his legs as he runs. Suddenly, with a backward kick, he sends the ball behind him to a team mate; or he may kick it backward over his head.

One fellow kicks the ball sky-high; by rights, when it strikes, it will rebound as high as a house. But it doesn't. Another player deftly catches it under his foot as it alights, and it stops without a bounce. It's a common trick to kick the ball in such a way that it rolls along the ground with a curve, like a huge billiard ball.

The things the players do with their heads are almost unbelievable. They are trained to use their bodies as a ball player uses his arm. One will jump into the air, giving his body a snap from the waist up as a pitcher snaps his arm, and, catching the oncoming ball on his forehead, drive it half a block in whatever direction he pleases.

Soccer is no "pink tea" affair; an English player never leaves the field unless he is carried off and when a man is injured his place is not filled. They have doctors on the side lines, but usually they are from an adjacent hospital to which the injured are frequently taken.

The players do not wear shin guards, and often kick each other where it hurts the most—on the shin. Knee caps are often kicked out of place. An English football crowd does plenty of rooting too, notwithstanding the general impression that baseball monopolizes this feature.

Two cups take the place of pennants and are competed for by the 20 leading teams of England.

IF MEALS HIT BACK AND STOMACH SOURS

"Pape's Diapepsin" ends Indigestion, Gas, Dyspepsia and Stomach Misery in five minutes.

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch gas and eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of dizziness, heartburn, fullness, nausea, bad taste in mouth and stomach headache, you can get blessed relief in five minutes.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula, plainly printed on these fifty-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will understand why dyspeptic troubles of all kinds must go, and why they relieve sour, out-of-order stomachs, or indigestion in five minutes. "Pape's Diapepsin" is harmless; tastes like candy, though each dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for biliousness or constipation.

This city will have many "Pape's Diapepsin" cranks, as some people will call them, but you will be enthusiastic about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever take it for indigestion, gases, heartburn, sourness, dyspepsia, or any stomach misery.

Get some now, this minute, and rid yourself of stomach trouble and indigestion in five minutes.

JUNIOR MODES ARE MARKED BY AN AIR OF DEMURE QUAINTNESS

Afternoon and party dresses, suits and practical work-a-day frocks for the boarding school girl are all constructed on simple lines this fall. The straight lined frock of serge for school wear is smartly relieved by the usual sash or bit of bright color brought out in one of the other details: the belt buckle or the buttons perhaps.

For afternoon or party wear, rather more elaborate trimming, the frock may show a touch of drapery, a peplum, an effectively draped sash of one of the exquisitely brocaded silks or ribbons that are so modish just now or a clever combination of two or more materials.

Buff satine trimmed with blue is the effective combination shown in the school frock (8021) here illustrated. It is a well cut design and could easily be made more dressy by adding a [illegible]. This dress may be copied in size [illegible] with 3¾ yards of 42 inch material and ⅝ yard of contrasting silk or material for trimming.

One of the large softly colored plaids so becoming to small folks is used in 8026. It is a long waisted model with the skirt attached to a low necked underwaist. This design would be effective in one of the plain faced materials, also with accessories of plaid or figures.

For size 12 it requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch material.

No. 8021—sizes 14, 16, 17 and 18.
No. 8026—sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14.
Each pattern 10 cents.

PERILOUS JOURNEY IN UNKNOWN LAND

Are Found on Mountain Top Near Equator—Strange Dwarfs in High Altitude

After encountering great hardships, and losing three of their members, a British expedition led by Dr. A. F. R. Wollaston penetrated to the Great Snow Range of New Guinea for the first time, and made a successful ascent of Mount Carstensz almost to the summit. A valuable collection of birds and plants was obtained. Although it was only sixty miles from the spot where the expedition landed to the highest point reached, [illegible] incessant rain, swollen rivers, and the difficult country made the work so hard that to cover this apparently short distance occupied four and a half months. At the end the expedition nearly came to grief through the capsizing of Dr. Wollaston's canoe. The explorer was rescued with difficulty, but lost diaries covering three months and a large quantity of [illegible]. [illegible] members of the expedition died.

Dr. Wollaston left England determined to ascend Mount Carstensz, the highest peak of the Nassau Range in Dutch New Guinea. He was a member of an expedition which unsuccessfully tried to accomplish this feat three years previously.

After conferring with the Dutch authorities at Batavia the doctor went to Borneo, and spent eight weeks collecting Dyaks before returning to Batavia. Here he was joined by Mr. C. B. Kloss, curator of the Kuala Lumpur Museum, and the two, with five native collectors and seventy-four Dyaks, proceeded by boat to the south coast of Dutch New Guinea. They were escorted by forty Dutch soldiers and eighty convicts from Batavia under a Dutch officer.

The party disembarked at the mouth of the Utakwa River, which had been ascended by Dutch travellers two years previously, and appeared to be the best route into the unknown interior. From the deck of the ship could be seen the snow-capped peaks of the mighty Carstensz. A motor boat, built in England, and all the stores and equipment were landed, and a base camp was made twenty miles up the river.

All this region was quite uninhabited, and the expedition had to carry every bit of its own food. Canoes were made by the Dyaks, and the river was ascended for two days beyond the base, but after that the expedition travelled by land. Depôts were established three days' travel apart, the first being three days' march up the foot hills of the Snow Range.

From the fourth depôt the ascent was made to the snow line. Progress was very slow, the ridges being appallingly steep and the track rough. In the high mountains the sun was never visible except for an hour in the morning, and the travellers were always in the clouds.

At an altitude of about 5,000 feet, the expedition met some curious, but friendly folk, small of stature, but not pigmies, who showed the travellers their track and helped them. The highest point, 15,000 feet, was reached after five days' march from the last base. The rain descended in a continuous torrent, and although Mount Carstensz is almost exactly on the equator the fog-laden air was freezing by cold.

During the ascent a [illegible] was observed, but [illegible] the [illegible] again [illegible] within a very short distance of the [illegible] big boulders [illegible] a retreat. Two attempts to reach the actual summit were made, [illegible] eventually had [illegible].

Suit For [illegible]

This tailored suit shows considerable drapery, and is narrow about the hobble.

The one shown is of gray material made with a box plait down the front under which nearly at the foot a tablier, which is fastened to the waist at the back, is caught. The coat has a loose bodice effect, brought in at the waist with a tight fitting short hip skirt of the goods, which is buttoned down the front with four buttons of old copper.

The collar and cuffs are of mottled copper crepe de chine, and the hat worn with it is made of a bright shade of copper trimmed with ribbon bows and wings of a duller shade of the same color.

This gown is for the thin girl and the tall girl. [illegible] and very little avoirdupois [illegible] [illegible] with a copper colored hat [illegible] a striking [illegible] [illegible].

Policewomen in Chicago

Beginning the actual task of patrolling certain sections of the city, ten women in Chicago entered upon the work as much out of a purpose to show that there is a field there for women as to be profitably employed. They are helpers rather than enforcers of the law, but are clothed with all the authority of other officers. They observe the same discipline as the men, make definite rounds, and report at stations with the required promptness.

Pastry to which baking powder has been added should be placed in the oven as quickly as possible, otherwise the effect of the baking powder will be wasted.

The Housewives' League of St. Paul insists that its members plan their orders so that one delivery a day is necessary; pay cash or settle their accounts promptly; patronize only tradesmen who comply with the laws; refrain from handling goods that are exposed for sale and give preference to food-distributing stores which close not later than 7 p.m.

This shows disposition on the part of the women of St. Paul to help not only themselves, but the honest and clean grocer and his employes.

Glue Linoleum

Instead of tacking linoleum at edges and where widths are joined together, use prepared glue on wrong side. It not only looks better, but when taking it up it doesn't leave any holes, and no bugs can make a hiding place under the edge.

Gentlemen,—

I beg to draw your attention to the fact that I have suffered from rheumatism for the last nine years, and particularly for the last five. I have been unable to stand, walk, or in fact, help myself in any way, my fingers and elbows swollen, [illegible] could not bend them in any way. I tried everything, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] 1907, [illegible] [illegible] SANOL last September and have been taking it ever since, and I am glad to say the swelling is almost all gone. I am going around the house on crutches, also my joints are limbering and straightening, and I fully expect that SANOL will cure me.

I believe SANOL will cure rheumatism, for my case is a hard one, and is that has been pronounced incurable, and if I improve for the next three months as I have for the last three I will be walking in good shape.

I remain,

Yours truly,

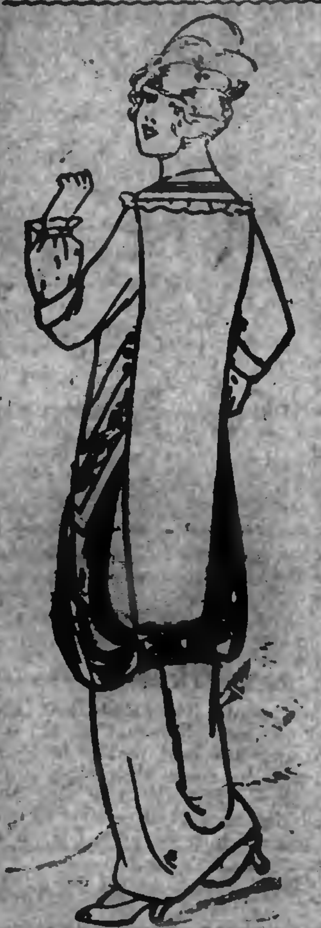
AN EVERYDAY DRESS OF UNIQUE DESIGN



This gown, a modification of one by Paquin of Paris, is of very dark blue serge. The skirt is narrow and plain. Over it is a tunic which does not confine the waistline at all. From the points at the side heavy black silk is draped into a flat bow in the back. Undershirt and sleeves as well as the pleated collar are of net.

Lieut. Vivian Brandon of the British Navy told an interesting story to a London newspaperman of his two and a half years' imprisonment in a German fortress for espionage. He exhibited a beautiful tortoiseshell cat, named Josephine, which shared the latter months of his detention and the animal is now his constant companion.

"She was of good service to me," the young officer said, tapping at his pet, "an unobtrusive companion, helping me to avoid brooding over my position; and she shared my meals with me— little pieces of fish and bacon and portions of milk that I saved for her. When I looked at Josephine, placid and peaceful [illegible] habits, my discontent was softened, and I became resigned to my lot."

Lieut. Brandon, in company with Captain Trench, was convicted of espionage in Germany, and was sent to the fortress of Wesel.

"The citadel of Wesel," he said, "is enclosed by grass-grown ramparts which shut out for me all view of the country beyond with the exception of three church steeples which protruded into the sky above. There was a special building set apart for military offenders undergoing detention, in which I was allotted a room of fair proportions. The number of other men detained varied from five to eleven, and were Germans as a rule, mostly confined for duelling. With these men I was permitted intercourse within limits, taking my meals in their company and remaining with them a short while at the conclusion of the meal. But after the escape of Captain Lux, the French officer convicted as a spy, the regulations were increased. [illegible] permitted, and after [illegible] my door was locked.

"I rose at seven o'clock each morning, had breakfast at eight-thirty and from ten till eleven-thirty had my exercise walk within the ramparts, accompanied by a non-commissioned officer. Then at noon I had dinner and took another walk of an hour and a half in the afternoon, had supper at seven and went to bed by eleven.

"In the intervals I read German authors, like Goethe and Schiller, my object being to improve my knowledge of the German language, with which I was only slightly acquainted at the commencement of my detention. But I made progress until I was able to [illegible] translations, and I always wrote my letters in German.

"After about eighteen months I was removed to Koenigstein in Saxony. My room there was built into a solid wall, and [illegible] than that at Wesel. The [illegible] [illegible] As at Wesel a sentry supplied with ball cartridge kept surveillance at my window during the night. Animals can only be kept by permission of the fortress commandant, but as soon as I was installed I asked the officer of Koenigstein for permission to bring Josephine there. He acceded at once, and he further suggested that I should occupy myself by gardening. Tools were obtained for me and I raised a promising crop of flowers, and I was especially proud of my radish bed. My health generally was excellent, the second fortress suiting me better, because the air was more bracing."

Lieut. Brandon was quite unprepared for his release, which came about as an act of courtesy on the part of the Kaiser when King George visited Berlin. Before he quitted the fortress he was compelled to sign an order expelling him from Saxony, but it was not intimated that the expulsion applied to Germany, and the assumption is that he may return there if he desires.

Do Your Looks Quite Satisfy You?

IF YOUR COLOR IS BAD, IF YOU SUFFER FROM PIMPLES, HERE IS GOOD ADVICE

Fine Results in Two Weeks

Miss Nettie E. Callaghan, a well-known young lady in Middleton, writes as follows: "I was affected for two years with a rash, and ugly looking pimples that spread over my face. My color was poor, and my blood evidently completely out of order. Certainly it was a most despairing sort of a case, because various treatments did but little to help me. A friend of mine in Toronto, Ont., advised me to get Dr. Hamilton's Pills, so I sent at once for five boxes. In two weeks I felt like new—looks improved, spirits rose, and I felt as if I was getting well. I have used this remedy for a long time, and now wouldn't be without it."

If you are in ailing health, have blood disorders, stomach trouble, or headaches, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will help you quickly. All druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. 25c. per box, five for $1.00. Sent postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhœa, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative;" they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. BY-LAW TO PROVIDE $78,000 FOR BRIDGE AT DALHOUSIE ST.

Will go to the People at January Elections--Ald Green Not Satisfied as to Where Power is Coming From For Hydro Electric--Renewal of Otonabee Power Co's Franchise Refused

The City Fathers met in special session last night, with Mayor W. H. Bradburn presiding. There were also present Aldermen Anderson, Langford, Johnston, Green, Duffus, Gordon, Gillespie, Duncan and Buller.

Mr. Wm. Ferguson and D. O'Connell were present in the interests of the Otonabee Power Co., and asked that their franchise which expires at the end of this year, be renewed for another ten years.

Mr. O'Connell offered that the company had given good service, and by instituting competition secured for Peterborough as cheap rates as prevailing in any other city, and were consequently entitled to consideration. He laid special emphasis on the company's flat rate system, for which the public are, he said, anxious for a continuance. The company could see no reason why their franchise should not be renewed. Competition would assure cheap rates for light and power and compel efficient and economic service from the commissioners of the municipal plant. The Otonabee Power Co., against which the city has no cause for complaint, is composed mainly of Peterborough citizens, and the bulk of its capital is Peterborough money, representing to a large extent the investments of widows and orphans.

Ald. Gordon said the company's position is analogous with that of a leaseholder. During 10 or 11 years they have carried on business with a full knowledge of the pending expiration of their franchise, and should be prepared for the changed conditions incidental upon the establishment of a municipal plant. This is the middle of December, the eleventh hour before operating the city's own plant, and any request for a renewal of franchise should have been made a year ago, before things had gone so far. Ald. Gordon here reported that a year ago the city had approached the Otonabee Power Co. with a view to purchasing, but had been told that the plant was not for sale, and when it was intimation to that effect would be given. But since that time no intimation had been forwarded to the city. He did not agree with Mr. Ferguson's contention as to the value of competition; on the contrary the cutting of prices by competition would create increased taxes should a deficit in the revenue from the municipal plant accrue therefrom.

To the Mayor, Mr. Ferguson admitted that the common stock in the Otonabee Power Co. amounts to $110,700 and the preferred stock $112,000, the common stock which has the voting power, is controlled by the Electric Power Co.

The Mayor—"Then you are here to help the poor preferred stock holders?"

Mr. Ferguson—"I am here to help both."

Continued measuring of swords between Messrs. Ferguson and O'Connell and his worship and his colleagues, showed beyond doubt that the company had positively refused to sell out to the city at the latter's [illegible], although the Otonabee [illegible] been subsequently absorbed [illegible] Electric Power Co.

[illegible] moved, seconded by [illegible], that the request of [illegible] Power Co. for a renewal of the right to maintain [illegible] on the streets be not [illegible], and that as its right to [illegible] will expire on the first day of January, 1914, the company be notified that the Council will insist on the said poles and wires being removed, as provided by its agreement with the city.—Carried.

WHERE'S THE JUICE TO COME FROM.

Later on in the evening Ald. Green was anxious to know if the city is going to get power by the first of the year for its municipal plant, and where the power is coming from, and what it is going to cost us. Council had, he said, to-night taken away the Otonabee Power Company's franchise, the Peterborough Light and Power Company's plant is under expropriation, and he was afraid that some inconvenience would be experienced by light and power users before the municipal plant is capable of handling the business.

Ald. John—"We are assured by the Hydro-Electric Commission that we will have the power when we are ready for it." Ald. Johnston admitted that this assurance is merely verbal, but, however, from Hon. Adam Beck himself.

Ald. Green—"Should we not have that assurance in writing? We are within two weeks' time of the elimination from business both power companies, and some concrete assurance of power at the beginning of the year should be to hand. Some manufacturers are using 500 h.p. direct current motors and have you arranged for them?"

Ald. Buller did not know any direct current power motors were in use. "In any event, we have the Commission's assurance of power whenever we want it."

The Mayor here offered that he had had that assurance as late as yesterday morning, and Mr. Chief Engineer Gaby, of the Hydro-Electric Commission, had promised to put that assurance in writing.

Ald. Johnston—"Central city is all but ready for the power, and the Commission has assured us that they will take care of it until such time as the expropriation proceedings are concluded."

Ald. Green—"But where is the power to come from?"

The Mayor—"I don't know, that is the Commission's business. But I have every confidence in the Commission supplying the demand when called upon."

Ald. Duffus also had confidence in the Commission, and eulogized the work of the Power Committee. Still he thought Ald. Green's point well taken, and that the city should have an assurance of power in writing.

Ald. Gordon—"We can have absolute confidence in the Commission, who are responsible to the people. They dare not take any risk of leaving this community without power on the first of January, which would be disastrous, not only to this city, but also to themselves as the people's representatives of public-owned utilities."

Ald. Green still of the opinion that the manufacturers using direct current motors will experience trouble.

The Mayor could not tell Ald. Green exactly what provision the Commission had made for taking care of such business at the completion of the system. He had absolute confidence, however, in the integrity of the Commission.

Incidentally, it might be here remarked that the Hydro-Electric Commission is under contract IN WRITING to supply this city with power for its municipal plant. This contract was made at the inception of the whole scheme.

THE NEW BRIDGE.

Council decided to submit a by-law at the January elections to borrow $78,000 for constructing a foot and vehicle bridge over the Otonabee River at Dalhousie street.

Council debated at length whether provision should be made for street railway traffic over the new bridge or not.

City Engineer Parsons submitted two plans and estimates for a bridge over the river at Dalhousie street, both steel structures—one for an ordinary traffic bridge, estimated at $77,462, the other for a bridge capable of carrying a single track street railway at a cost of $116,681.

The Mayor explained that Mr. Munro had informed him that the street Railway Company positively refused to run their cars across a bridge at Dalhousie street, and consequently would not contribute a share of the expense of same.

Ald. Buller contended that in the future this bridge at Dalhousie will unquestionably be one part of the street railway's loop into and from East City.

City Engineer Parsons argued that from what he can learn, the street railway will eventually use this bridge as their southern loop, together with Hunter street bridge, as a northern loop, of serving with East City. [illegible] by way of a high level structure at Hunter street.

Ald. Duncan—"If we ever take over the railway system—and I believe we shall eventually—we will be glad to have provided for street railway traffic over this bridge."

Ald. Gordon concurred in this view and thought the city should build the heavier bridge with a view to [illegible] street railway connection with East City.

Ald. Langford was entirely opposed to expending $116,000 on a bridge at Dalhousie street, which would only serve a [illegible] of our citizens. A cheaper structure would do. "Then how do we know that Dalhousie street is the best position for a new bridge. Again, the Hunter street bridge will shortly have to be renewed, when the money proposed to be expended on a bridge at Dalhousie street would be needed on a high level structure at Hunter street, which the street railway company would use and contribute towards. For the latter scheme he was also optimistic of the Quaker Oats Co. and the Government shouldering their share of the cost of construction. In Council and at the polls he would oppose this bridge scheme as planned and estimated for. He took his stand on economic grounds; taxes are already a burden on the ratepayers, and in his opinion, it is time to call a halt. He advanced that a foot bridge across the C.P.R.'s new structure would answer the purpose.

His Worship here assured Ald. Langford that the C.P.R. had positively refused to permit of a foot bridge along their new one now being erected.

Ald. Gordon also pointed out that the Council is not deciding to build ANY bridge, but are leaving that decision to the people.

Ald. Langford here moved, that this bridge scheme be abandoned in favor of a cheap foot structure at Dalhousie street, another one at or near London street, and subsequently a high level structure at Hunter street. He got no seconder.

The Mayor favored a bridge at Dalhousie street, which would foster growth within the city's limits. "As it is now a large number of people are building homes in North Monaghan who would have settled, perhaps in East City had a bridge in South City been available. The people want this bridge and are entitled to it."

Ald. Buller wanted a bridge in South City and one capable of taking care of the traffic.

Ald. Anderson said the people want a bridge there which will take care of ordinary traffic. He regretted that the Street Railway Company cannot see their way clear to use this bridge at Dalhousie street. Consequently the only question in his mind is if Council would be justified in spending $39,000 additional to provide for possible street railway traffic in the future.

Ald. Gillespie was in favor of constructing the heavier structure. "Money first spent is money saved," and he fell in line with the view of the city's eventual absorption of the street railway plant, when the new bridge could be used for street railway traffic.

Ald. Duffus concurred in this view and contended that East City citizens, who pay their quota of the city's taxes, have a right to this bridge accommodation.

Moved by Ald. Gillespie, seconded by Ald. Buller,—That a by-law be submitted asking authority to borrow $116,000 for a heavy steel bridge at Dalhousie street, capable of carrying a street railway.

Ald. Johnston—"Mr. Chairman, to tell you the God's truth, I think we had better be cautious. I'm in favor of a bridge, but when it comes down to something at a cost of over $100,000, I'm afraid the people will turn down the by-law." Ald. Johnston thought a cheaper traffic structure providing for street railway addition outside on piers constructed wide enough for such addition, as previously suggested by the Mayor, might be considered.

Council here reached the conclusion that a by-law providing for the heavier structure might meet with disaster at the polls, and Ald. Buller and Gillespie withdrew their former resolution and moved that a by-law to authorize the borrowing of $78,000 for a traffic bridge at Dalhousie street with a swing in same be submitted on January third.—Carried.

This bridge will not carry the street railway.

COUNCIL WILL ATTEND.

W. H. Denham, President Trent Waterway Conservation Association, wrote notifying Council that the Association will meet in the Bank of Montreal Chambers at 8 o'clock on Friday evening, December 12th, to complete organization and elect officers. Council will attend this meeting.

All the members, except Ald. McIntyre were present.

BANK OF MONTREAL HAS SUCCESSFUL YEAR

In this issue appears the 96th annual report of the Bank of Montreal. This great bulwark of Canadian finance once more leads in the solid financial race. At the meeting "covered" by this report, Mr. Vincent Meredith combined in his own person the functions of General Manager for the year covered by the report and of President just elected and therefore chairman of the meeting. Next year, no doubt, the dual utterances of the President and General Manager will appear. A casual glance at the history of this great Canadian Bank has demonstrated that the policy of the Bank officers has been more than vindicated. The Bank of Montreal certainly sets the pace for all other similar institutions in Canada. Not only the depositors and shareholders of the Bank of Montreal have reason for self congratulation over the management, but the general public of Canada has been benefited by the policy pursued by this institution. The whole policy of the bank will justify the president in his optimistic remarks.

KARLUK DRIFTS; STEFANSSON IS STILL SAFE IN ARCTIC

Ottawa Gets Message of Cheer From Explorer in the Far North

Ottawa, Dec. 9.—Relief was manifest in official circles here to-day following the announcement that the Stefansson party was safe in winter quarters.

Somewhere within the confines of the Arctic Circle drifts Stefansson's staunch little vessel, the Karluk, safely frozen in an ice pack. But the leader of the expedition is not with his vessel and is unaware of its whereabouts, according to a despatch received from the explorer himself by Mr. George J. Desbarats, acting Deputy Minister of Naval Affairs and acting Minister of Marine and Fisheries. It will be recalled that a recent despatch from Seattle, Wash., reported the Karluk lost with all on board, while still later Stefansson was reported safe in winter quarters.

To-day's news sets at rest all rumors, for Stefansson's report gives full details of his trip to the date of October 30th.

In brief Stefansson's message states that, believing the Karluk safe in the ice in longitude west 147, fifteen miles off shore, he took a party ashore with him to hunt. The next day heavy gales sprang up, and a fog. When the weather cleared the Karluk was not in sight and had undoubtedly been carried away by the wind, which drove the ice pack off the shore.

So far the search for the Karluk has been unsuccessful, but as there is a crew of 25 men on board and plenty of provisions, no anxiety is felt for its welfare.

STARTING BUSH FIRES A SERIOUS CHARGE

Bancroft Times: Two young men named Hicks were arrested on Saturday last at a farm where they were stopping in the township of Wollaston, and brought to Bancroft, where they were charged with starting a fire in the township of Cardiff on Sept. 16th last, which destroyed a lot of valuable timber. They had been working for the Peterborough Lumber Company and were discharged, and it is alleged that the fires were started with malicious intent. Another brother, who was with them at the time, is also wanted. He is said to have served a two-year term on the Prison Farm, Guelph.

The charge was laid at the instance of Mr. Dane, fire ranger for the Peterborough Lumber Co., and Constable Bailey brought the prisoners in.

Since the above went into the hands of the compositor the prisoners, together with the one wanted came up for trial yesterday afternoon before Magistrate Jarman, they pleaded guilty, but were let out on suspended sentence, with the warning that they must settle down and get to work as respectable citizens. They were also ordered to pay the costs of the court and $85.00 to the Peterborough Lumber Co., which amounts to $96.00 in all, and in the meantime were given until the 15th of February, 1914, to get the necessary "green backs." They are to report to the Magistrate week by week until this amount is paid and in failing to do so will be taken in to custody again.

THE BURNHAM SHIELD PRESENTED TO NOMADS

In the Woodmen of the World hall yesterday evening, the Nomads' football club held a social evening. After a varied entertainment, in which Miss Greenhalgh, R. Hartley, J. Johns, C. Coleman and R. Dickson took part, Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., presented the Burnham Challenge Shield and medals won by the Glaziers team in the recent tournament. The winning team sang The Football Match Last Saturday. Refreshments and a dance closed the evening.

Superfluous hairs are easily and quickly removed with the aid of a delatone paste. Get an original package of delatone from your druggist and mix enough with water to cover the hairy surface. Apply and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash skin and the hairs are gone. No possible harm or injury follows this treatment, and excepting in rare instances only one application is required to remove every trace of hair. Results are more satisfactory when you get the delatone in an original package.

BIRMINGHAM GUN MAKES HARD HIT BY PROHIBITION

London, Dec. 9.—The pretence that Ulster was arming with obsolete weapons, intended only for show, is now being abandoned even by the Daily Chronicle, which last week declared on high authority that the rifles were only for a stage army. To-day it publishes a despatch telling of the shock caused by the prohibition proclamation to Birmingham gunmakers, who were doing a very large trade with Ireland.

The first shipments were made early this year, and since June rifles and pistols have been going out by many hundreds weekly. A rough estimate places the total number of rifles sent to Ireland at 35,000 to 40,000, exclusive of 20,000 pistols and revolvers. The rifles have not been all new ones. Large numbers were Italian weapons used in Tripoli. These were fitted with bayonets and shipped to Ireland.

CITY OF DUBLIN FACES SAD CHRISTMAS--WORK NOW RESUMED

Eighty Thousand on Verge of Starvation--Women Suffer the Most

Dublin, Dec. 10.—The eyes of strikers and the thousands dependent on them her were turned to the London conference to-day. The general opinion, even at Liberty Hall, was that the British Trade Unions would throw over syndicalism, and that food supplies and small financial assistance would be stopped. It would mean the collapse of the strike, but would not better the awful conditions, and the probability was that men led by desperate leaders would be urged to acts of violence and looting; which Dublin fears so much.

In a visit to the slums to-day I witnessed indescribable scenes of misery, foodless and fireless homes, talking graphically of the awful struggle starving women and children had been through the last fourteen weeks, and which now seemed to be all in vain. I was told to-day that there were nearly 80,000 people, who practically had been starving for the last three months. Many of them are used to poverty, such as is never seen in new countries, but this is worse than ever before. It is almost famine and there are no signs of relief insight.

MEMORY BLANK AND HE JOKES ABOUT POSSIBLE TALK

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 9.—"I may have a couple of children and I may not," said the aphasia victim at the Memorial Hospital to-day, when questioned in an effort to learn his identity.

"But wouldn't it be a terrible fate if some widow with six children should come along and claim me for her husband. This publicity has made me such a fine fellow that I almost fear the outcome."

The man has a keen sense of humor and has become the life of the hospital. Aside from his lapse of memory he is a well man and spends his time reading papers, magazines and books, and talking with the nurses and other attaches of the institution. He is as anxious to learn his real identity as are those interested in his case and have done everything to facilitate publicity.

Late yesterday he posed for a photographer and seemed exceedingly anxious to get the very best possible results and look natural in the picture. The man complains of a slight pain in his head and it has been kept in ice packs.

He did not appear to be so well to-day, it was stated at the hospital. He did not seem to have such a clear recollection of things that have happened at the hospital since he was admitted Sunday night, as he did yesterday, but with it all he takes the jovial manner that has won for him the sympathy and interest of all with whom he has come in contact.

His identity, however, is as much of a mystery now as it was when he was first admitted to the institution. He may have come from Toronto, and he may have come from Buffalo. Certain it is he has been in Toronto recently and he came to this city from Buffalo Sunday last.

Head-Work Wins

But mental activity is dependent for its success-making results upon the way both body and brain cells are fed.

Right feeding isn't a matter of quantity—most persons actually eat too much. But the selection of the right kind of food helps wonderfully to make men and women active and successful.

The fact is, some every-day articles of food are so lacking in certain food values as to make their common use more or less a menace to physical and mental well-being. (Constipation and a run-down physical condition are readily traced to this lack.)

Particularly is this true of food made from white flour, which is robbed of most of the mineral phosphates of the grain when the bran-coat is thrown out in the milling process. Scientists have long since recognized this menace to health, and many people are waking up to it.

Grape-Nuts

THE UMPIRE'S TASK A THANKLESS ONE

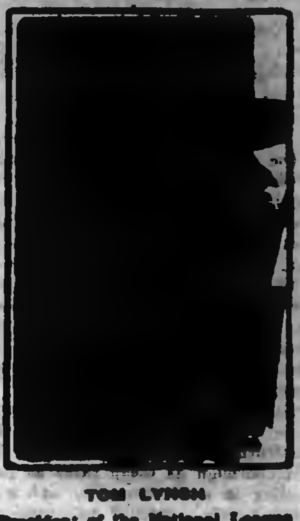
Grandstand Criticism Keeps the Job From Being Much Sought After

"The umpiring this year is the worst ever." Such is the gist of hundreds of letters I receive every year, President Lynch of the National League told an interviewer. Other presidents of baseball leagues are up against the same proposition.

"Why don't you get some young men to replace a lot of those blind men?" Such is the question I am continually asked from all quarters.

"Where did they get that busher? He is the worst I ever saw." Such is the opinion expressed by thousands, when I attempt to try out as umpire material, a youngster from the minor leagues.

The troubles of the umpires are the troubles of the president. When the staff of umpires is working smoothly, there is little to ruffle the presidential brow. Managers and club owners have a hard time digging up star players, but any man who has ever served as president of any baseball organization, will tell you that securing a staff of star umpires is practically impossible.



TOM LYNCH
President of the National League

While baseball is the same old game in the minors or majors, any umpire who has ever made the change, well knows that he has to start over again when he gets into the big league. No young umpire is ever labeled a good umpire. He is often said to "have promise," but seldom is he pronounced "ready."

The success of the umpire largely depends on the confidence of the player. Confidence is not established over night. New umpires don't become valuable until they have been in the majors three years.

There is a big field for men who can umpire. The salary is big and the possibilities large. I guess the old saying that umpires are born, not made, explains the dearth of baseball judges better than any other theory. At a ball game every person seems to know more about running the game than the men who are paid for their services in that line. It is one thing, however, to umpire a ball game from the stand, and another to judge plays on the field. It would be necessary to use the strongest kind of a stimulant to get one out of ten thousand who can umpire in the stand to officiate on he field.

Umpires are scarce because critics prefer to umpire from the grandstand. Jobs that pay from three to four thousand a summer would not go begging for want of talent if they were not hard to fill.

A VETERAN CRICKETER

The One and Only "W. G." Still in the Game

Although sixty-five years old, Dr. W. G. Grace is still a keen cricketer. Dr. Grace played in his first [illegible] match 56 years ago, and when only [illegible] appeared for the Gentlemen against the Players. In first-class cricket he has played no fewer than [illegible] innings—[illegible] in England and one in Australia—and in all kinds of cricket he has hit no fewer than 217 hundreds, a feat which no other cricketer has approached. He has played no fewer than 13 double-century innings in [illegible] matches, and in consecutive innings in 1876 he made [illegible], 177 and 318 not out. [illegible] when within two months of his 47th birthday, "W. G." scored 1,000 runs [illegible] May [illegible]. But perhaps the most remarkable performance of [illegible] was at [illegible] in May, [illegible], in a match between Kent and Gloucestershire. He was in the field [illegible] and scored 257 and 73 not out, his wonderful batting coupled with [illegible] bowling in the [illegible] of Kent, giving Gloucestershire a brilliant victory. Dr. Grace has also on seven occasions accomplished the double feat of scoring 1,000 runs and taking 100 wickets in one season. It has been well and truly said that he is the greatest cricketer who ever played, and that we cannot hope to see his like again.

How to Have a Succession of Vegetables That Will Please

The ideal farm garden should be about 120 by [illegible] feet, the rows should run north and south so that each row will get full benefit of both the morning and evening sun. It should always be near the house on rich, well drained land. It should contain every vegetable and small fruit that can be successfully grown in the locality. Don't grow flowers or shrubs in this garden. Every farm should have these too, but not in the vegetable garden.

Keep every foot of the garden busy throughout the growing season. Sweet corn, beans, tomatoes, celery, endive and turnips can follow such early crops as beets, lettuce, radishes and peas. The revenue will be doubled and the land will be none the worse for the double cropping.

The Jockey's Joke

Of Fred Allsopp, the jockey whose death was recently announced, and an Irish friend of his, a good story is related. The jockey told his Irish friend that he had a good chance of winning a race on the morrow, but he must not tell anyone. Next day when his particular race came on a bookmaker was staggered by a young gentleman rushing up to him in a state of excitement and saying, "Put me two pounds on."

"Hi!" yelled the bookmaker, "you have not mentioned on what."

But the youth had gone. The horse won all right, and when the youth went up to draw his winnings the bookmaker expostulated.

"But, you simpleton, you mentioned no horse!"

"No," was the ingenuous reply. "Sure Mr. Allsopp warned me not to tell anyone about it."

Found Glacial Boulder

A glacial boulder, weighing something approaching ten tons, was unearthed in a sandpit on Ickniield street, Birmingham, and has claimed a great deal of attention from scientists. This huge block of volcanic ash, which is authoritatively held to have made a glacial descent from the Arenig Mountains in Wales, is the largest of several discovered in the Birmingham neighborhood. Boulders of similar origin discovered during the construction of the Cotteridge Park have been suitably preserved, and a notable specimen is a familiar object in Cannon Hill Park. Professor Lapworth pronounces the huge boulder to be an exceptionally fine geological specimen.

"A Progressive Peterborough".

Our Point of View

It seems that some new society is formed every week, but what the world needs is a Society for the Supression of Foolish Societies.

December came in mild and springlike, but it doesn't mean that we are to have a mild and balmy winter. The chances are that ahead of us there is many a trip between the back steps and the coal shed.

From London comes the news that Lord Headley has become a Moslem and changed his name to Saifur Rehman Sheikh Rehmatullah Farooq. This will mean that his friends will take a day off when they address him a letter.

Gentlemen, be seated. Bones, why is a communication received on the first of the month like one of our mayoralty candidates? Because it is the same old Bill. Correct. Mr. Geordie Gillespie, the famous tenor, will now favor us, in his own inimitable way, with that charming ballad entitled, "Oh Willie, We Will Miss You" (in next year's Council.)

THE "FREE FOOD" BOGEY.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech at Hamilton was full of blunders that any wideawake schoolboy would have avoided. The Grit leader is notoriously helpless when dealing with statistics or even with the broad outlines of any economic question. His inability to add two and two without making a total of three or five is well known to Parliament. His talk about free food was pure bunk.

He proposes to help the consumer without hurting the manufacturer.

He proposes to help the consumer and take care of the manufacturer without hurting the farmer.

He proposes to take care of the manufacturer and farmer and still help the consumer. How? By the removal of the duties on food! Look at it. Turn it over. What does it mean?

The cost of living is to be reduced by the removal of duties on foodstuffs. The removal of duties on foodstuffs is the cardinal feature of the new United States tariff, and the cost of living has not been reduced in the United States. Think it over.

The United States took off the duties on food stuffs because they wanted foodstuffs. If, by this means they have not sufficiently increased their supply to affect the prices of food in the United States, where are they going to get the food products to send to Canada? Think it over.

But if the removal of duties on foodstuffs would mean the bringing in of a supply from the United States, and from other countries, what would be the result? The Canadian farmer and producer would lose his home market. In rejecting the reciprocity pact he preserved his home market. If the bringing in of foodstuffs from the United States or other countries does not mean anything to the Canadian farmer's home market, then it means nothing to the Canadian consumer. And Sir Wilfrid Laurier says he means no harm to the Canadian farmer.

But what if the Liberal leader did have his way and succeed in tearing down the measure of protection under which the Canadian market is to some extent preserved to the Canadian farmer, what would be the next step? The next step would be the removal of duties on manufactures.

Sir Wilfrid would not be in a position to keep his promise to the manufacturer and not break his promise to the farmer. He would have to keep them both or break them both. What would he do? He has a record as a promise-breaker. To that end his policies have always led him. To that end this latest policy would lead him. He is too old to change his ways. Moreover, he has made three promises. It is impossible to keep any one of them without breaking the other two. Perhaps the promise most easily broken would be the one which he has made to the consumer. The whole truth is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier cares nothing about the consumer or about free food. He wants office and the fruits of office. He is the only consumer over whose personal comfort he is concerned.

If Breathing is Difficult, If Nostrils are Plugged, You Have Catarrh

Perhaps you haven't heard of the new remedy—it's so pleasant to use—fills the nose, throat and lungs with a healing balsamic vapor like the air of the pine woods. It's really a wonderful remedy—at, least that marvelous antiseptic only found in the Blue Gum tree of Australia.

The name of this grand specific is Catarrhozone, and you can't find its equal on earth for coughs, colds, catarrh or throat trouble. You see it's not longer necessary to drug the stomach—that spoils digestion—just simply inhale the balsamic essence of Catarrhozone, which are so rich in healing that they drive out every trace of Catarrh in no time.

"I look upon Catarrhozone as the most valuable medical discovery of recent years," writes R. V. Potter, of Prince Albert. "As a long sufferer from nasal and throat catarrh I was obliged to take considerable medicine, and, although it helped me, my digestion was always disturbed and the catarrh didn't go away. With Catarrhozone it was different. It cleared my nose and throat of all phlegm and discharges, enabled me to breathe freely, relieved a stuffy feeling in my nose and frontal headaches. To-day I am entirely free from catarrh, and I use my Catarrhozone Inhaler a little every day in order to prevent the disease from returning."

With Catarrhozone experimenting ends. A permanent curative action begins. Lasting relief from Catarrh results. The large size costs $1.00, last two months and is guaranteed. Small size 50c.; sample size 25c. All storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

FARMERS BANK SHARES WERE TRANSFERRED TO A MAN WHO HAD NO INTENTION TO PAY

Witnesses Testify as to Manipulation of English Viscount's Stock—Lord Templetown May be Examined

Toronto, Dec. 10.—The Minute Book of the Farmers' Bank, the Stock Transfer Book and the Stock Subscriber Book, were exhibits placed before Referee Kappele this morning in an application to have Viscount Templetown declared a shareholder in the wrecked bank and subject to the double liability. The Stock Cash Book and a signed application were also submitted. Viscount Templetown, said Mr. George Clarkson had subscribed for 100 shares at $125 a share on June 12th, 1907.

William Richard Travers was the first witness called. He testified that he knew Lord Templetown, who was a shareholder in the bank. He identified his lordship's signature to an application for stock. The shares were alloted to Lord Templeton. One June 24th, 1907, he had paid $1,000 on capital account and $250 on premium account. A further entry showed additional $1,400 on capital and $350 on premium account.

GIRLS! STOP WASHING THE HAIR WITH SOAP

Soap Dries the Scalp, Causing Dandruff, Then Hair Falls Out—Try This Next Time.

After washing your hair with soap always apply a little Danderine to the scalp to invigorate the hair and prevent dryness. Better still, use soap as sparingly as possible, and instead have a "Danderine Hair Cleanse." Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one strand at a time. This will remove dust, dirt and excessive oil. In a few moments you will be amazed, your hair will not only be clean, but it will be wavy, fluffy and abundant, and possess an incomparable softness and lustre.

Besides cleansing and beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; stimulates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair. Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow long, strong and beautiful.

Men! Ladies! You can surely have lots of charming hair. Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it.

MR. W. H. HILL RETIRES.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—As the time of the annual municipal elections is drawing near, and especially as I have been asked by a number of ratepayers to again be a candidate for the position of Water Commissioner, will you kindly permit me to say in your columns that I have decided to retire from that Commission. I regret doing so very much, and one of my chief reasons for regret is that it will end the relations that have existed so long and so pleasantly between myself and the other Commissioners. I have been on the Board with Mr. Matthews for twelve and with Mr. Moore for ten years, and I am thoroughly satisfied that two more conscientious administrators of the work could not have been obtained. I shall feel a deep interest in this part of the city's business, but my personal business requires much more attention, so much that I would not be able to give the time that I should to the duties of the office, and I do not wish to ask to be returned knowing that I could not give the time that it will require.

I have served 18 years on the Board of Management of the Waterworks, six years as a Director of the Peterborough Water Company and twelve years as a Water Commissioner for the city, and I desire to heartily thank the ratepayers for their generous support during these twelve years.

Very respectfully yours,

W. H. HILL.

MILK! MILK!
How many have become poor by buying inferior articles because they are cheap? This is false economy. The same applies to milk as well as any other commodity. Our milk costs a little more than other milk but the "quality" is there and it is cheaper in the end. Try it and find out. Many tell us they have proven this fact. Have you?

The Branch at Gretna, Man., destroyed by fire, was not re-opened.

The Shareholders are aware that the Bank Act has been under revision for some time past, and a new act, as revised, went into force on 1st July, 1913. The main changes are:—

In the published statements the condition of the Bank is shown in greater detail than formerly.

The establishment of "Central Gold Reserves," where the Bank can deposit gold or Dominion Notes and increase its circulation by a similar amount when necessary.

Under Section 56 of the new Act you are required at this meeting to appoint Auditors for the Bank and to vote the amount of their remuneration.

With deep regret the Directors have to record the death of Mr. James Ross, who has been a member of the Board for nearly fourteen years. The vacancy caused thereby was filled by the election of Mr. William McMaster.

The Directors have also to record with much regret the resignation of Mr. R. B. Angus as President of the Bank, owing to his advancing years. His association with the Bank will, however, be continued as a Director. Mr. H. V. Meredith was elected to succeed him as President, remaining also Chief Executive Officer.

All the offices of the Bank, including the head office, have been inspected during the year.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Meredith, in moving that the report of the directors and the statement, as read, be adopted and the same be printed for distribution among the shareholders, said:—

Gentlemen,—In moving the adoption of the Directors' Report, I will refer to the changes which have taken place during the year, in the Balance sheet, a copy of which has been submitted you, before alluding to general conditions. The bank has experienced another good year [illegible] The Authorized Capital [illegible] $25,000,000, the Paid-up Capital [illegible] $16,000,000, and the Rest [illegible] $16,000,000. [illegible] bringing that balance up to $1,046,217.80, and there has been set aside for Bank Premises Account during the year an amount of $485,000. A Bonus of 1 per cent. was paid to shareholders on 1st June, and 1st December over and above the quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent.

Deposits not bearing interest remain practically unchanged. Interest bearing deposits show an increase of $[illegible]. A portion of these is always of a temporary nature, but I am pleased to say that, notwithstanding the fact that considerable sums have been withdrawn during the year for investment at the tempting rates prevailing, the aggregate of the Savings Bank deposits has been well maintained.

Turning to our assets, the current loans and discounts in Canada and elsewhere and other assets, amounting to $134,160,000, show an increase of $15,000,000, caused by taking on new business and by the increased legitimate requirements of our customers. Investments in railway and other bonds are $12,[illegible]. Bank premises, Montreal and branches, remain at $4,000,000. Call and other loans in Great Britain and the United States are $51,300,000, against $65,150,000 a year ago, which difference, with $8,000,000 withdrawn from [illegible] correspondents and agencies of the Bank outside of Canada, has been used to provide for the increased demands of our Canadian customers mentioned above. Our bills payable amount to $919,366, as compared with $1,717,000 as at the same date last year. At that time, however, the amount was shown as a contingent liability instead of being included in the General Statement, as at present.

The delayed decennial revision of the Bank Act was finally completed at the last session of Parliament. On the whole, the new measure may be characterized not only as workable as preserving the fundamental principles of past laws, but as well designed to promote and safeguard the interests of the public, which, I need scarcely add, are identical with the interests of the Bank.

As the measure was a non-contentious one, I think I am at liberty to add my tribute of praise to the Finance Minister, Hon. W. T. White, for the very capable manner in which he supervised the revision of the Act. Throughout the protracted discussion of the Bill, he exhibited a thorough grasp of the subject and a keen desire to make the measure conform as fully as possible to the needs of the public, the safety and stability of the banks.

The General Situation.

In regard to the general situation, the year 1913 may be truly described as a memorable one. In Great Britain it has been distracted and disappointing. The demands of borrowing countries, both old and new, have outrun capital supplies, and there has been an ever increasing difficulty in obtaining loans, however sound the security might be, and, when obtainable, the rates and terms have been far more onerous than for many years past.

As is well known, there have been several factors combining to produce these stringent conditions, the Balkan War and record public flotations, which in London alone totalled not less than £200,000,000 to the end of October, exclusive of special borrowings and treasury bills, of which no less an amount than £54,000,000 were Canadian emissions. Then there has been world-wide trade activity, a rise in the price of commodities, coupled with serious political disturbances in France and Germany, and the continuous and heavy gold demands of such importing countries as Argentina, Brazil, Egypt, and India, heavier requirements for home trade in Great Britain, and accumulations by joint stock banks in their private vaults. Added to all this, the position was aggravated by the prolongation of the Balkan War, and social unrest in England.

In France the economic position has been less favorite than usual. The severe political shocks I have mentioned occasioned a withdrawal of funds from Germany, and hoarding has been continuous and constant. A vast aggregation of loans to finance the Balkan states and for increased home armaments still await flotation. In Germany, the situation shows a marked betterment in the improved condition of the Reichsbank and a curtailment of that country's excessive trade activities.

In the United States conditions throughout that country are thought to be fundamentally sound. Politics have affected business activities, and with the exception of wheat, there is a shortage of crops throughout the country. A disposition to go slow and not to make commitments beyond actual requirements is apparent, so that no undue strain is likely to take place but, rather, an era of economy, which should have a beneficial effect on the situation generally. The money situation has proved to be of greater ease than was at one time expected, and the usual fall stringency has not so far materialized. The principal cause for the prolonged ease may, I think, be put down to the early preparations to meet the continuance of dear money, the slowing down in general business, and the depositing of Government funds in the banks of the West and South, thereby relieving the Western banks of a portion of the burden of financing the crops, for which they had been prepared.

The conditions in Great Britain and abroad which I have endeavored to outline will no doubt take time to ameliorate, and improvement will probably be brought about by reduced trade activity gradually releasing money for investment purposes and hoarded funds; but the process will of necessity be slow.

I have thought it well to make these somewhat extended remarks in regard to general conditions in other and neighboring countries, as these have an important bearing upon existing conditions here.

Trade of Canada.

The returns of the foreign trade of Canada are not unsatisfactory. Imports are falling off, in consequence of the monetary situation and the curtailment of foreign loans. In October the value of imports of merchandise was $6,064,000 less than in the corresponding month in 1912, while for the seven months ending October, the value of imports was only $4,300,000 in excess of last year. On the other hand, the export trade is expanding, the value of domestic products exported in October having been $23,300,000 in excess of the same month a year ago, and the exports for the seven months, $49,350,000 greater than in 1912. The aggregate foreign trade of Canada for the seven months ending with October was $636,094,000 as against $582,444,000 a year ago, showing a gain of $53,650,000, and in this period the excess of imports over domestic exports has been cut down from $190,000,000 to $145,000,000. This trend of foreign trade is likely to continue for some time. The balance of foreign trade, as you are aware, has been heavily against Canada during the past decade. In the last six fiscal years, imports exceeded exports in value by $850,000,000, and this considerable gap has been made, in certain quarters, the subject of adverse criticism of this country. It is to be borne in mind, however, that in this period, Canada has obtained immense sums of money from Great Britain for development purposes of various kinds, which money has been imported largely in the form of merchandise paid for out of the proceeds of long-term loans. Now, while these loans must ultimately be liquidated from the earning power of this expenditure, I may point out that meanwhile, only the interest charge has to be met; in other words, the excess of imports representative of the proceeds of long-term borrowing has to be balanced only to the extent of the interest of the loans. This is not indeed, the whole conclusion of the many-sided subject, into which a variety of considerations enter. We cannot moreover, expect to go on widening the gap between imports and exports indefinitely. Our annual interest charge on British and foreign loans is already a formidable item, to be provided either by exports or new borrowings. While monetary conditions abroad remain as at present, the stream of fresh capital will run less freely towards Canada.

The recent reduction in the tariff of the United States can hardly fail to enlarge the markets of that country to Canadian products. Many agricultural items such as eggs, milk, live stock, are now on the American free list; so are lumber, timber, fish, meats, coal and many manufactured articles made in Canada. Already the movement of these articles to our neighbor's markets in increased volume has begun, some advance in prices has resulted therefrom, and there appears no reason to doubt that our sales to the United States will augment in future.

Immigration returns have continued to be of a highly satisfactory character, both in regard to number and desirability. The figures for the year ending 30th September, 1913, reached a total of 436,800 souls, of whom 133,-800 were from the United States and the remainder from European countries, principally Great Britain.

The value of the field crops in Canada this year at present prices is estimated at $560,000,000, or approximately the value of the crop of the preceding year.

Legitimate Trade Good.

In view of the foregoing, it is not surprising to find that legitimate business generally in Canada continues to be in a satisfactory condition. There are no signs of trade depression, though a slowing down in many branches of trade is in evidence, and there is a disposition to confine commitments to actual requirements. More economy is being exercised than has been the case for some time past. The flow of money which came in great volumes in the past few years from the British Islands and abroad, both for investments and for speculative purposes, and created a somewhat unhealthy expansion, has met with a outbreak of land speculation in the check. It had much to do with the West, which, owing in a measure to a wise provision of the Bank Act, was limited to individuals and has not affected the country generally in an adverse manner to any appreciable extent. Advantage was unfortunately taken of the ease with which money could be obtained and of the popularity of Canadian securities in Great Britain by certain individuals on both sides of the Atlantic to exploit the London market with securities of a doubtful nature, to their own advantage, and some of these enterprises, owing to over capitalization or incompetent management or both, have met with disaster, causing suspicion to be cast on many undertakings of a [illegible] sound character seeking capital. There has been a collapse of the land speculation in the West of which I have spoken. Municipal expenditure has been restricted to actual necessities and with due regard to the ability of the municipality to find a market for its securities. In this connection, it may be noted that the American market has relieved the situation in London and in Canada by purchasing, in the first ten months of the year, a sum of no less than $29,000,000 of our municipal, industrial, corporation and public utility bonds, without taking into consideration an amount difficult to estimate sold through Canadian brokers.

Province of Ontario.

Viewing the country by sections, in the Province of Ontario, the year, as a whole, may be said to have been satisfactory. Crops have been a full average and the farmers prosperous. Manufacturing industries in general have had a fair year and a considerable amount of American capital is coming into the Province. The rural population, unfortunately, continues to slowly decrease, while among the cities, Toronto with a present estimated population of 485,000, shows an estimated increase of 63,000 souls.

Province of Quebec.

General conditions throughout the province have been good. Crops have been up to the average. Hay, the chief crop, turned out better than at first anticipated, and other crops have been satisfactory both as to quantity and price. Among manufacturing industries, the cotton industry has had a good year. Other manufacturers have hardly done so well. The year has been a good one for lumber, both as regards demand and price, and it is anticipated that the recent removal of the United States duty should further increase the profits of the business. It is thought not unlikely that one result of the removal of the duty will be to give a further impetus to the increasing proportion of lumber shipped to the United States instead of Great Britain and Europe. Pulpwood and paper shipments have been large both from Canada and Newfoundland. With regard to this industry it would be well that care be exercised in order that production may not exceed the demand.

Maritime Provinces

General condition throughout the Maritime Provinces for the past year have been uniformly satisfactory. The farmers have had a favorable year and all crops, apart from fruit, have been above the average. The fishing has been good, with higher prices, and the lumber cut was fair, and prices, on the whole, satisfactory. The output of the coal mines has exceeded all previous records; and the tonnage of pig iron produced was 25 per cent. greater than last year. Manufacturing industries generally, have had an output up to the average. Railway building has not been extensive, but large sums are to be expended in providing terminals at St. John and Halifax for the Intercolonial Railway and in establishing a car ferry with Prince Edward Island.

In Newfoundland the high prices obtained for fish have induced a period of prosperity. The building of branch lines of railway, the development of the mining of iron ore at Belle Isle, and the growth of the pulp and paper industry have all improved conditions.

North-West Provinces

Although business affairs are rapidly becoming more diversified, the production of wheat and other cereals is, of course, first in importance. The crop this year has been larger in quantity and better in quality than ever before but the price at present is somewhat lower than at the corresponding date last year. The comparative crop figures are:

	1912 Bushels	1913 Bushels
Wheat	183,000,000	190 to 195,000,000
Oats	221,000,000	240,000,000
Barley	26,000,000	28,000,000
Flax	21,000,000	15,000,000

and the estimated value of the 1913 crop is $200,000,000, against $192,-000,000 in 1912.

The immense additions to mileage made by the Railway Companies, especially the Canadian Pacific Railway, in double tracking and terminals and rolling stock, have enabled this enormous crop to be delivered with unprecedented rapidity. The rapid growth of population and the springing up of new towns have continued. The population of the three North-West Provinces, according to the census of 1911, was about 1,300,-000, and is now placed at 1,600,000, and the immigration generally is a high class, a satisfactory feature being that two-thirds of the population are rural.

The method of harvesting the North west crops will in time, no doubt, be reduced to a more systematic basis. In past seasons farmers have rushed their wheat to market in the short period intervening between harvest and the close of navigation on the Great Lakes, thereby producing more or less congestion of the markets to their own loss. An amelioration of this condition has begun by the provision of greater storage accommodation, not only at the lake ports, but what is more to the purpose, at interior points, where the Government, as well as private corporations and individuals, are proceeding with the erection of elevators at the principal grain producing centres. In this way, local markets will be created for the farmers where the grain can be readily disposed of. Mixed farming continues to be an urgent need of the Northwest. I am pleased, however, to observe a betterment in this respect. From the figures which have been furnished me, there has been an increase in the past five years of 840,000 in the number of horses, cattle, sheep and swine. It is a matter of regret that the returns from the other [illegible] do not exhibit a similar satisfactory increase, but rather a diminution.

British Columbia.

The province generally has not been as prosperous as in 1912. The salmon fishing season has been a good average and the pack has been sold at remunerative prices. The same may be said of the halibut and herring fishing, and the free admission of British Columbia fish to the United States will be of advantage to the trade. Conditions in the lumber trade have been very unsatisfactory. The prairie demand has been poor and the prices so much lower than in 1912, that it is a question if many of the mills have made money. The foreign lumber trade has fallen off both in volume and in price, and the free admission of lumber to the United States is not likely to be of much benefit, as the lumber states on the American side of the line can supply their own market. Mining has probably given the most satisfactory results of any industry in the province, the product of the mines increasing in value $6,000,000 over the preceding year. The total mineral output was over $[illegible],000,000, of which coal and copper contributed respectively, say, $9,000,000 and $8,-000,000. Crops have been good and prices satisfactory. The fruit industry in the Okanagan and other districts has realized higher prices and market arrangements have been improved. New Railway construction has only been undertaken to a moderate extent and new power development has consisted chiefly of extensions, designed to supply the City of Vancouver. The stringent money conditions which have existed throughout the year have checked new enterprises of all kinds, especially municipal undertakings, and the probability is that there will be considerable unemployment during the coming winter.

Mexico.

In Mexico, general conditions continue to be disturbed, and the outcome is impossible to predict. We feel that our interests there are in safe and capable hands.

Words of Confidence.

My last words are of counsel and confidence. The finger of prudence points to a policy of conservatism. While the financial sky remains clouded over in Europe, we shall do well to hasten slowly. It is not a time to attempt enterprises of a speculative nature, nor to undertake new commitments prior to the financing thereof, and an accumulation of stock by merchants and manufacturers should, as far as possible, be avoided. The excellent harvest, particularly in the Northwest, should do much towards liquidating debts and ameliorating the situation, but it seems probable we will be compelled to pause awhile in the wonderful progress of expansion of the last ten years. On the other hand, the commercial condition of Canada is fundamentally sound. Business as a whole, as I have said, continues good. Our vast natural resources have scarcely been scratched. Immigration is large, railway construction active, new territory and new resources of wealth, are being steadily opened, the confidence of British and foreign capitalists in our country is unabated. A temporary halt can only refresh Canada for yet greater achievements.

Mr. R. B. Angus seconded the motion for adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously.

The chairman stated that, under the provision of the new Bank Act, it would be necessary for the meeting to appoint three auditors.

Mr. C. R. Hosmer thereupon moved, and Mr. Huntly Drummond seconded, that there be appointed three auditors of the Bank to hold office until the next annual general meeting, and that this meeting do now proceed to their nomination and appointment.

Mr. C. B. Gordon moved, and Mr. Wm. McMaster seconded, that the remuneration of the auditors to be appointed be not more than $15,000, to be divided equally between them (or to be otherwise divided as may be thought best).

The following nominations were made: By Mr. J. B. Learmont, Mr. George Hyde, C.A., of Montreal; by Mr. G. L. Ogilvie (in the absence of Mr. Bartlett McLennan), Mr. J. Maxtone Graham, C.A., of Edinburgh; by Mr. W. R. Blackader (in the absence of Mr. W. Stanway), Mr. James Hutchison, C.A., of Montreal.

Mr. Meredith mentioned that he would deposit one ballot, representing the directors and other shareholders who had sent him their proxies, which was all that would be necessary, unless any shareholder wished to deposit a ballot himself. The ballot was unanimous.

It was moved by Mr. J. B. Learmont and seconded by Dr. H. B. Yates, that the thanks of this meeting be presented to the president and Directors for their attention to the interests of the bank.

Mr. R. B. Angus, in reply, on behalf of the President and Directors, expressed in a few well-chosen words their appreciation of the thanks tendered them.

Mr. David Morrice moved that the thanks of the meeting be given to the General Manager, Assistant General Manager, the Superintendents, the Managers, and other Officers of the Bank, for their services during the past year. In speaking to the motion, Mr. Morrice expressed in the highest terms his appreciation of the Bank officials he had met in his long experience covering a great part of the country, and said he had no hesitation whatever in presenting this motion rendering thanks to the management and Staff of the Bank.

Mr. D. Forbes Angus seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. William H. Evans moved, and Mr. Charles Chaput seconded, "that the shareholders at this annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal learn with deep regret of the resignation of Mr. R. B. Angus from the Presidency of the Bank, and desire to express their keen appreciation of his long and faithful services in the interests of the Bank. The Shareholders, however, sincerely hope that Mr. Angus will co-operate with his co-directors for many years to come."

Mr. Chaput, in seconding, said that the motion was a well-deserved compliment to Mr. Angus.

Returning thanks, Mr. Angus said: "I thank you for that expression of your goodwill."

Mr. Braithwaite, said that he desired, on behalf of the Staff, to thank the shareholders for the very kind expression of appreciation of their services, and he thanked Mr. Morrice especially for the very kind words he had spoken. The prosperity of the Bank must always be to a large degree depending upon the outside managers and the rank and file officers of the Bank. "I can assure you," he added, "of my own knowledge of the absolute loyalty and devotion of the staff to the interests of the Bank, and of the hard work done by them. I cordially thank you, and assure you that you have a staff second to none."

Election of Directors.

The result of the ballot for the election of Directors was declared by the Chairman as follows: Messrs. R. B. Angus, D. Forbes Angus, A. Baumgarten, Huntly R. Drummond, C. B. Gordon, E. B. Greenshields, C. R. Hosmer, Sir William C. Macdonald, Hon. Robert Mackay, Messrs. Wm. McMaster, H. V. Meredith, D. Morrice, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O.; Right Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G.; G.C.V.O.

The meeting then terminated.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors the following officers were elected: Hon. President, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal; President, Mr. H. V. Meredith.

HERE IS SHOWN A WRAP SUITED TO BOTH DAY AND EVENING WEAR

Frocks of white velvet, corduroy and duvetyn trimmed with white fox or narrow strips of sable or skunk are very modish and very effective. For general wear, however, a costume of this kind would hardly be practical, but for the woman who can afford it the suggestion is alluring. Many of the smartest frocks are fur trimmed; it may only be a collar but it adds to the effect.

White cloth is used to develop 8093. The collar is of white fox and the only other decorations are the large buttons and the wide stitched seams and belt. This frock is very simple in line and may be copied in size 36 with 4½ yards of 36 inch material.

In 7763 the effect is brought about entirely by the cut and the trimming.

A dull red velvet is the fabric, and the collar and loops hanging stole ends are of Oriental embroidery, showing tints of violet and threads of gold. Some wonderful designs are shown in these embroideries, which are gaining in popularity daily. Chinese, Egyptian and conventionalized designs offer exquisite color combinations.

This coat may be made in size 36 with [illegible] yards of [illegible] inch material and [illegible] yards of banding.

No. 8093—sizes 34 to 42.
No. 7763—sizes 32, 36, 40 and 44.
Each pattern 15 cents.

To obtain either pattern illustrated fill out this coupon and enclose 15 cents in stamps or coin. Be sure to state number of pattern and size, measuring over the fullest part of the bust. Address Pattern Department, care of this paper.

FOLDING ELECTION BOOTHS

Group Collapses Into Flat Space Like Ordinary Screen

New York State has adopted the folding election booth shown in the illustration. These folding booths are hinged together at backs and sides like the ordinary folding screen and collapse in just the same way. They have swinging doors in front which fold in flat and the writing desks fold up against the backs of the booths when not in use. When collapsed a whole group of booths take up no more space than a space the height and width of one booth and about a foot through.

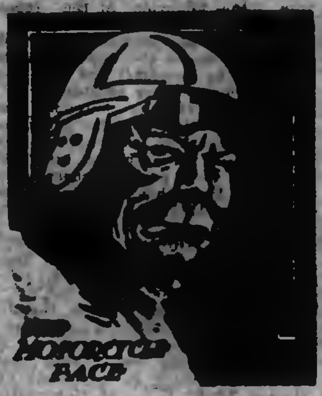
A HAZARDOUS SPORT



The whir-r-r-r of a motorcycle, tipped at an angle of 30 degrees and traveling at the rate of 100 miles an hour on a board track, is the music which sounds sweetest to the speed demon.

Motorcycle racing is the most hazardous of all racing—the last word in the mania for speed. Although only a few years old, this sport, dangerous as can be imagined, nerve-racking in the extreme, has taken deep root.

It has the same peculiar hold on racers it has on spectators. They cannot withstand it. Although they realize that for them death lurks at every turn they can scarcely be dragged off the track at the finish of a race. Excitement for them is life, and in motorcycle racing they find it in the unadulterated form.

Speed, speed and still more speed is the demand of the day. Riders are trying their best to satisfy the demand. Already there have been miles ridden in less than 37 seconds, but neither riders nor spectators are satisfied. They want a speed of a mile in 30 seconds, and believe that they will attain it.

PO T?D IN THE DOCK

Vagaries of Persian Tongue Responsible For Lost Letters

The difficulties of the Post Office in the Persian Gulf are aggravated by the Persian language, which [illegible] the word "poost," as colloquially pronounced, with considerable ambiguity of meaning.

"Poos" means a dock or anchorage; "poost" signifies hides, skins, or leather, and is also the term for the post-office. On the coast the final "t" is dropped, and "poos" therefore has to do duty in three capacities.

A merchant at Lingah complained that his letters were being lost, and a servant was asked what he had been doing with them.

"The first week," was the reply, "when you told me to carry the letters to the poost I went to the [illegible] and was putting them among the poost (meaning leather and skins), but the sahib said I should carry them to the Poost-e-Sarkar (meaning the big or British post-office). Then I took them to the Poost Bandar (big dock) and threw them in. The first time there was plenty of water, but the [illegible] the water was low, and I had to dig a hole in the sand for them."

Lullaby

Fair is the castle upon the hill—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!
The night is fair and the waves are still,
And the wind is singing to you and me
In this lowly home beside the sea—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!

On yonder hill is store of wealth—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!
And revellers drink to a little one's health,
But you and I bide right and day
For the other love that has sailed away—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!

See not, dear eyes, the forms that creep
Ghostlike, oh, my own!
Out of the mists of the murmuring deep;
Oh, see them not and make no cry
Till the angels of death have passed us by—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!

Oh, little they reck of you and me—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!
In our our lonely home beside the sea;
They seek the castle upon the hill,
And there they will do their ghastly will—
Hushaby, oh, my own!

Here by the sea a mother croons:
"Hushaby, sweet, my own!"
In yonder castle a mother swoons
While angels go down in the misty deep,
Bearing a little one fast asleep—
Hushaby, sweet, my own!

Cigarettes Popular

Canadian people are consuming more tobacco and drinking more beer and spirits year by year, but the increase is not remarkable [illegible] regards cigarettes. About two hundred million more cigarettes were smoked last year than in the previous twelvemonth.

The inland revenue department in a statement showed that the consumption of tobacco, including cigarettes, was [illegible] pounds per head for the year and the number of cigarettes smoked was [illegible]. This, at least, was the number the department's records showed as having been imported or produced at home.

The Crown of Greece

[illegible] historical relics have been kept at the [illegible] monastery of Lavra. The crown is [illegible] in solid gold, and weighs 35 pounds. The crown is enriched with precious stones. This crown will probably become the crown of Greece.

THE DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH from a picture taken at the Longchamps race course near Paris.

The successful jockey has always been the object of a certain amount of hero worship, and in receipt of very substantial remuneration. In England, says a writer in the Birmingham Post, a jockey is paid not less than $25 for a winning mount and $15 for a losing mount, but these sums afford little indication of what is the aggregate income of a leading jockey, although it can easily be ascertained by adding up the number of mounts, successful and unsuccessful, that he is in receipt of an extremely good income, often approaching $10,000, and sometimes exceeding that amount to a substantial extent. The following return is interesting as showing the annual income, on mounts alone, of the older school of jockeys: S. Loates, $15,075; "Morny" Cannon $11,670; W. Bradford, $10,000; G. Barrett, $9,000; F. Allsopp, $8,000, and so on down the line.

The sums received for mounts however, do not afford any reliable indication of a jockey's income. Danny Maher earned something like $7,500 on his mounts alone in one season, but he could have dispensed with this sum and still have had a comfortable income to his credit. His retaining fees are large and he rides only for the leading stables and most prominent owners. The same might be said of F. Wootton and A. Whalley.

Big Retaining Fees

The jockey obtains, of course, his chief revenue from retaining fees. These are paid by the owners of racehorses for the right to the jockey's services when they are required, and there are several cases in which one jockey is in receipt of retaining fees from two or more owners amongst whom there is an understood order of preference. The retaining fees to-day, as in the case of Huxley, are frequently $5,000 or more a year; $2,500 is quite a common amount for a second call, and a similar sum is often paid for the privilege of commanding a jockey's services in the event that the first and second claims are not made. In addition, many leading jockeys earn from $1,000 to $4,000 a year by riding "trainers' trials."

Fred Archer received prodigious sums when in the height of his fame. For instance, when he won the Cesarewitch on Rosebery he received from the owner $5,000, and on winning the memorable race for the Derby of 1880, when Bend Or snatched victory at the post from "Robert the Devil," his gift from the owner, the Duke of Devonshire, was $2,500. [illegible] that amount was doubled when [illegible] years later, Archer won the Derby a second time for his Grace.

Other Big Presents

John Watts got $10,000 from Mr. Abington for steering "Merry Hampton" to victory in the Derby of 1887, and a similar amount from Lord Rosebery when he won on "Ladas," in 1894. J. Daley received an even larger sum when he won the Derby in 1867 from 29 other competitors, on Mr. H. Chaplin's "Hermit."

The largest sum from one person is said to have been received by Wells [illegible] in 1868, after winning the Derby on "Blue Gown," he was presented by Sir Joseph Hawley with the whole of the Derby stakes of [illegible]. Wells had twice previously won the Derby.

In recent years it has been the custom with owners to give a big cheque, seldom less than $5,000, to the jockey winning for them one of the chief events of the year. Tod Sloan had phenomenal success on the English racecourse, and his earnings in his first memorable season were probably not less than $75,000.

Gifts From Outside

Again, presents figure largely in the incomes of jockeys, and it is said that during one week of brilliant riding Sloan received $5,000 in gifts from known and anonymous admirers. The outside public are extremely generous to jockeys who have been instrumental in landing for them big stakes. In fact, gamblers are proverbially good natured—liberal to a degree if money comes their way. Money comes and goes easily.

Grafting an Aroma

German scientists claim to have taken bacteria from tobacco produced in one part of the world, inoculated another kind with them and imitated in the latter the flavor and aroma of the former.

Washing the Cars

A vertical cylindrical brush, as high as a railroad car, driven by an electric motor and supplied with water as it revolves, has been invented for quickly washing the exterior of railroad rolling stock.

THE HOAXER HOAXED

Captain Koepenick in Turn Swindled by Mock Officials

Wilhelm Voigt, the notorious shoemaker of Koepenick, known as Germany's champion hoaxer, was cleverly duped in a manner that recalls his own famous exploits.

While he was strolling along the market square at Goslar he was held up by two men dressed as officials of justice. They demanded the instant payment of $70 in fines for an offence alleged to have been committed by him a year before, threatening him, in default, with imprisonment.

Voigt, who resides in Luxembourg, and was merely on a brief visit to Germany, happened to have only $30 on him at the time. The "officials" thereupon compelled him to telegraph to his home for the balance, keeping guard over him at the telegraph office for three hours.

At the end of that time the money arrived, and, having duly paid it over to the men, "Captain Koepenick" lost no time in leaving Germany.

Subsequently the discovery was made that the men were not officials at all, and that, although Voigt had rendered himself liable to prosecution, no order had even been issued for his arrest, nor were any proceedings pending against him.

Do You Feel Moody, Irritable, Depressed?

"Even when I was young I was not robust and healthy like other girls. I suffered from headaches, and had sort of blue feelings that deprived me of the joyful spirits and pleasures other girls seemed to get. After I married I found I could not throw worries off like other women, and those fell feelings of despondency and weariness made me very unhappy. There was no cause to feel so, and my doctor said my liver was sluggish, and this accounted for my poor color, my tiredness, languor and despair. The pills the doctor gave me were too purgative, made me weaker because they were too active for my constitution. Dozens of my friends recommended Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and they were so mild and helpful. Well, I never used a pill that acted so quietly as Dr. Hamilton's. They were so comfortable to use, I was afraid they might not help. But in a week I knew they had been actively engaged in cleaning up my system. They did the work of a tonic and blood medicine combined. I improved to a marvelous degree with Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I now maintain the most perfect kind of health by using them just once or twice a week."

It is Mrs. E. V. Erlanger, well known at Gloucester, who relates the above experience. She proved what you and all others, men and women, can prove—that Dr. Hamilton's Pills are best for restoring health and best for keeping the system in perfect running order. Don't be misled into using anything but Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. a box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid by the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

St. George's Church Made Good.

It is understood that St. George's church Bazaar, held in the Armouries netted that progressive little South Ward Anglican church, $600 over and above all expenses. This was good work considering the weather. Rev. Mr. Price is to be congratulated on his enterprise.

Local Man Seriously Hurt.

A Winnipeg despatch says that John Morrison, of Peterborough, Ont., while crossing the main street at the intersection of Graham avenue was knocked down by an auto. Dr. Pentman stated that Mr. Morrison has sustained a wound on the head and showed symptoms of brain concussion. He was taken to St. Boniface Hospital.

A New Garbage System.

It was decided at a meeting of the Board of Health, held yesterday morning that 1914 will see a new system of financing the city's garbage collecting scheme. It may also see the adoption of a system whereby the city will employ its own men and teams to do the work that is now being done by contract. Dr. McPherson, Medical Health Officer, made recommendation along this line some years ago.

Park Street Car Service.

The Peterborough Radial Railway have lessened the gap that existing conditions impelled in their Jackson Park car service. Heretofore, for some weeks, passengers to and from Jackson Park end of the line had to walk from the bridge now in course of construction on Park street to the corner where the line turns west. The Jackson Park end car now runs to the bridge, thus compelling passengers to only walk a few feet to make connection.

The contractor who is making the alterations in the National Hotel is now in Toronto. This gentleman recently took measurements, etc. of the Royal Theatre and is now getting out plans for placing a gallery in that place of amusement. He will return this week when the Chamberlain Estate, owners of the building, will consider the plans which provide for an expenditure of some $7,000 or $8,000.

Boys Were Not Guilty.

Mrs. Keys the complainant said one of the boys threw a stone which struck the frame of her window. She did not know which boy threw it, but she saw the boys run away. The case was dismissed.

DEATHS AND FUNERALS

John Butler.

Mr. John Butler passed away yesterday morning at St. Joseph's Hospital, aged [illegible] years. The deceased was born in Percy township. Six weeks ago he was brought to St. Joseph's Hospital.

He is survived by two sisters, Minnie, of Percy Township, and Mrs. J. McCormick, East City, as well as three brothers, Michael of Otonabee; Percy of Montana, and James of Ft. William.

The remains will be removed to Mr. Michael Butler's home, Norwood Road, Otonabee and to-morrow morning the body will be taken to Norwood for interment.

Mrs. Mary A. Austin.

There passed away late yesterday afternoon one of the aged residents of our city, in the person of Mrs. Mary Ann Austin, the beloved mother of Mr. Walter Austin and Miss Phoebe Austin, of Weller street. Born in the neighboring County of Prince Edward, of one of the early pioneer families of that famous county, she had passed her 94th birthday by some three months.

Soon after her marriage, Mrs. Austin came with her husband to Northumberland County, settling in Murray Township, when it was a wilderness. Here thirty years of her early married life was spent. Afterwards for a number of years she lived in Belleville and Brockville, coming from the latter place to Peterborough some ten years ago. The last five years the deceased had been confined almost entirely to her home through weight of years.

In religion, Mrs. Austin was a Methodist, and during her early years her home was always a centre of activity, the minister and church workers being always a welcome guest. Her husband, Mr. Benjamin Austin, predeceased her some twelve years. She leaves to mourn her loss three sons and one daughter: Rev. Dr. B. F. Austin, of Los Angeles, California; [illegible] Austin, of Theodore, Sask.; Walter C. Austin and Miss Phoebe Austin of this city.

The Times extends its sympathy.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basket of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park [illegible], 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

ULSTER TACTICS IN SCOTLAND MISTAKE; "NO POPERY" LOSES

Result in Wick Bye-election Blow to Sir Edward Carson --Larkinism Overthrown Hope of Unionists

London, Dec. 10.—Eloquent Ulster divines did their best in the Wick bye-election. Tariff reform speakers were officially excluded to give them a free field, yet the Government won easily. The result seems to indicate that the "No Popery" cry has lost its old electoral power, even in an aggressive Protestant division.

In the words of The Daily News, "Wick represents Scotland as a whole in repudiating the insult Toryism is paying a great people by selecting them as the subjects for a miserable experiment in a "Titus Oates revival."

Strengthen Asquith Cabinet

These electoral tendencies strengthen that section of the Cabinet which favors application to the Ulster situation of Mr. Asquith's dictum: "Wait and see." Sir Edward Carson last night endeavored to stir the Ministry into action by declaring that the first shot fired in Ulster would bring the Government to the ground. The Times view is:

"The real danger is that the Government continues to pin their hopes to some eleventh hour [illegible] in a quarrel of which the evil effects are already manifest and constantly increasing."

Ministerialists and Unionists alike rejoice over what they hope is an overthrow to Larkinism.

Larkin Made Big Mistake

Larkin's mistake has been to allow his perfectly sincere crusade for better industrial conditions in Dublin to degenerate into a series of petty personal feuds with leaders of English trade unionism. The question which yesterday the trade union congress had to decide was substantially this: Are trade unionists to be an army or a mob? Rejection of the amendment to favor a sympathetic strike, by two million votes, was the decisive answer, so far as elected delegates go, but it is yet to be seen whether the rank and file will follow and what power for mischief still rests with guerilla leaders like Larkin.

MARITIME MAIL POSTS JEALOUS; ASK OTTAWA AID

St. John and Halifax Almost in Tears They Feel so Bad Post Office Department Busy Spilling Oil on Turbulent Waters

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—An attempt has been made to stir up trouble over the carrying of British mails from St. John. There is extreme jealousy between Halifax and St. John. Both cities claim they have superior advantages as the calling port for the winter mails. The port rivalry is bitter and parochial in character. The squabble over the mail is only one side of a many sided row. This winter the Empresses, as in the past are landing the main mails at Halifax whence they are being sent by special train to Montreal. Some mails are being sent by St. John, but only catalogues, papers and magazines. St. John thinks it can handle mail as fast as Halifax, and also wants a special train.

St. John Wants Special Train

Recently mails arrived at St. John by the steamer Tunisian and were forwarded by the regular Intercolonial train. St. John Board of Trade protested and have stirred up the Boards of Trade all over the country. There are rumors that the C.P.R. is not a disinterested spectator which would like the contract for a special mail train from St. John. However, Hon. L. P. Pelletier has been flooded with communications from all parts of the country in regard to the matter, and, as a result the Post Office Department to-day issued the following statement.

No Cause For Anxiety

"The Post Office Department is daily in receipt of a number of communications in regard to the handling of the ocean mails from St. John and Halifax. These communications are coming from all directions and the Boards of Trade are taking a great interest in the matter. All this is due to one-sided communications which have been sent to the press in order to send public opinion in a certain direction. As a consequence of this one-sided information being published broadcast, the President of the St. John Board of Trade, acting in perfect good faith, sent a telegram to the Boards of Trade of Canada, asking them to take up the question and prevent the harm which was predicted. There is however, no cause for anxiety. The matter will be adjusted in the interest of Canada on the proper lines. A more complete statement may soon be forthcoming, but the Post Office Department does not think it advisable to enter into a press controversy whilst negotiations are under way."

THE BOY SCOUTS AN APPEAL FOR MEN

Boys, boys everywhere, are keen to do the right thing, ready to work, ready to play the game, and ready for the right man to lead them.

In the Scout Movement it is not any trouble to get boys. Our problem is to get the men to lead and there are thousands of men who would be willing to help if they realized the importance of boy life upon the future of Canada. A little sacrifice, the giving of a few hours a week—for what? to assist in moulding good citizens for Canada. Men, why not give a little time to the boys of your community? You will be the stronger and feel better for having devoted some little time to the training of the boys along lines which tend to better citizenship and a clean generation of boys.

The Scout Movement is trying to take care of the boys during their play, each part of the training tending towards making manly men. No greater asset can we give to the Empire than a race of Up-right, Manly, Clean, Canadian boys.

You have men who are helping your boys to become better citizens. Are there not others who will say, "I will also help in this work." Will you help? If you will take time to look into the work and training of [illegible] Scouts your answer will be "Yes." Show your interest in the Movement and encourage those who are working for the boys of your community.

Any information in connection with the Movement will be gladly forwarded upon application to The Secretary, Provincial Headquarters for Ontario, Bloor and Sherbourne Sts., Toronto.

MAY TAKE 3 YEAR ON THE THAW CASE

Cannot Give Decision in Less Than Year at Earliest

Washington, Dec. 10.—It may be three years before the Supreme Court settles the Thaw case, court officials estimated to-day. Unless attorney Jerome asks and the court grants a motion to advance the questions certified by Judge Aldrich at Concord, the case cannot sooner be reached for hearing in its regular order on the congested court docket.

Even if the case is advanced there would be no final decision for about a year.

FORMER LOCAL BRIDE'S WEDDING RING FOUND

Yesterday, at the Snowden House, by a remarkable coincidence, two wedding rings formed the chief topic of conversation. During the afternoon one wedding ring was placed on the finger of Miss Margaret Garbutt. In the morning, the bus driver, Mr. Teddy McDonald found a wedding ring, lost three years ago, in the basement. The story of the first mentioned wedding ring is told of elsewhere in this issue.

Concerning the second ring hangs an interesting tale. It will be remembered that Mr. D. Fraser, the former proprietor of the Snowden House took unto himself a wife, some three years ago. The ring with which Mr. Fraser wedded his bride was exceptionally heavy. Mrs. Fraser, shortly after her marriage used to take the ring off and leave it on her dressing case. One day her ring was missing. A chambermaid was suspected of stealing the golden circlet. She denied the charge. Yesterday morning as Mr. McDonald was tearing up an old mattress in the basement, that had come from the same room used by the chambermaid, heard a tinkle on the floor. There laid the lost wedding ring. It was sent last night to Mrs. Fraser, who now resides in St. Thomas.

H.C.O.L. PROBE NOW UNLIKELY

Labor Department is Doing Good Work at Present

Ottawa, Dec. 10.—While no definite answer has been made it is not regarded likely that a commission to investigate the high cost of living will be appointed by the Government. A commission would take probably a year or more to make a thorough investigation into such a broad question and it is a question whether it would even then reach an unanimous conclusion on the problem. In the meantime the Government is making a searching inquiry through the officials of the Labor Department into prices, rents wages and other subjects which bear on the cost of living.

YOUNG WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN THE HUMBER

Believed to Be Maude Guest—Missing for Several Days

Toronto, Dec. 10.—After dragging the Humber River since nine o'clock this morning Mait Aykroyd, accompanied by Detective Robert Croome, of Keele street station, discovered the body of a young woman, believed to be Maud Guest, floating beneath the bridge, opposite the Humber Beach Hotel, shortly after two o'clock to-day.

The discovery by two dogs of a woman's hat and lunch box on the east bank of the Humber River yesterday and the subsequent identification of the articles as the property of the missing girl inclined the police to believe that her body might be in the river and orders were given to have it dragged.

The young girl who had been boarding at 1630 Dundas street, has been missing from her house for some days.

When the body was recovered the hat was missing. She was wearing a brown raincoat such as was owned by Miss Guest and her description tallies with that of the missing woman.

OVERCROWDING EVIL IS ACUTE SOLUTION MUST BE FOUND OR TORONTO PAYS HEAVY PENALTY

Dr. Hastings, M.H.O. Shows How Tenement Conditions Are Gaining--Big Increase of Lodging Houses

Toronto, Dec. 10.—Tenement conditions are daily growing in the city. Overcrowding, consequent on congestion, is increasing at an alarming rate. There are at least 3,000 houses in the city occupied by from two to six families. As many as eight and ten families are living in ordinary 10 or 12-roomed houses. Families of five, six and as many as ten, are living in single rooms, damp cellars and basements. At least 10,000 additional houses are required at low rentals. There are 1,000 houses fit for condemnation and in the presence of winter little can be done.

In the 600 lodging houses in the city, there are over 1,000 lodgers in excess of the Public Health Act limitation. Those requiring lodging accommodation are crowding into the city and by spring the number will be nearly double what it is at present.

Such are the facts set forth in the alarming statement on housing conditions contained in the November monthly report of the local Health Department. Dr. Hastings submits lots of figures to prove the activity of his department and the seriousness of the present situation.

Doing it Himself

"The venerable judge of the county doesn't fine the motorists for speeding like he used to," remarked the man in the big green touring car.

"By heck, no," drawled the rural constable. "You see, the judge took in so much in fines that, owing that, it, he's gone and bought a racing automobile for himself."

LOCAL CANADIAN CLUB HAS SUCCESSFUL MEETING

Mr. Lee, of Immigration Department Gave Most Interesting Address on Canadian Immigration

Last night Peterborough Centre of the Canadian Club met in Coleman's restaurant. The entertainment took the form of an informal banquet. Rev. Canon Davidson asked a blessing. There was a large attendance.

Mr. Wainwright, manager of the local branch of the Bank of Ottawa, occupied the chair.

The speaker of the evening was Mr. W. W. Lee, Y.M.C.A. Secretary of the Department of Immigration, whose subject was "Canada's Problem of Dealing with the Immigrant."

The chairman called attention to some remarks made by Hon. James Bryce, Ambassador of Great Britain at Washington regarding Canadian Clubs, in which Mr. Bryce strongly advocated this movement. He then introduced Mr. Lee.

Mr. Lee was warmly greeted on rising. He said the immigration question was one of vital importance to Canada. There are three classes of immigrants coming to Canada, those from the British Isles, the United States and other countries. The immigrant from the British Isles should not be called an immigrant any more than should a man moving from Toronto to Peterborough. Our immigrant problem is three times as big as that presented to the United States. The foreign immigrant is adapted to a greater change, proportionately, than the English speaking immigrant. In 1923 the speaker prophesied that Canada will admit 500,000 immigrants. The Southern European immigration is inferior to the immigrant of Northern Europe. The time has gone when immigrants come to Canada to escape religious or civil miseries. It is an economic reason that brings immigrants here. The importation of foreign labor has been largely responsible for Canada's industrial development. Our ditches and sewers are now dug, to 90 per cent, by immigrants from Southern Europe. This used to be done by English immigrants. In Quebec two weeks ago, an English immigrant, watching a drain being dug, asked him, "Why are Italians given such work instead of Englishmen?" The speaker saw the foreman who said he wanted all the labor he could get and offered $2.25 a day. The Englishman, however, declined a job saying, "What! Me work along with a lot of Dagoes! Not Me!" We must provide adequate living houses for the English speaking immigrants. He then described the terrible conditions in Italian boarding houses in a Western City. The Italian immigrant produces 50 per cent less paupers than the English immigrant, except with two exceptions including industrial accidents. During the past year the Italian Immigrant showed two per cent. less in criminal statistics than did the English immigrants.

The balance of power in politics now rests with a few ignorant men. Before a foreigner should vote, he should be thoroughly conversant with the English language. He prophesied that Peterborough will soon have a foreign element politic to handle.

The usual vote of thanks was passed to the talented speaker.

It might be mentioned that Messrs. Coleman provided a dinner that would not [illegible] an epicure to swallow a cocktail in order to induce an appetite.

LOCK OF DICKENS' HAIR AT $200 IS CAUSE OF BIG CUSTOMS ROW

Articles of Over Hundred Years Enter Free--Owner Claims Hair Comes Under That Law--Refuses Pay

New York, Dec. 10.—Charles Dickens' hair, just a little lock of it valued at $200, is causing a stir at the customs house. The lock of hair was sent here in a consignment of $5,000 worth of rare books for a local dealer, who declares that the hair was included in the consignment without his knowledge, and who refuses to pay the $70 duty for the hair as demanded by the Government officials.

Articles of antiquity must be 100 years old to enter this country free of duty. Dickens was born in 1812, more than 100 years ago, and it has been argued that for this reason the hair should be admitted free, even though the lock was cut in later life. The customs house officials maintain, however, that the lock is not yet an antiquity, and must pay the regular duty on hair, 35 per cent. of the value.

The dealer involved has taken the case to the Secretary of the Treasury, asking to be permitted to take the books out of the Customs House and to have the hair returned to the consignor.

ONE OF WORLDS GREATEST PATHOLOGISTS PASSED AWAY

Dr. John Caven Was Highly Regarded in the Medical Profession

Toronto, Dec. 10.—"Canada has lost her best doctor", was the remark of a former patient of Dr. John Caven, when she heard that the doctor had died this morning. The remark of the lady is apparently shared by the medical profession, who from all parts of the Dominion have for the past ten years sought Dr. Caven in consultation and by the many patients he has relieved.

Five weeks ago Dr. Caven was forced to take to his bed owing to Bright's Disease. He has been fighting it for a long time. Dr. Robt. T. Noble, to whom he entrusted his case watched it with alarm and took several other well known physicians into consultation. "On Monday morning Dr. Caven became suddenly and acutely ill," said Dr. Noble to The News. "He had been suffering from his ailment for a long time. His death is a direct loss to the profession. When the end came at his home 68 Bloor street west, the doctors at the bedside, including Dr. Noble, were two brothers, Dr. W. P. Caven and Dr. James Caven, Dr. Bruce and Dr. [illegible], and the sisters of the deceased.

Brilliant Career

Dr. John Caven, M.D. Victoria M.D.C.M. Victoria, L.R.C.P. London had a brilliant career as a student. He was the eldest son of the late Principal Caven of Knox College, and was born in St. Mary's Ont., in 1861. He received his early education at the Model School and at Upper Canada College under the late Principal Cockburn, afterwards taking his degree of B.A. at Toronto University. He then entered the Toronto School of Medicine, and having been graduated he took a course in London England where he gained the degree of L.R.C.P. Then he took a further course of study in pathological work at Strassburg, Germany, and returned to Toronto to become connected with Toronto University as professor of Pathology. [illegible]

FIRE FIEND HELPS NORTHERN SETTLERS

Forest Fires Often a Blessing in Disguise; Cleans Land Ready For the Plow

The forest fires which periodically sweep over Northern Ontario are not entirely a curse. To a considerable extent they are a benefit to the settlers, clearing up their land when otherwise they would be forced to spend large sums of money in making the clearings which are almost ready for the plow following the burn.

Answering a question as to his loss in a fire which swept away his buildings, a Temiskaming settler answered: "My loss of cabin, stables, etc., amounts to about $300, but at the same time I got a $1,000 burn, and have now more than half of my 160 acre farm ready for the plow."

The settler, in hewing his home out of the virgin bush of the north country, does not face the same difficulties as confronted his forefathers in Old Ontario many years ago. Instead of a heavy bush with large trees to be cut down, the Temiskaming farmer has small birch, spruce, and balsam, easily cut, burned and stumped. Slashings are made in the early part of the year, and usually remain for an entire year until thoroughly dry. At the favorable moment a match is touched to them, and with a favorable wind blowing the slashing is reduced to ashes, leaving only a few scattered stumps which sit above the burned ground. It is usually incidents of this nature which cause the forest fires.

Must be Watchful

With a small clearing around a New Ontario farmer's home a fire is easily checked, and with steady watch by the settler for falling sparks on his wooden buildings, a loss of buildings can be averted in most cases. Where the settler, new to the ways of the north, allows his slashing of bush to remain unburned or uncut up to his doors, the fire makes easy way with the buildings, which burn like so much tinder.

The cost of clearing in the north country varies as to conditions. A settler endeavoring to clear an acre of land from the virgin bush has an undertaking on his hands which will cost $100 an acre if not more. With a burned slashing this may be reduced to almost $5.00 an acre, and scores of instances are to be found where with a single horse, two men could easily clean an acre a day of all rubbish left unburned on their farm. The stumps merely sit on top of the fire-swept ground, and a horse can pull the half-burned roots easily.

Burn the Top Soil

The bush fires do not confine themselves entirely to the stumps and slashings, but go further, and eat into the ground to an extent of from four to six inches, burning off the humus, the decomposed animal and plant life, which forms the top coating of the northern soil. With the burning of the humus is consumed considerable of the nitrogen supply, which at its best is slightly deficient in northern soils, and this supply is almost entirely dependent on the humus. This necessitates the settler to sow clover, alfalfa, or some other leguminous crop for the first year, so that the plow in the fall can turn under the year's crop, and thus assist the ground to regain the amount of nitrogen required for plant life lost by the burning.

Big Blaze Century Ago

Old Indian legends tell of a fire which swept the entire north country about 100 years ago, the like of which has never been known since. At that time, according to the stories handed down to the present generation by their forefathers, a big fire, hundreds of miles in width, swept from the Rainy River country across Northern Ontario and Quebec, destroying untold millions of dollars worth of timber and driving all animals of the forest to the lakes and rivers for safety. The fire lasted for many days, and many Indians caught unawares perished in the flames.

THE SPEED OF LIGHT

The first astronomer to satisfactorily demonstrate the speed of light was Ole Roemer, a Scandinavian scientist, who read his immortal paper on this subject before the Academy at Paris, on July 22, 1676. Roemer's calculations and conclusions have stood the test of time and subsequent investigations on all important points. Knowledge as to the velocity of light was of tremendous importance to astronomical science since it enabled astronomers to accurately estimate the enormous distances with which their science deals. Roemer found that light travelled at the rate of 196,000 miles in a second. The sun, being distant from earth 92,300,000 miles, flashes light to us in eight minutes and fourteen seconds. Yet the sun is a near neighbor compared with the so-called fixed stars, which in reality move with inconceivable velocity, although the most powerful telescopes will not show that velocity as anything but rest. Beyond the outskirts of our insignificant solar system are other systems, and beyond them still others so far as the sight of man, aided by instruments, may bridge the ghostly chasm of the infinite. Distances beside which the immense line stretching from earth to sun is an invisible point, are now measured by means of Roemer's epochal discovery as to the velocity of light.

Diseases of Wood

Wood has contagious diseases. A stick of wood in a lumber yard may be sick and infect other timbers, which later develop the disease when they are supporting great weights in a new building. Some of the diseases are so contagious that in a building they will jump several feet across masonry or brick to some stick of healthy wood.

Most of the diseases are varieties of dry rot caused by a fungus, and most of the varieties of the dry rot fungi cannot stand heat much over 100 degrees; so the most likely cure is to close a building up tight if any beams are infected, and heat it up to 130 or 140 degrees. Even this is not always successful, for ends of beams are buried in the outer brick walls and the heat may not reach them.

English Weights and Measures.

Other things besides fish have their own peculiar measures. Gunpowder, raisins and butter are sold by the barrel, but the weight varies. A barrel of powder weighs 100 pounds, of raisins 112 pounds, of butter 224 pounds. You can also buy butter by the firkin of fifty-six pounds, while a firkin of soft soap is sixty-three pounds. "Stones" are not always the same. A stone of glass is five pounds; a "cheese stone" is eight pounds, the "legal stone" fourteen pounds. A "fodder of lead" depends upon where you buy it. In London or Hull you will get only nineteen and a half hundredweight. In Newcastle they will give you twenty-one and a half hundredweight and in Derby twenty-two and a half.—London Globe.

Look For the Pearls.

Do you know that perhaps within a stone's throw of your suburban home pearls may be found. Sam Savage Miller has an article in Suburban Life on "Fresh Water Pearl Fishing." He says that almost every stream and pond throughout the United States contains one or more varieties of mussels in which pearls are found and tells of a carpenter of Paterson, N. J., who found a magnificent pink pearl weighing ninety-three grains in the waters of Notch Brook. [illegible] bought by Tiffany & Co. for $1,500 and later was sold to the Empress Eugenie. Since then it has been known as the famous Queen pearl.

Definition Is Required.

What philosophical and scientific instruments are within the meaning of the Customs Act, is at present a subject of consideration by the Customs Board. Under the act, such equipment is entitled to come in free when used in schools and colleges. There are attempts to widen its application, and upon this the board will give a ruling. There will need to be a specific definition as to what are or are not to be classified as scientific apparatus.

Fewer Get Married.

While the population of London, Ont., has been steadily increasing, a marked drop in the number of marriages registered in November is a feature of the month's vital statistics. The high cost of living is, apparently, having a deterrent effect on matrimony.

The Chicken Oath.

For the first time in the history of the Vancouver courts the chicken oath was administered recently to Mah Quong, a Chinaman, who was a witness in the case of seven men charged with rioting at Nanaimo. After the oath was administered a young white cock was procured, its head placed on a block of wood, and chopped off by the Chinaman. The ceremony was witnessed by a large crowd of persons.

An Earnest Appeal.

In the early days of the Province of New Brunswick, one of the judges had called in a local clergyman to open court by prayer.

"O Lord," he began, "we implore Thee to bestow upon the judge of this court the wisdom and discretion he so greatly needs."

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair chance in life?

FIRST POSTAL TRAIN.

It Was Tried in 1864 and Proved a Thorough Success.

The first trial of a postal car service, in which mail matter is assorted while in transit, was made in 1864 on the Chicago and Northwestern railway. The scheme was a thorough success, and railway mail service was inaugurated that year on several of the important railway lines and was gradually extended all over the United States and adopted by other countries.

In 1874 the American railway mail system was thoroughly organized on a permanent basis, with eight territorial divisions, each in charge of a superintendent subordinate to a general chief at Washington.

This service was among the first to adopt a modern classified civil service, appointment of railway mail clerks having always been made for a probationary period, permanent employment being conditioned on satisfactory service and conduct and removal based on good cause only. The service has been gradually increased and new divisions organized and is now operated on practically every railway.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

"A Progressive Peterborough"

Our Point of View

Members of Parliament feel that life is just one session after another.

Peterborough has a citizen who dislocates his jaw nearly every time he yawns. We would strongly advise him, therefore, to avoid such dull towns as Lindsay and Belleville.

+ + +

The proposed boycott of eggs by the housewives of this province would command more approval if the chance of eating a good beefsteak now and then were not quite so remote.

+ + +

The Mail and Empire assures the public that after Christmas eggs will be cheaper. But the trouble is that after Christmas all of us will be flat broke.

+ + +

The railroad commission of Wisconsin found that the city of Milwaukee can save nearly $[illegible],000 a year by making a contract for street lighting with the public utility company, instead of building a municipal plant.

+ + +

From Kansas City comes the news that Reuben Field, the lightning calculator, is dead. He probably succumbed in an effort to figure out when there would be a drop in the high cost of living.

FUR FARMING IN CANADA

The great success of fox-ranching in Prince Edward Island, where 85 per cent of all the silver foxes in captivity are now held, has led not only to the extension of fox-ranching into other provinces, but to the establishment of ranches for raising other fur-bearing animals. In Ontario there are at present about fifteen ranches where foxes or other animals are raised. In Quebec a large mink ranch is being operated in the Laurentian Mountains. To encourage the fur-farming industry in Ontario the Provincial Government has decided to supply mink, marten, fisher and beaver from Algonquin Park at moderate prices. These animals will doubtless be more difficult to raise in captivity than foxes, and the results of experiments within the next few years will be watched with much interest.

TARIFF AND HIGH PRICES

The fallacy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's "free food" policy is effectively set forth by a recent editorial in the New York Tribune. That paper knows well how utterly ineffective a similar policy in the United States has been to stem the rising tide of food prices.

Commenting upon Laurier's new slogan "Free Food," The Tribune says:

> "The high cost of living continues its disturbing advance in Canada as well as here, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, having no trusts—meat, cold storage or other—to attack there, has instead upon the poor old tariff as his scapegoat. In his fight for 'free food before Dreadnoughts' he is not to be deterred, apparently, by the case of the tariff reformers at Washington, whose inability to stem the tide of high prices by this method they themselves freely admit.
> "What earthly difference, it would make, for instance, to wipe out Canada's duty on wheat, when she exports ten times as much of this foodstuff as she consumes is difficult to understand. Sir Wilfrid complains that the reduction of the American duties is causing the United States to drain Canada of food, but this can only be if the prices here are higher than they are in Canada and while they remain higher Canada surely cannot import wheat from the United States, duty or no duty. Nor can she import it from any other part of the world unless her bid equals Uncle Sam's.
> "'Free Food' is a grand old slogan, but Sir Wilfrid should be warned that to raise false hopes, even in politics, is a business that never pays in the long run."

Weary Tiredness Changed to Vigor

THAT PLAYED-OUT FEELING WAS QUICKLY REMEDIED AND HEALTH RESTORED

Story of a Merchant Who Almost Lost His Business and His Health Through Neglecting Early Symptoms of Disease.

"My life for years has been of sedentary character," writes T. B. Titchfield, head of a well known firm in Buckingham. "Nine hours every day I spent at office work and took exercise only on Sunday. I disregarded the symptoms of ill-health, which were all too apparent to my family [illegible] thin, then pale, and before long I was jaundiced — eyes and skin were yellow, my strength and nerve energy were lowered, and I was quite unfitted for business. In the morning a lightness in the head, particularly when I bent over, made me very worried about my health. Most of the laxatives medicines I found weakening, and knowing that I had to be at business every day I neglected myself rather than risk further weakness. Of course I grew worse, but by a happy chance I began to use Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I was forcibly struck by the fact that they neither caused griping nor nausea, and it seemed incredible that pills could tone, cleanse and regulate the system without causing any unpleasant after effects. Dr. Hamilton's Pills acted with me just as gentle as nature—they gave new life to my liver, strengthened my stomach, and won me back to perfect good health. My skin is clear, dizziness has disappeared, and my appetite, strength, spirits are perfect.

Refuse anything offered you instead of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, which are sure to cure. Sold in 25c. boxes, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers, or postpaid from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN :—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,

G. A. GILLESPIE.

CHILDREN HATE OIL, CALOMEL AND PILLS

"California Syrup of Figs" best for tender stomach, liver, bowels—tastes delicious.

Look back at your childhood days. Remember the "dose" mother insisted on—castor oil, calomel, cathartics. How you hated them, how you fought against taking them.

With our children it's different. Mothers who cling to the old form of physic simply don't realize what they do. The children's revolt is well-founded. Their tender little "insides" are injured by them.

If your child's stomach, liver and bowels need cleansing, give only delicious "California Syrup of Figs." Its action is positive, but gentle. Millions of mothers keep this harmless "fruit laxative" handy; they know children love to take it; that it never fails to clean the liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and that a teaspoonful given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on each bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. See that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.

"SALOME"

It is safe to say that the production of "SALOME" which comes to this city is by far the most pretentious offering ever taken on tour in this country. The cast of principals embraces a list of names, a half a dozen any of which are strong enough in ability and reputation to head a company of their own. First and foremost among these artists comes Joseph F. Sheehan, the greatest of American tenors, and supporting him are such artists of world renown as Madame Antoinette Le Brun, Lydia Sturtevant, Mr. Charles Swickard, Mr. Harold Geis, Mr. Lawrence Wallace, Mr. William Young, Miss Grace Dennis and others of like calibre.

The company carries its own special orchestra under the direction of Chevalier Theodore Stearns, a pupil of Massenet's. The premier danseuse Mlle. Sophie Bernard, is one of the greatest artists this country has ever seen and has been specially engaged for this production.

The chorus of fifty odd singers and dancers has been selected from the leading conservatories of music and dancing academies in the country, and has been proclaimed the most perfect singing chorus in America.

From a scenic standpoint—there is just one thing that can be said, and that is—Magnificent. The four acts and seven scenes are one succession of beautiful pictures and if SALOME was presented purely as a spectacle, it would be wonderful. With the great company of artists interpreting it and the beautiful music, it is supreme.

Go to SALOME thinking of the most beautiful production you have ever seen, and you will see one more beautiful beyond comparison. Grand Opera House, one night only, Monday, Dec. 15th.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Meredith, in moving that the report of the directors and the accounts, as read, be adopted, and the same be printed for distribution among the shareholders, said:—

[illegible]

bringing that balance up to $3,451,217.80, and there has been set aside for Bank Premises Account during the year the amount of $485,000. A Bonus of 1 per cent. was paid to shareholders on 1st June, and [illegible] the quarterly dividend at 10 per cent.

[illegible]

...therefore and other assets, amounting to $134,190,000, show an increase of $15,000,000, caused by taking on new business and by the increased legitimate requirements of our customers. Investments in railway and other bonds are $12,403,000. Bank premises, Montreal and branches, remain at $4,000,000. Call and other loans in Great Britain and the United States are $51,240,000, against $55,150,000, a year ago, which reduction, with $6,000,000 withdrawn from foreign correspondents and agencies of the Bank outside of Canada, has been used to provide for the increased demands of our Canadian customers mentioned above. Our bills payable amount to $919,000, as compared with £1,717,000 as at the same date last year. At that time, however, the amount was shown as a contingent liability instead of being included in the General Statement, as at present.

The delayed decennial revision of the Bank Act was finally completed at the last session of Parliament. On the whole, the new measure may be characterized not only as workable as preserving the fundamental principles of past laws, but as well designed to promote and safeguard the interests of the public, which, I need scarcely add, are identical with the interests of the Bank.

As the measure was a non-contentious one, I think I am at liberty to add my tribute of praise to the Finance Minister, Hon. W. T. White, for the very capable manner in which he supervised the revision of the Act. Throughout the protracted discussion of the Bill, he exhibited a thorough grasp of the subject and a keen desire to make the measure conform as fully as possible to the needs of the public, the safety and stability of the banks.

The General Situation.

In regard to the general situation, the year 1913 may be truly described as a memorable one. In Great Britain it has been disturbed and disappointing. The demands of borrowing countries, both old and new, have outrun capital supplies, and there has been an ever increasing difficulty in obtaining loans, however good the security might be, and, when obtainable, the rates and terms have been far more onerous than for many years past.

As is well known, there have been several factors combining to produce these stringent conditions, the Balkan War and record public flotations, which in London alone totalled not less than £200,000,000 to the end of October, exclusive of special borrowings and treasury bills, of which no less an amount than £54,000,000 were Canadian emissions. Then there has been world-wide trade activity, a rise in the price of commodities, coupled with serious political disturbances in France and Germany, and the continuous and heavy gold demands of such importing countries as Argentina, Brazil, Egypt, and India, heavier requirements for home trade in Great Britain, and accumulations by joint stock banks in their private vaults. Added to all this, the position was aggravated by the prolongation of the Balkan War, and social unrest in England.

In France the economic position has been less favorite than usual. The severe political shocks I have mentioned occasioned a withdrawal of funds from Germany, and hoarding has been continuous and constant. A vast aggregation of loans to finance the Balkan states and for increased home armaments still await flotation. In Germany the situation shows a marked betterment in the improved condition of the Reichsbank and a curtailment of that country's extensive trade activities.

In the United States conditions throughout that country are thought to be fundamentally sound. Politics have affected business activities, and with the exception of wheat, there is a shortage of crops throughout the country. A disposition to go slow and not to make commitments beyond actual requirements is apparent, so that no undue strain is likely to take place but rather an era of economy, which should have a beneficial effect on the situation generally. The money situation has proved to be of greater ease than was at one time expected, and the usual fall stringency has not so far materialized. The principal cause for the prolonged ease may, I think, be put down to the early preparations to meet the contingency of dear money, the slowing down in general business, and the depositing of Government funds in the banks of the West and South, thereby relieving the Eastern banks of a portion of the burden of financing the crops, for which they had been prepared.

The conditions in Great Britain and abroad which I have endeavored to outline will no doubt take time to ameliorate, and improvement will probably be brought about by reduced trade activity gradually releasing money for investment purposes and hoarded funds; but the process will of necessity be slow.

I have thought it well to make these somewhat extended remarks in regard to financial conditions in other and neighboring countries, as they have an important bearing upon existing conditions here.

Trade of Canada.

The returns of the foreign trade of Canada are not unsatisfactory. Imports are falling off, in consequence of the monetary situation and the curtailment of foreign loans. In October the value of imports of merchandise was $8,004,000 less than in the corresponding month in 1912, while for the seven months ending October, the value of imports was only $4,300,000 in excess of last year. On the other hand, the export trade is extending, the value of domestic products exported in October having been $23,300,000 in excess of the same month a year ago, and the exports for the seven months, $49,334,000 greater than in 1912. The aggregate foreign trade of Canada for the seven months ending with October was $636,604,000 as against $582,444,000 a year ago, showing a gain of $53,650,000, and in this period the excess of imports over domestic exports has been cut down from $190,000,000 to $145,000,000. This trend of foreign trade is likely to continue for some time. The balance of foreign trade, as you are aware, has been heavily against Canada during the past decade. In the last six fiscal years, imports exceeded exports in value by $800,000,000, and this considerable gap has been made, in certain quarters, the subject of adverse criticism of this country. It is to be borne in mind, however, that in this period, Canada has obtained immense sums of money from Great Britain for [illegible] purposes of various kinds, which money has been imported largely in the form of merchandise paid for out of the proceeds of long-term loans. Now, while these loans must ultimately be liquidated from the earning power of this expenditure, I may point out that meanwhile, only the interest charge has to be met; in other words, the excess of imports representative of the proceeds of long-term borrowing has to be balanced only to the extent of the interest of the loans. This is not indeed, the whole conclusion of the many-sided subject, into which a variety of considerations enter. We cannot, moreover, expect to go on widening the gap between imports and exports indefinitely. Our annual interest charge on British and foreign loans is already a formidable item, to be provided either by exports or new borrowings. While monetary conditions abroad remain as at present, the stream of fresh capital will run less freely towards Canada.

The recent reduction in the tariff of the United States can hardly fail to enlarge the markets of that country to Canadian products. Many agricultural items such as eggs, milk, live stock, are now on the American free list; so are lumber, timber, fish, meats, coal and many manufactured articles made in Canada. Already the movement of these articles to our neighbor's markets in increased volume has begun, some advance in prices has resulted therefrom, and there appears no reason to doubt that our sales to the United States will augment in future.

Immigration returns have continued to be of a highly satisfactory character, both in regard to number and desirability. The figures for the year ending 30th September, 1913, reached a total of 438,000 souls, of whom 132,300 were from the United States and the remainder from European countries, principally Great Britain.

The value of the field crops in Canada this year at present prices is estimated at $500,000,000, or approximately the value of the crop of the preceding year.

Legitimate Trade Good.

In view of the foregoing, it is not surprising to find that legitimate business generally in Canada continues to be in a satisfactory condition. There are no signs of trade depression, though a slowing down in many branches of trade is in evidence, and there is a disposition to confine commitments to actual requirements. More economy is being exercised than has been the case for some time past. The flow of money which came in great volumes in the past few years from the British Islands and abroad, both for investments and for speculative purposes, and created a somewhat unhealthy expansion, has met with a outbreak of land speculation in the check. It had much to do with the West, which, owing in a measure to a wise precaution of the Bank Act, was limited to individuals and has not affected the country generally in an adverse manner to any appreciable extent. Advantage was unfortunately taken of the ease with which money could be obtained and of the popularity of Canadian securities in Great Britain by certain individuals on both sides of the Atlantic to exploit the London market with securities of a doubtful nature, to their own advantage, and some of these enterprises, owing to over capitalization or incompetent management or both, have met with disaster, causing suspicion to be cast on many undertakings of a thoroughly sound character seeking capital. There has been a collapse of the land speculation in the West of which I have spoken. Municipal expenditure has been restricted to actual necessities and with due regard to the ability of the municipality to find a market for its securities. In this connection, it may be noted that the American market has relieved the situation in London and in Canada by purchasing, in the first ten months of the year, a sum of no less than $20,000,000 of our municipal, industrial, corporation and public utility bonds, without taking into consideration an amount difficult to estimate sold through Canadian brokers.

Province of Ontario.

Viewing the country by sections, in the Province of Ontario, the year, as a whole, may be said to have been satisfactory. Crops have been a full average and the farmers prosperous. Manufacturing industries in general have had a fair year and a considerable amount of American capital is coming into the Province. The rural population, unfortunately, continues to slowly decrease, while among the cities, Toronto with a present estimated population of 485,000, shows an estimated increase of 63,000 souls.

Province of Quebec.

General conditions throughout the province have been good. Crops have been up to the average. Hay, the chief crop, turned out better than at first anticipated, and other crops have been satisfactory both as to quantity and price. Among manufacturing industries, the cotton industry has had a good year. Other manufacturers have hardly done so well. The year has been a good one for lumber, both as regards demand and price, and it is anticipated that the recent removal of the United States duty should further increase the profits of the business. It is thought not unlikely that one result of the removal of the duty will be to give a further impetus to the increasing proportion of lumber shipped to the United States instead of Great Britain and Europe. Pulpwood and paper shipments have been large both from Canada and Newfoundland. With regard to this industry it would be well that care be exercised in order that production may not exceed the demand.

Maritime Provinces

General condition throughout the Maritime Provinces for the past year have been uniformly satisfactory. The farmers have had a favorable year and all crops, apart from fruit, have been above the average. The fishing has been good, with higher prices, and the lumber cut was fair, and prices, on the whole, satisfactory. The output of the coal mines has exceeded all previous records; and the tonnage of pig iron produced was 25 per cent. greater than last year. Manufacturing industries generally, have had an output up to the average. Railway building has not been extensive, but large sums are to be expended in providing terminals at St. John and Halifax for the Intercolonial Railway and in establishing a car ferry with Prince Edward Island.

In Newfoundland the high prices obtained for fish have induced a period of prosperity. The building of branch lines of railway, the development of the mining of iron ore at Belle Isle, and the growth of the pulp and paper industry have all improved conditions.

North-West Provinces

Although business affairs are rapidly becoming more diversified, the production of wheat and other cereals is, of course, first in importance. The crop this year has been larger in quantity and better in quality than ever before but the price at present is somewhat lower than at the corresponding date last year. The comparative crop figures are:

	1912 Bushels	1913 Bushels
Wheat	162,000,000	190 to 195,000,000
Oats	221,000,000	240,000,000
Barley	26,000,000	28,000,000
Flax	21,000,000	15,000,000

and the estimated value of the 1913 crop is $200,000,000, against $192,000,000 in 1912.

The immense additions to mileage made by the Railway Companies, especially the Canadian Pacific Railway, in double tracking and terminals and rolling stock, have enabled this enormous crop to be delivered with unprecedented rapidity. The rapid growth of population and the springing up of new towns have continued. The population of the three North-West Provinces, according to the census of 1911, was about 1,300,000, and is now placed at 1,600,000, and the immigration generally is a high class, a satisfactory feature being that two-thirds of the population are rural.

The method of harvesting the North west crops will in time, no doubt, be reduced to a more systematic basis. In past seasons farmers have rushed their wheat to market in the short period intervening between harvest and the close of navigation on the Great Lakes, thereby producing more or less congestion of the markets to their own loss. An amelioration of this condition has begun by the provision of greater storage accommodation, not only at the lake ports, but what is more to the purpose, at interior points, where the Government as well as private corporations and individuals, are proceeding with the erection of elevators at the principal grain producing centres. In this way, local markets will be created for the farmers where the grain can be readily disposed of. Mixed farming continues to be an urgent need of the Northwest. I am pleased, however, to observe a betterment in this respect. From the figures which have been furnished me, there has been an increase in the past five years of 250,000 in the number of horses, cattle, sheep and swine. It is a matter of regret that the returns from the other provinces do not exhibit a similar satisfactory increase, but rather a diminution.

British Columbia.

The province generally has not been as prosperous as in 1912. The salmon fishing season has been a good average and the pack has been sold at remunerative prices. The same may be said of the halibut and herring fishing, and the free admission of British Columbia fish to the United States will be of advantage to the trade. Conditions in the lumber trade have been very unsatisfactory, the supply exceeding the demand, and the prices so much lower than [illegible] that it is a question if many of the mills have made money. The [illegible] lumber trade has fallen off both in volume and in price, and the free admission of lumber to the United States [illegible] the American [illegible] has probably given the most satisfactory results of any industry in the province, the product of the mines increasing in value $9,000,000 over the preceding year. The total mineral output was over $32,000,000, of which coal and copper contributed respectively, say, $9,000,000 and $6,000,000. Crops have been good and prices satisfactory. The fruit industry in the Okanagan and other districts has realized higher prices and market arrangements have been improved. New Railway construction has only been undertaken to a moderate extent and new power development has consisted chiefly of extensions, designed to supply the City of Vancouver. The stringent money conditions which have existed throughout the year, have checked new enterprises of all kinds, especially municipal undertakings, and the probability is that there will be considerable unemployment during the coming winter.

Mexico.

In Mexico, general conditions continue to be disturbed, and the outcome is impossible to predict. We feel that our interests there are in safe and capable hands.

Words of Confidence.

My last words are of counsel and confidence. The finger of prudence points to a policy of conservation. While the financial sky remains clouded over in Europe, we shall do well to hasten slowly. It is not a time to attempt enterprises of a speculative nature, nor to undertake new commitments prior to the financing thereof, and an accumulation of stock by merchants and manufacturers should, as far as possible, be avoided. The excellent harvest, particularly in the Northwest, should do much towards liquidating debts and ameliorating the situation, but it seems probable we will be compelled to pause awhile in the wonderful progress of expansion of the last ten years. On the other hand, the commercial condition of Canada is fundamentally sound. Business as a whole, as I have said, continues good. Our vast natural resources have scarcely been scratched. Immigration is large, railway construction active, new territory and new resources of wealth, are being steadily opened, the confidence of British and foreign capitalists in our country is unabated. A temporary halt can only refresh Canada for yet greater achievements.

Mr. R. B. Angus seconded the motion for adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously.

The chairman stated that, under the provision of the new Bank Act, it would be necessary for the meeting to appoint three auditors.

Mr. C. R. Hosmer thereupon moved, and Mr. Huntly Drummond seconded, that there be appointed three auditors of the Bank to hold office until the next annual general meeting, and that this meeting do now proceed to their nomination and appointment.

Mr. C. B. Gordon moved, and Mr. Wm. McMaster seconded, that the remuneration of the auditors to be appointed be not more than $15,000, to be divided equally between them (or to be otherwise divided as may be thought best).

The following nomination were made: By Mr. J. B. Learmont, Mr. George Hyde, C.A., of Montreal; by Mr. G. L. Ogilvie (in the absence of Mr. Bartlett McLennan), Mr. J. Maxtone Graham, C.A., of Edinburgh; by Mr. W. R. Blackader (in the absence of Mr. W. Stanway), Mr. James Hutchison, C.A., of Montreal.

Mr. [illegible] mentioned that he would deposit one ballot, representing the directors and other shareholders who had sent him their proxies, which was all that would be necessary, unless any shareholder wished to deposit a ballot himself. The ballot was unanimous.

It was moved by Mr. J. B. Learmont and seconded by Dr. W. B. Yates, that the thanks of this meeting be [illegible] to the President and Directors for their attention to the interests of the bank.

Mr. R. B. Angus, in reply, on behalf of the President and Directors expressed in a few well-chosen words their appreciation of the thanks tendered them.

Mr. David Morrice moved that the thanks of the meeting be given to the General Manager, Assistant General Manager, the Superintendents, the Managers, and other Officers of the Bank, for their services during the past year. In speaking to the motion, Mr. Morrice expressed in the highest terms his appreciation of the Bank officials he had met in his long experience covering a great part of the country, and said he had no hesitation whatever in presenting this motion rendering thanks to the management and Staff of the Bank.

Mr. D. Forbes Angus seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously.

Mr. William H. Evans moved, and Mr. Charles Chaput seconded, "that the shareholders at this annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal learn with deep regret of the resignation of Mr. R. B. Angus from the Presidency of the Bank, and desire to express their keen appreciation of his long and faithful services in the interests of the Bank. The Shareholders, however, sincerely hope that Mr. Angus will co-operate with his co-directors for many years to come."

Mr. Chaput, in seconding, said that the motion was a well-deserved compliment to Mr. Angus.

Returning thanks, Mr. Angus said: "I thank you for that expression of your goodwill."

Mr. Braithwaite, said that he desired, on behalf of the Staff, to thank the shareholders for the very kind expression of appreciation of their services, and he thanked Mr. Morrice especially for the very kind words he had spoken. The prosperity of the Bank must always be to a large degree depending upon the capable managers and the rank and file officers of the Bank. "I can assure you," he added, "of my own knowledge of the absolute loyalty and devotion of the staff to the interests of the Bank, and of the hard work done by them. I cordially thank you, and assure you that you have a staff second to none."

Election of Directors.

The result of the ballot for the election of Directors was declared by the Chairman as follows: Messrs. R. B. Angus, D. Forbes Angus, A. Baumgarten, Huntly R. Drummond, C. B. Gordon, E. B. Greenshields, C. R. Hosmer, Sir William C. Macdonald, Hon. Robert Mackay, Messrs. Wm. McMaster, H. V. Meredith, D. Morrice, Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, K.C.V.O.; Right Hon. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, G.C.M.G.; G.C.V.O.

The meeting then terminated.

At a subsequent meeting of the Directors the following officers were elected: Hon. President, Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal; President, Mr. H. V. Meredith.

A FLOUNCED FROCK TO DANCE IN

Instead of more elaborate details the simpler afternoon frocks depend for effect upon a graceful shoulder, an adaptive girdle or a bit of drapery. Several such features are brought out in 7007, together with an effective narrow panel down front and back which serves to catch up and hold the drapery in place. One of the new velours, a velveteen, moire or poplin could be used with this design most appropriately. Mahogany crepon relieved by a wide girdle of Roman striped ribbon is shown in the illustration.

To copy this frock in size 36 it requires 4½ yards of charmeuse and ¾ of a yard of silk for the girdle.

Now that dancing is so popular one needs several of the simpler dancing frocks. These are mostly fashioned of the sheerer materials, chiffon, net and lace. Lace is especially modish this season, being used for flouncing, bodices and trimming purposes in general.

This model shows a three tiered skirt of lace flouncing over a foundation of delicate green liberty silk. Each flounce is caught up slightly and held with a tiny bow.

This model in size 16 requires [illegible] yards of allover lace flouncing and [illegible] yards of silk for the guimpe and foundation skirt.

Fitly Summing Up.

The late Mayor Gaynor of New York, as all the world knows from his letters, was a subtle critic, and at a luncheon at the Century club, discussing a novelist who had begun well, but had degenerated into the lowest type of "best seller," Mayor Gaynor said:

"This novelist's whole biography could be put into two questions and answers, thus:

"'How did he commence writing?'

"'With a wealth of thought.'

"'And how has he continued?'

"'With a thought of wealth.'"—Washington Star.

Spoiling the Salt Cup.

In some parts of the world, particularly in Germany, it is still believed that the upsetting of the saltcellar is the direct act of Satan—"the peace disturber." And the habit of trying to avert any catastrophe which may happen by tossing a little of the salt over the shoulder is due to the belief that by so doing one hits the invisible Satan in the eye, which temporarily, at least, prevents his doing further mischief.

Their Attachment.

"Do animals possess the sentiment of affection?" asked the school teacher of the little girl.

"Yes, ma'am; almost always."

"Good," said the teacher, "and now," turning to a little boy, "tell me what animal has the greatest natural fondness for man."

The small boy considered carefully and finally answered, "Woman."—Ladies' Home Journal.

LAST OF HIS PEOPLE

MYSTERIOUS ABORIGINE NOW PERFORMING IN PARIS.

London Writer Tells of Franz Who is Thought by Scientific Men to Be the Only Surviving Member of an Extinct Tribe of Bushmen—Was Found in South Africa by a Big Game Hunter.

The mysterious aboriginal bushman from South Africa, who recently visited England with Mr. M. P. Epstein, who discovered him, is now appearing at the Nouveau Cirque in a dancing turn. Mr. Epstein, whom I saw recently told me the history of his savage, whom Prof. W. H. Duckworth believes to be "a genuine representative" of the extinct race of bushmen.

Mr. Epstein is a big game hunter. He has been for twenty-five years in South Africa, where he has a farm near Kimberley. About seven years ago, while he was hunting for monkeys for the industry of furs, an African term for monkey skins, he decided one day to go with his friends on an ostrich shooting expedition in the Kalahari Desert near the new German Southwest Territory, where there are hardly any human beings.

One day, at a distance, he noticed a strange form among a group of wild ostriches. He galloped in its direction, at the same time firing his revolver. As he got near, the strange form, which he now made out to be a human being with a bow and arrow in his hand, tried to escape, but the horse came on top of him and knocked him down.

"In a second I was down from the saddle. I captured the creature, and after binding him with cords placed him on the saddle and returned to our camp. It was on examining the savage that we realized it was the last specimen of the tribe of Bushmen. For some time he had to be kept tied to a wagon to prevent him from escaping.

"When he had been at the farm some six months Franz, as I called him, was wholly tamer. He showed no desire to run away, and I employed him in the large hunting after the birds. It was only last year that, on the advice of some friends who saw my Bushman, I decided to come over to Europe to exhibit him."

I went to the circus this evening to see the Bushman. I found him dressed in an ordinary English suit and [illegible] with nothing of the wild look that I expected. Smiling he shook my hand warmly, and after some [illegible] words [illegible]. Franz, who is of small stature, looks, from the [illegible] point of view, like a [illegible] savage that his skin is a copper color. [illegible] with very small moustache, and a few hairs on the tip of his chin that might pass for whiskers. His waist is relatively small compared with his shoulders, which are quite long. His body looks like a black cotton wool [illegible].

"He has some grey hairs," remarked Mr. Epstein, "and you can see from his face that he is very old. Prof. Duckworth, who has seen him, believes that he is at least 100 years old—perhaps 110."

He has a fine body, but smaller [illegible]. [illegible] had more [illegible] in [illegible] I have seen in those of [illegible]. He [illegible] me with [illegible] interest, but the little fellow [illegible] for his own [illegible] to the door, [illegible] from [illegible] time to time.

Every now and then he would [illegible] and would give [illegible] a [illegible] smile and wave his hand. To the ladies he was very gallant, blowing them kisses, laying his hand on his heart, and doing the Don Juan to perfection. When one of the young ladies spoke to him the Bushman jumped from his seat, seized her hand, and kissed it respectfully.

His ears, too, appear to be sharp. Mr. Epstein was telling me of the copious draughts of edgwain—"whisky"—which he gives the little old man on certain occasions, and immediately his curious yellow face wreathed in smiles, and then he began to laugh heartily, as at the recollection of a good dose. Yet Mr. Epstein declares that the Bushman has no mind. I put two coins on the table before him, a silver one and a copper one of ten centimes. I made him understand that he could have one of them. He showed no hesitation, but took the silver 50-centime one.

Next, for my special benefit, Mr. Epstein got his savage to dance. The dance was of the special sort, between a clog dance and a step dance, which Negroes are accustomed to give in American bars or on the music hall stage.

Mr. Epstein assured me, however, that the Bushman was never taught to dance. He did not know his captive could dance until one day, a few months before he left for Europe, he started a gramophone, and to his surprise the savage began doing his steps. I was rather surprised after watching all this that Mr. Epstein said to me, "He has no mind. He takes no interest in anything. If I tell him to look out of the window he will do so and continue to look until I recall him again."

Franz speaks what is evidently a dialect. It is curious on account of the click which punctuates nearly every other word. Otherwise it is by no means disagreeable. Mr. Epstein explained to me that he makes himself understood to the Bushman chiefly by signs. Franz is able to say a few words in French, and he readily [illegible] for me in his own tongue. "[illegible]" seems to be the equivalent of "yes."

While Mr. Epstein was showing me a number of photographs the little chap noticed that his master was bothered by another [illegible]. He quickly slipped up to him and relieved him of it. [illegible] of his coat, he hung it upon a chair very neatly. In scores of other ways this Bushman showed that he possessed ordinary intelligence.

Mormons in Canada.

The visit which Joseph F. Smith, president of the Mormon Church, has been making to Alberta in connection with the erection of a temple at Cardston to cost $250,000, [illegible] the [illegible] of the Mormon population of Canada. According to the census of 1901 there were 6,891 Mormon [illegible] in the Dominion, and by 1911 almost 16,000. The number [illegible] to be considerably over sixteen thousand.

In the former decade the principal settlement was in Ontario, the total being 3,377, while in Alberta there were 3,213. By the last census it is shown that more than half the Mormons of Canada are now found in Alberta, the total in that province being [illegible]. In Ontario the number is [illegible], the balance being scattered throughout the other provinces.

OLDEST CANADIAN MORMON.

Is Henry Lyman Hinman—He Lived In This Country For 26 Years.

Henry Lyman Hinman, patriarch of the Mormon Church in Canada, is the oldest Mormon of the Canadian church. He came to Canada in 1877, and has resided in Cardston continuously for twenty-six years.

The aged patriarch was born at West Stockbridge, Mass., in 1837, but left when a boy and settled with his father at Nauvoo, Illinois. He was seven years of age when the Prophet Smith was assassinated, but he remembers many things about him. He had often been in his father's house, he told the writer, and as lieutenant-general of the Hancock County militia the boy often saw him drilling his men. "I well remember," said the old man, "what a fine-looked soldier he made. He rode a big sorrel horse with a white foot, and as a boy I always wanted a horse just like that one of the prophet's." Mr. Hinman here reminded the writer that it was at Nauvoo that Smith had been 40 times tried for different crimes, but was never once convicted. The old man prided himself as a member of the Mormon Church to think that his prophet could so defend himself that the charges made against him were disproved.

Patriarch Hinman was one of the first to leave Nauvoo after the killing of Joseph and Hiram Smith. In 1844 the family started for Iowa, then a territory inhabited by Indians. The Government had promised to send officials to these Indians, who would teach them to farm. The Indians thought the party the Government teachers, and for a whole winter held them captive on the Indian territory.

The next year, after working hard, the family were able to purchase an outfit, with which to join the general exodus from Nauvoo in 1847. It was while this trek was in progress that the Mormon battalion was drafted to fight with Mexico. This detained his father's party, and it was not till 1848 that the boy Hinman finally landed in Salt Lake Valley, where settlement was made.

In the new land, father and son followed mill-wrighting and building, moving once or twice, but spending most of their lives in Davis County. During this time the younger Hinman served on several colonizing missions, and did home mission work for the Mormon Church in his own state. He was a member of Davis County High Council and of the Seventies.

In Canada he has been a pioneer. Though broken in health as a result of hardships endured in his early life, he has been active in every reform movement for the good of the Mormon people and the country. He was made a patriarch in 1903, and still holds that coveted office.

He was the first Mormon Justice of the Peace in Canada, and the first Mormon Notary Public. Mr. Hinman is the father of fifteen children, and has been married but once, his wife passing away this year. He is now spending the declining years of his life quietly in the Temple City of Canada.

At the recent ceremony of turning the first sod of the temple ground, he offered the prayer in feeble voice.

Swordsmen of the Sea.

The swordsmen of the sea are the swordfish, spearfishes, sailfishes, [illegible] fishes and the narwhal, with its [illegible] ly twisted straight tusks. Swordfish inhabit the warmer seas, while the narwhal is a creature of the Arctic. The tusk of the narwhal is hollow nearly to the point and is spirally grooved. It uses its tusk as a weapon of defense and to plunge through the ice to breathe, the narwhal being a cetacean. Sometimes when a boat has been caught in the ice great damage has been inflicted by the inquisitiveness or blundering of this great creature, that sometimes reaches a length of fifteen feet, with a tusk of from six to ten feet in length. As a rule, however, the narwhal uses its tusk for the purpose of killing fish for food. In the castle of Rosenborg the kings of Denmark have long possessed a magnificent throne made of tusks of this cetacean. These tusks are harder and whiter than ivory.

Author Who Wrote Legibly.

No author, or any one else, for that matter, could possibly have written more legibly than Francis Thompson. He [illegible] in pencil in a [illegible] round hand that would have [illegible] at the top of his writing [illegible] was always "good" for the compositor, which was fortunate, for there was always the greatest difficulty in getting him to correct the proofs of his articles. I have the manuscript of one of his later poems, which a child of ten could read with ease, though it is written partly in ink and partly in pencil and [illegible] stuck together. [illegible] have been snipped out with scissors. He was probably the only writer of genius who used [illegible] paper.—London Spectator.

Tennyson and a Telescope.

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree in "Thoughts and Afterthoughts" tells this tale of Lord Tennyson: The poet was invited to a certain country house, and all the neighboring [illegible] of the county had been invited to meet him. After dinner he was asked whether he would like to look at the stars. Tennyson took up the telescope and, forgetting all else, gazed [illegible] the wonders of the heavens. "Well, what do you think, Mr. Tennyson?" inquired his host. "I don't think much of our county families," Tennyson replied.

Makes Up Her Loss.

It is estimated that Ontario loses ten thousand of her population every spring through those who go west on the homeseekers' and settlers' excursions. In the fall nearly twice that number leave for the prairies as harvesters. During the entire year there is a steady drain that would bring the total of those who leave for the west at close to 50,000.

But, while Ontario is losing heavily each year of what might be termed "native born," it is a great gainer from another source — the British Isles. This year the number of British immigrants that has already arrived here reaches 50,000, and when the figures for 1913 are complete the total will be well over 60,000.

A Clever Retort.

During the last general elections Rev. J. J. McDonald vigorously upheld the Reciprocity Pact in the Province of New Brunswick. At a meeting in Queen's County he was discussing the effect of the agreement on the price of various commodities.

"What about hay?" shouted an opponent.

"I'm discussing human food now," retorted the speaker, "but I'll come to your specialty in a moment."

Where Did They All Fight?

Fenian raid veterans seem to be multiplying as the years roll on. Forty-five years have elapsed since the dreaded invaders were repelled, and it has been estimated that no more than ten thousand men took up arms in defence of Canada at that time. A large number of the veterans have died during the almost half century.

However, to no fewer than eleven thousand "Fenian Raid Veterans" has the sum of $100 been paid by the Government under the Bounty Act of a couple of sessions ago. Not only that, but there are ten thousand applicants for the bounty still to be passed upon. The bulk of them will likely be rejected, of course.

The greatest number of applications in proportion to the population comes from Nova Scotia.

Leacock's Rejection.

Prof. Stephen Leacock was once criticising the following lines from Campbell's "Ye Mariners of England."

The meteor flag of England
Shall yet terrific burn;
Till danger's troubled night depart,
And the star of peace return.

"The star of peace," he pointed out, could not "return" after night "departed," for stars do not shine during the day.

"If you were struck hard enough between the eyes you would see stars any old time," suggested the witty member of the class.

"That is quite true," replied the professor, "but it would not be a 'star of peace'."

Old Winter Coughs Now Easily Cured

A New Remedy Now Cures Without the Use of Cough Syrups or Drugs

Just think of it—you can clear away that hard, racking cough, drive it completely out of the system, make yourself perfectly well by the new breathing cure that employs no medicine at all.

You wonder how; very simple, indeed; you simply breathe in through a Catarrhozone Inhaler rich balsamic essences that heal and soothe away the cough in a few hours' time.

In using Catarrhozone you bathe the lining of the nose and throat with that powerful antiseptic of the Blue Gum Tree of Australia, which is probably the surest cold and cough cure in the world to-day.

Clarence E. Cromwell, writing from Medicine Hat, says: "To cure a sneezing cold in about ten minutes the one thing I know of to do it is Catarrhozone. To relieve an irritated throat quickly, nothing can excel Catarrhozone. It simply cuts up a cough or cold of any kind. I know of colds that have hung on for months that Catarrhozone cured quickly. Nearly every man I know carries a Catarrhozone Inhaler with him day and night, and in this country it makes a wonderful protection against all winter ills."

Get the dollar outfit, including the hard rubber inhaler, and medication to last two months; medium size 50c, sample size 25c, at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Mr. R. Hicks is a candidate for the Utilities Commission for next year, which will take the place of the Water Commissioners' duties. Ald. Gordon may be a candidate, but is still coy when approached on this subject. As first noted in the Times, Mr. J. B. McWilliams is a candidate.

The Murray street church do not seem to have lost by starting their canvass one week later than their neighbors. The forty canvassers had tea together last evening. This work is almost complete and a full report is expected on Sunday evening.

The New Liquor Law

As there seems to be some misunderstanding here regarding a recently enacted law which forbids liquor to be sold over the bar in bottles or bulk, a despatch from Cornwall throws some light on this subject. It seems that an hotelkeeper there was just found guilty of selling a bottle of liquor over his bar. He was fined $40 and costs and the purchaser was also fined, the latter's assessment being $20 and costs.

Yesterday's Drunks

At yesterday's police court, John Bell, not the local bard, pleaded guilty to having been drunk. Bell lives in Smith. He was given ten days in which to pay a $2 fine. R. Keegan was charged with having been drunk. Keegan said he had had a drink or two, but was not drunk. He took a drink out of a flask in his house pantry. He is 19 years of age. Mr. Gordon, for the defendant, said he was going to get Keegan into the T.A.S. William Lavery was with him and drank out of the home bottle. The defendant was let go on suspended sentence.

To Make Lindsay Good

Lindsay Post: On Sunday next five gentlemen, all commercial travellers, and representatives of the Gideon Association, will be in Lindsay, and will occupy the pulpits of the Protestant churches. They will make no appeal for financial aid. It will be remembered that the Gideons aim at placing copies of the Bible in all the commercial hotels in the Province, and with this object in view the proprietors of the Hotels Benson and Simpson were interviewed on Saturday last. Manager H. J. C. Burgess of the Benson, will place the Bibles in 40 rooms, while Manager Simpson of the Hotel Simpson, will place 30 Bibles in his commercial house.

All Saints Bazaar

There was a good attendance yesterday at All Saints' W.G. Bazaar in All Saints' Parish Hall. Mrs. Wolstenholme, the president of the W.G. and her helpers were busy. The chief attraction was possibly the Dolls' House, an elegant structure of open work decorated with green and red. The rows of dolls made one wish to be a child again. The array of dolls' beds and dolls furniture made one wish to be a doll. Miss Savin, Miss Whitcroft and Mrs. Curtis sold these goods. The candy stall was in charge of Mrs. Rush and Mrs. Morgan. Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Haskell presided at the Children's clothing stall; Mrs. Lundy and Mrs. Smeaton at the fish pond. In the tea room, Mrs. Shannon and Mrs. Motherell were in attendance. The evening was enlivened by instrumental music and singing. The Bazaar is continued to-day.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worms, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always affects a cure. Information free. [illegible] Dundas street, Toronto.

LONDON BANKERS RETALIATE AS AUSTRIA SEEKS MONEY AID

C.P.R. Position in Austria Remains Unsatisfactory Despite Official Statements to Contrary

London, Dec. 11.—The Austrian Government is shortly coming to London for part of a large war loan. London financiers are expected to ask assurances of the quality of the treatment for British enterprises in Austria. Discrimination against the Canadian Pacific Railway continues despite official and unofficial protests and it is felt may be extended to other British enterprises at the will of any department by the Austrian Government, unless a stand is taken now. An official Austrian decree received in London to-day intimates that the Canadian Pacific may book passages, prepaid in Canada, before October 15th, when the Canadian Pacific offices in Austria were closed, but the British Embassy is still pressing for a restoration of rights which would enable the Canadian Pacific to fulfil its part of the original agreement with the Austrian Government, including the re-opening of other offices besides Vienna and Trieste, for such emigrant business as rival German lines are still permitted to do.

C.P.R. Request Ignored.

An important part of this business still denied to the Canadian Pacific is the booking of non-Austrian passengers. Appreciation is felt for what the British Foreign Office secured, but much remains to be done before the Canadian Pacific is placed on an equal footing with other lines in Vienna.

The Montags Journal, in an article entitled "The Canadian Joke," warns the authorities of ruin for Austria if England seriously contemplated cancellation of commercial treaties and forecasts a possible Canadian Pacific claim for an indemnity of two millions, which, no doubt Austria would pay on the sly, as she did in the recent difficulty with an Italian firm which constructed port buildings.

Admiral Opposes C.P.R.

Rear Admiral Geza Dell Adami Von Tarczal writes the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, arguing against a Canadian Pacific concession in the interests of the Austrian Mercantile Marine, and says Austria's motto should now be Argentina and the Panama Canal. On the other hand, The Vienna Neue Zeitung says the Canadian Pacific could in no wise harm the Austro-American line, which had no Canadian service and refused to establish one. The more ships of greater traffic attracted to Austrian ports the better for Austria.

SURGEON CUT OFF A TOE TO MAKE HIM A FINGER

Operation on Violinist Successful — Has Resumed His Playing.

Berlin, Dec. 11.—Prof. Gostell, director of the department of surgery at the University of Kiel, announces the complete success of an extraordinary operation performed in removing the fourth finger of a patient's left hand and replacing it by the second toe of his left foot.

The patient, a violinist, injured his finger and a painful swelling resulted. He was treated for four months and then amputation became necessary. It was decided that the toe would form the best substitute, both in size and shape, and possibly enable the man to continue his vocation. Within a month the patient was able to move his new finger. Now he has resumed his violin playing.

BALL NEXT WEDNESDAY IN NEW C P R SHEDS

Meetings were held in the C.P.R. Freight Office on Wednesday night and last night to arrange for a ball to celebrate the completion of the new freight sheds in Charlotte street. The floors will have to carry many heavy loads in the days that are coming, but they are to echo first to the beat of the "light fantastic" toe. The ball is fixed for next Wednesday. Arrangements are made to provide refreshments and orchestra, as well as for suitably heating, furnishing and decorating the building for the evening. The tickets are limited and may be obtained for a dollar a couple from any of the committee.

The ball is not arranged with a view to making money. The object is to promote a continuance of the good feeling between the public of Peterborough and the C.P.R. The committee is as follows: W. S. Dodd, James Skinner, J. H. Kerry, C. Taber, W. J. Brookes, J. Holliman, T. Guerin, W. Hill, M. King, G. Ferguson, T. Purvis, D. Rees, G. Torrence, J. W. Byers, R. E. Ivey, H. Palmer, J. H. Wilson, E. Hon. Mr. White says he is not surprised at the rather cool reception of the investors of London to the new Canadian loan.

THE GUARDS MADE CONVICT SWEAR ON PRAYER BOOK

Why Kingston Convict Refused to Disclose Their Names to Court--Tobacco Traffic in Penitentiary

MAN TUBBED AND BEATEN FOR EVADING WORK ON STONE PILE

Kingston, Dec. 11.—The searchlight was turned on the penitentiary again this morning when the Prison Reform Commission resumed its sessions, after a week's adjournment. It was announced that more convicts' evidence would be taken. A number of ex-convicts from Toronto, Hamilton and Brockville, have been summoned. It was stated that there are eighteen convicts yet to be heard.

Convict E.866, who caused a sensation at the last meeting of the commission by producing a plug of tobacco from his boot leg, was recalled. He said he would give a statement, but would not want to give names of convicts as they would get into trouble. Witness said he had evidence relating to the charges that unnatural offences were committed. He had a bundle of notes and was allowed to retire for a few minutes to get them in order.

"Tubbed" and Beaten.

Convict F.203 was given a hearing. He had a complaint about something that happened to him in August, 1912. He had asked the deputy to be given another job as he did not like work on the stone pile. Witness was given no change and refused to go on the stone pile. For this he was sent to the asylum and afterwards was "tubbed." One guard, named Aikens, hit him while he was in the tub and he was black and blue for weeks from the treatment he received. Asked about the traffic in tobacco, witness said he knew that tobacco was brought into the "Pen." There were certain convicts who secured tobacco and distributed it.

Mr. Whiting said the witness had told an extraordinary story the other day which had been denied and he did not think it was right to be taking convict evidence. The commission would be in session for a year. It would be well he thought for the commission to see the convicts privately and ascertain if they really had important evidence.

Dr. [illegible] said that he and the chairman had seen 50 convicts, and out of this number had picked seven to give evidence.

Saw Guards Drunk.

Witness declared that he had seen guards drunk and had also seen guards give convicts tobacco. He gave the names of two dozen or more convicts who had bought tobacco from guards.

SOUTH AFRICAN MINE OWNER IS SHOT BUT WILL NOW LIVE

Sir Lionel Phillips, One Time Friend of Rhodes, Victim of Bullets

Johannesburg, Union of South Africa, Dec. 11.—An attempt was made to-day to assassinate Sir Lionel Phillips, the leading gold mining magnate of South Africa. Three shots were fired at him.

One bullet lodged in his neck and another in one of his thighs. His condition is declared not to be grave. The would-be assassin was arrested.

The attempt was made while he was walking on Commissioner street. It is supposed to have been an outcome of the bitterness aroused against the mine owners owing to the dissatisfaction of the miners in connection with the conditions of settlement of the strike movement in September.

When 100 Men Were Killed.

At that time a series of riots occurred in which about 100 miners were killed and many wounded when they came into armed conflict with the troops and police.

The grievances of the men were chiefly concerned with the great mortality in the mines and the refusal of the mine owners to recognize the unions. They were eventually forced to accept the owners' terms.

Was Friend of Cecil Rhodes.

Sir Lionel Phillips was closely identified with the late Cecil Rhodes and Alfred Beit, and he is a partner in the firm of Wernher, Beit & Co. He has lived in Johannesburg since 1884.

In 1896 Sir Lionel was sentenced to death at Pretoria for participation in the Jameson Raid together with John Hays-Hammond, George P. Farrar and Col. Frank Rhodes. The sentence was later commuted to a fine of $125,000 and banishment.

SEAR MEN'S FEET WITH [illegible] POKER TO EXTORT MONEY

Beaver Falls, Pa., Dec. 11.—Three masked men broke in the residence of Philip Stabaly at West Bridgewater early today and, binding him to a chair, seared his feet with a hot poker until he disclosed the hiding place of his money.

The thieves found $37.15, and after taking it beat him into insensibility. When he recovered Stabaly gave the alarm, and police trailed three men to Folsom, Pa., where after pistol battle they captured two, who gave their names as Charles [illegible], of West Bridgewater, and John Kohler, of Monaca, Pa.

WILL UNVEIL A MONUMENT TO REFORMATION

Protestants to Put Up $160,000 For Great Memorial At Geneva

Geneva, Dec. 11.—Geneva, the city of refuge of the early Reformer, will before long, unveil its monument of the reformation, which promises to be one of the finest, the most original and the best planned in existence. The cost will probably amount to $160,000, of which sum $106,695 has already been subscribed by the Protestants Churches of Europe. It is expected that the United States will also contribute, owing to the inclusion in the scheme of the monument of the Reformer Roger Williams, the founder of the State of Rhode Island.

The German Emperor made a personal donation of $2500, also promising to defray the cost of a statue of William the Silent, one of his ancestors. This statue is one of those ranged along the stone wall, which is already completed, and which forms the background of the monument. Across this wall are the words: "Post tenebras lux." The Protestant communities of Hungary sent $10,300 and the City of Geneva $28,000. Gt. Britain has not yet sent in its entire contribution, but a considerable sum is expected from Scotland and Ulster.

CALVIN AND KNOX.

The back ground of the monument is an immense wall, while the immediate foreground is a promenade, in front of which are stately old trees. The central group consists of the figures of the four chief reformers, Calvin and Knox and Farel and Theodore of Beza. The figures on each side of the central group of reformers are those of Gaspard de Coligny, William the Silent, Oliver Cromwell, Roger Williams, Frederick William, the great elector, and Etienne Bocskay, Prince of Transylvania. Besides these side figures there are eight "bas reliefs," one representing Knox's first sermon before the Court of Mary Stuart, and showing the Queen's Dominican confessor, Darnley, and others of the best-known personages of the Edinburgh of that period.

All the sculptures are being executed by two French Roman Catholic sculptors, MM. Paul Landowski and Henry Bouchard, both young men not yet 40 years of age, while the designers of the monument are all Swiss, MM. Jean Taillens, Charles Dubois, Alphonse Laverriere and Eugene Monod, all of Lausanne and district.

Neither Luther nor Zwingli are to be commemorated by statues, but merely by mural inscriptions, as will also be the case with the precursors of the reformation, John Huss, John Wickliff and Valdo.

In this monument of the reformation the singular spectacle is noticed of French Roman Catholic artists enthusiastically laboring to fix in stone at the expense of the King of Prussia, the features and appearance not only of a Germanic Prince, but of the chief Protestant reformers.

The first stone of the monument was laid on July 10, 1909, the four hundredth anniversary of Calvin's birth, and the "Reformers' Wall," as it is already called, the wall which forms the background of the still uncompleted monument, contains a stone, bearing the following inscription: "Devant ce rampart de l'ancienne Geneve construit en 1543 sera erigé le Monument International de la Reformation."

FOUR HOTELKEEPERS WERE HEAVILY FINED AT TORONTO

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Jacob Burnstein proprietor of the New York Temperance House, York and Adelaide street appeared in the police court to-day charged with breach of the Liquor Law.

Burnstein pleaded guilty to selling unfermented port wine containing 11 per cent alcohol. He was fined $100 and costs or three months.

George Jackson, proprietor of the Peacock Hotel, West Toronto, and John Balatine, 113 York street, both pleaded not guilty of selling unfermented port wine containing 15 per cent. alcohol. They were convicted and each fined $100 and costs or three months.

William White proprietor of the Temperance Hotel on Queen street, pleaded guilty to selling local option beer, containing 7 per cent. alcohol. A fine of $100 was imposed.

"They should not sell the stuff at all, and I hope this will discourage them in the future," said Magistrate Denison.

HOCKEY THIS WINTER

Junior and Mercantile Leagues Hold Meetings in Preparation for the Coming Season.

Last night at the Brock street rink, a junior hockey league was formed consisting of the following clubs: Alerts, Boston Exploits, Wanderers and Y.M.C.A. Mr. Chris. Graham (who gave a cup to be competed for) was elected honorary president; Mr. Maher, president; R. M. Glover, vice-president; Mr. Theobald, secretary. Tickets will be on sale on Saturday at 4 p.m. at the rink. Lovers of hockey and all who wish to encourage healthy exercise for the boys are requested to purchase tickets so as to give the league a good start.

The representatives of clubs composing the Mercantile Hockey League held a meeting in the Y.M.C.A. last evening to arrange for the coming season's matches.

We understand that the Collegiate students have hired the rink from 5 to 6 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Thursdays.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 11.—It is understood to-day that several members intend to bring before the House this coming session the question of divorce reform. There is a strong feeling at the capital that it is time some change was made in the method of handling Canadian divorce cases. It is felt that the Senate Divorce Committee is not a suitable body to deal with the question. In addition, the number of applications for divorces annually is so large that it is almost impossible for the Senate Committee properly to hear all evidence and pass upon them. Last year forty applications came before the Upper Chamber, and this year there promises to be at least as many. Thirty-two have already been received, and applications can be received for the first two months of Parliament, so that the list may run to sixty.

Divorces Cost Money.

One objection which is raised to the present system, is that there is lack of uniformity throughout the Dominion. Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Prince Edward Island and British Columbia have divorce courts, while divorce cases from Quebec, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta are heard by the Senate Committee. It is proposed that each province have its own divorce court. It is felt that a court is the proper place to hear such cases, while in addition there would not be the heavy expenses as at present. Now for a Westerner to secure a divorce is a heavy financial proposition, as in addition to legal expenses all travelling expenses for witnesses to the Capital must be paid.

It is also argued that under the present system clever lobbying has as much to do with the decision in a case as the evidence. There have been in recent years several divorce applications before the Senate where interested parties have openly lobbyed.

CHARGED WITH CONDUCTING AN ILLICIT LOTTERY SALE

Auction Men Displayed Closed Packages, Said to Contain Jewelry

CONTENTS IN COURT OF SMALL VALUE QUARTETTE OUT ON BAIL

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Alleging that they had been conducting a lottery for the past three weeks at 51 King street west, through the sale by auction of closed packages said to contain jewelry. Detective Sergt. Mackie, Detectives Cronin and Levitt, yesterday afternoon arrested four men charged with conspiring to defraud. They are: Sidney H. Lee, William Shakespeare, both of 65 Rowanwood avenue; Albert Jacks, 1315 Yonge street, and Fred J. Speight, 143 Pearson avenue.

Some days ago the men placed in their window a number of covered boxes offered for sale at 50 cents and one dollar. The box selling for one dollar was guaranteed to contain from $5 to $15 worth of jewelry, and the 50c purchase was stated to contain from $1 to $5 worth of goods.

Bought Unopened.

"The purchaser was not given an opportunity to see the contents of the box before he bought," said Mr. Corley in the investigation to-day.

Several of these boxes were produced in the Police Court. The first opened contained an empty cigar box the next contained a beauty pin worth about 10 cents. Another contained nothing but cotton batting.

One had three partitions and in one of these sections neatly wrapped up was a thimble valued at about 10 cents.

"It is not a case of lottery, as there are no tickets," said Mr. Corley.

The men all pleaded not guilty and their counsel, Mr. T. C. Robinette, K.C., elected to be tried by jury. The men were released on $500 bail.

EXPECTS SENSATIONAL TRIAL

Revelations Promised at Trial Regarding Plum Coulee Branch Bank.

Winnipeg, Dec. 11.—The trail of Jack Krafchenko, charged with the murder of manager H. M. Arnold, of the Bank of Montreal at Plum Coulee and with the robbery of the bank, promises to be sensational. There are number of points to be cleared up, and it is understood witnesses will tell on the stand many things which have not yet been made public.

Among the witnesses for the prosecution will be William Dyck, the man who drove the car in which Krafchenko escaped from the scene of the shooting.

It has been announced by the Bank of Montreal that the branch of the bank at Plum Coulee will be closed out almost immediately.

DOUBLE-DECK STREET CARS SUGGESTED BY MAYOR HOCKEN

Change May be Considered if City Buys the Railway--Reconstruction of Overhead Work Involved.

Toronto, Dec. 11.—Double-deck street cars for Toronto is the latest proposal under consideration by the Mayor if such an innovation is feasible, Mr. Hocken believes it would do much to solve the transportation problem. He would introduce the pay-as-you-enter system and allow no overcrowding or standing passengers.

"I do not know whether the scheme is practical or not," the Mayor said to-day, "but at present I can see no absolute objections. Double deck houses are common. Why would we not have double deck street cars? Of course it would likely mean an entire reconstruction of overhead work but that should not prove too expensive. I would have both the lower and upper decks closed in, with provisions for opening the top deck in the summer.

The Mayor pointed out that there would be no unusual delay discharging passengers. It certainly would not take longer for a man or woman to get down from the upper deck than it does at present to fight one's way from the middle of the crowded car.

CHURCH UNION COMMITTEE

Toronto, Dec. 11.—The members of the Presbyterian Church Union Committee were elected [illegible] to meet the representatives of the Methodist Church and five representatives of the Congregational Church to discuss the desirability of temporary consideration of the basis of union. No official report of the meeting was given out, nor were the names of the members elected allowed to be published.

Self-Accused.

"Do you remember that $5 you borrowed of me a year ago?"

"I should say I do. I lost $1 of it [illegible] and the other hasn't paid me yet."

LUMINOUS APPARITION ARE SIGNALS FROM PLANET MARS

Geneva, Dec. 11.—M. le Coultre, the distinguished Swiss astronomer, who is at the head of the Geneva Observatory, has just made public his researches concerning the planet Mars which he has been studying for the past five years. Although very reserved in his language, there is little doubt that he thinks that the Martians have been signalling to the earth.

During his long observations — 70 nights were thus spent in 1909—M. Le Coultre observed a series of "luminous apparitions" of a bluish white color resembling the light of powerful electric arc lamps or searchlights.

At first these lights appeared for seconds and then disappeared, but in the following weeks the intervals lasted minutes and were always from the same spots.

During the past six or seven years the same lights have been seen by astronomers in different parts of the world, who have put them down to atmospheric or volcanic origin. M. Le Coultre does not agree with this theory.

He will continue his researches from January next on the summit of the Saleve, 4200 feet high, above Geneva, where a new observatory has just been completed.

MYSTERY OF SIGHT

Most Wonderful and Inexplicable of All Our Senses.

LIMITS OF THE HUMAN VISION.

There Are Colors All About Us That the Eye Cannot See, as We Cannot Distinguish Beyond the Extremes of the Spectrum Red and Violet.

No two persons see precisely alike any more than any two persons hear precisely the same. The differences in these perceptions are due to the wide disparities not only in the organs of vision and hearing, but also to the differences in mental makeup of the individuals.

There are more unsolved problems as to sight than any other sense. It is the most wonderful and at the same time the most inexplicable sense that we possess. Every school child is taught that we see because rays of light reach the retina of the eye after passing through the transparent cornea, that curved surface which is in direct contact with the external air, the aqueous or watery humor, and the crystalline and vitreous humors.

The eye in itself is made up of three separate lenses, through which the light passes before reaching the retina. When observed from outside it is plain that all the images appear to be reversed in the eye. We see everything upside down, but in some way this reversal is corrected, so that things appear to us as they should, though this simple point has not yet been explained by the most advanced science.

But the eye sees not only images and light; it also distinguishes color. And here is one of the greatest problems with which the eye has to deal. The white light of a ray of sunshine is divided by a prism into all of the colors from red to violet, and it is one of the greatest triumphs of modern optics to have proved that what we call color is nothing but the speed with which some parts of the ray of sunshine strike upon the retina.

The eye can perceive waves striking it as low as red and as high as violet, but there are many rays both above and below the red and violet, the extremes of the spectrum, as they are called. The human eye cannot perceive these because the length of the waves or the frequency with which they strike upon the retina are too great or too small for the human organ. Yet they are most important, exercising a great influence upon human beings.

The ultra violet rays are known now by their chemical action and are termed chemical rays, while the infra red rays are heat rays and are known as such. So it is evident that there is much that the eye does not or cannot see, even with all the mechanical aids which have been provided in telescope, microscope, etc.

What really carries the message of vision to the brain center of vision, which is at the back of the head, is the optic nerve, and the fact that if you have a pain in the back of the head it is probably due to eye strain is admitted by all physicians. If you feel that strain and headache located at the occiput the first thing to do is to consult an oculist and get the glasses which will correct the error of vision.

Your eyes may be wrong in any number of ways. Either there may be a defect in some one of the lenses or the nerve may have become weakened or the muscles of accommodation by which the eye is focused may be wrong. The last is probably the commonest of troubles and may be easily corrected if promptly taken in hand by an expert.

Cross eyes are only defects of muscular control, and the latest researches point to the necessity for correcting this defect as promptly as possible. Many parents make the fatal mistake of not calling in the specialist even when they notice that an infant "crosses the eyes." But it is in the early stages that this trouble may be best corrected; otherwise the muscles become fixed in their error and the defect is permanent.

It is never too early to put glasses upon the child who requires them. It is often too late to save the child from permanent injury of the most beautiful, most expensive and most useful organ.—New York World.

LEARNING A LANGUAGE.

It Is an Easier Task the Younger It Is Taken in Hand.

The time to learn a language is when you are young, the younger the better. We learn our own language as children. The older we grow the harder it is, because it means not merely learning by heart a great many words, not merely training the palate and tongue to produce different sounds, but adopting a new attitude of mind.

Nothing definite has been discovered as to the localization of faculties in the brain, therefore nothing certain is known, but it has always seemed to me and to others whom I have consulted that when you learn a new language you are exercising and developing a new piece of brain.

When you know several languages and change from one to another you seem definitely to change the piece of brain which [illegible]. You switch off one [illegible] and switch on to another.

ONTARIO'S ROADS.

Huge Problem Faces New Highways Commissioners.

The series of public meetings held by the Ontario Highways Commission is the forerunner of the greatest road improvement scheme ever planned in a Canadian province. British Columbia is engaged in building a road system costing five millions, and Quebec is spending ten millions on long trunk roads paralleling the St. Lawrence, and in aiding municipalities, but the Ontario program will outdistance them all in comprehensiveness and vigor, says George W. Austen in Canadian Courier.

What is the condition of road improvement on which the Commission must base plans? How far has Ontario progressed already? Sober truth it is, that though in twenty years time and money of a direct value of over $50,000,000 been been put on the roads, Ontario is yet far behind most modern states in road improvement. Agriculturally, this province is the most productive in the Dominion. It has likewise a greater mileage of stone roads than any other province. But it fails most notably to show road development at all in keeping with its productive position. In the last twenty years the townships have spent about $20,000,000 in cash, and about 22,000,000 statute labor days on their roads, without improving them, in the opinion of the provincial highways engineer, much beyond their condition at the beginning of the twenty years. The counties which have been improving main market roads, under the Highway Improvement Act of 1901, spent, up to the end of 1912, $4,272,478, receiving from the Government as its share of the cost, one-third of that amount, or $1,424,493. Thus the total expenditure on county and township roads, with a total mileage of over 50,000, has been, since 1892, about $23,272,000 cash and about 22,000,000 statute labor days.

In one of his annual reports, Provincial Engineer McLean estimates that in the organized counties of old Ontario, the 50,000 miles of road may be classified thus:

1. Trunk roads, connecting the large cities and towns, 5 per cent., or 2,500 miles.
2. County or leading market roads, 12 per cent., or 6,000 miles.
3. Main township roads, 50 per cent., or 25,000 miles.
4. Secondary township roads, 33 per cent., or 16,500 miles.

ROD AND LINE WON.

Contest Between a Strong Swimmer and an Expert Angler.

A novel contest took place some time ago at the Edinburgh corporation baths between one of the strongest swimmers in Scotland and a well known angler. The contest occurred in a pool eighty feet long and forty feet wide.

The angler was furnished with an eleven foot trolling rod and an ungreased silk line. The line was fixed to a girth belt, made expressly for the purpose, by a swivel immediately between the shoulders of the swimmer at the point where he had the greatest pulling power.

In the first trial the line snapped. In the second the angler gave and played without altogether slacking line, and [illegible] the swimmer then tried every [illegible], but ultimately was beaten, the [illegible] ending with a victory for the rod and line.

Another contest took place in which the angler employed a very light trouting rod [illegible] and weighing only [illegible] ounces, the line [illegible] the same as that used with the trolling rod. The swimmer, whose idea evidently was to smash the rod, pulled and tugged [illegible] He was held steadily, however, and in about [illegible] minutes was forced to give in. The rod was again successful. At the finish both competitors were almost exhausted.

KITCHENER FOR INDIA

It is stated by the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore that the appointment of Sir Beauchamp Duff as commander-in-chief of the Indian army is the prelude to Lord Kitchener's appointment as viceroy of India. There may be a foundation of fact for the statement, yet it certainly seems premature. Not for nearly eighteen months will the present viceroy's term of office expire. It may be, however, that Lord Hardinge thinks of retiring earlier. He is still somewhat weak from the wound he received in an attempt to assassinate him at the Delhi durbar, and the burden of duty at his post is heavy. If some political seers are right in reading signs of storm ahead it may be that before long a stronger and perhaps a sterner hand will have to take the helm of that ship of State which Kipling has celebrated as the Galley.

Lord Kitchener is generally believed to be the man best fitted for the position. This field marshal and viscount, now viceroy of Egypt, owes nothing to any social advantages or "accident of birth," but has steadily climbed to distinction and honor by means of his own sheer ability, hard work and indomitable will. When only a young officer he proved his power as a leader, organizer and strategist by remodelling the Egyptian army, turning the fellaheen into soldiers who would follow him anywhere and building a railway to Omdurman in order to smash the Khalifa. He took his place as a man of affairs, at once far-sighted, firm and tactful, when he checked the French expedition at Fashoda. And since then he has gone up from post to post of increasing trust and responsibility, never failing to fulfil expectations.

He knows India and all its races. None knows the Indian army better. He was its commander-in-chief for seven years, and he thoroughly re-organized it before leaving India in 1909. The Sikhs, the Rajputs, the Goorkhas, the Mahrattas, all the native fighting men, as well as the British contingent, "swear by Kitchener." And perhaps the forces of sedition and murder fear him, for it is said that "a stir has been caused among Terrorists in Bengal" by the mere announcement of his coming. By taking up the viceroyalty of India in his 63rd year Lord Kitchener would fittingly round out a remarkably brilliant career.

Stomach Always Bloated, Had Constant Indigestion

SMELL OF COOKING MADE HIM SICK—BILIOUS TWO DAYS A WEEK.

Cured by Dr. Hamilton's Pills.

Mr. Clemmons' experience is not unusual. Nowadays poor stomachs are more the rule than the exception. But the proper treatment is sure to make a quick cure. You can always depend on Dr. Hamilton's Pills, they reach the trouble at once, go right to business, work while you sleep and have you feeling better if not cured next morning.

"My food seemed to decompose in my stomach," writes Mr. Ralph Clemmons, of Newbridge P.O. "I had a stomach that failed in some way to perform its work. Digestion seemed more or less arrested and I grew thin, yellow, nervous. The stomach became distended and impeded apparently the action of the heart, for often at night it would do great stunts. At times I would vomit a mucous mass, and at these times my head ached most terribly. A friend who had been cured of a similar condition advised me to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills regularly, which I did. The result in my case was simply marvelous. Dr. Hamilton's Pills removed the cause, strengthened the stomach, excited the liver to normal action, the kidneys were relieved of excessive work. Health soon grew within me. I can now eat, sleep and live like a live man.

Be advised—use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—they are sure to do you good. 25c. per box, five for $1.00, at all druggists and storekeepers or by mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y. and Kingston, Canada.

DALHOUSIE ST. BRIDGE.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will you allow me a few lines in your paper to say what I, as a comparatively heavy taxpayer, think of the proposed Dalhousie Street Bridge. I think that should a by-law be presented asking for $65,000 or $70,000 for such purpose should be voted down and should $110,000 be asked for the by-law should be snowed under an avalanche of indignation. This city is now held up for 25 mills taxation with every prospect of a higher rate. The Hunter Street Bridge is getting in the sere and yellow leaf and will soon have to be replaced by a more modern and costly structure.

What I would suggest is that instead of building a costly bridge at Dalhousie, with the certainty of Hunter Street bridge being rebuilt, that a handsome, commodious and modern elevated bridge be erected on Hunter—a bridge that would put an end to the grade at each end as at present, and one that will accommodate street railway. It is only a matter of time until the street cars will have to seek an entrance to the east ward. Now that the government is doing extensive dredging with a swing in the C.P.R. bridge, it, the Government, as well as the street car company would no doubt divide the cost of such a bridge as I propose, with the city.

C. Hamilton.

MIXING UP MARRIAGES

Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., Writes on the Subject.

The following letter, addressed to the Christian Guardian, will be of interest to many of our readers:

Dear Sir,—By a Guardian editorial of a recent issue on mixed marriages there has been left in the minds of some of your readers a mixed idea of the present state of things in Canada with regard to marriage. If you will allow me I would like to call your attention to the following:

1. Ne Temere aspired to decide on all marriages in which Catholics were concerned. The claim of the Pope in this respect was submitted to the courts by the Government by public request, and the courts established the fact once and for all that the civil law, only, in Canada had the power to decide whether a marriage was valid or otherwise.

2. In case of trouble regarding any mixed or other marriages anywhere in Canada, even in Quebec, an appeal lies to the civil courts and to them only. Of course if people want the Pope to decide a question he can do so, just as any other arbitrator chosen by mutual consent can, but that does not make his decision either valid or compulsory or legal.

3. Such a reference as that was the course pursued in the Castellano case, the evidence of which I have before me, and to which you refer. If such a performance took place in Canada it would only be laughed at. Marriages cannot be dissolved in this way in Canada.

4. Take the difficulty in the Tremblay case. The civil law in Quebec says, as elsewhere in Canada, respecting all denominations, that where the rules of a denomination are complied with, and a cleric or S.A. officer marries people, then the civil law will consider them married. The Church now appeals to the civil law, and asks that the Tremblay marriage be dissolved, because the Church claims that the rules were not complied with in that case. The courts will now decide that question, not the church, although it might like to do so.

5. Since Ne Temere, and all the pretensions that go with it, were thrown out, what more can be asked than is disclosed in the facts cited in the preceding paragraphs relating to marriage in Canada?

6. An action for slander lies against any cleric or lay person who says that any marriage in Canada is invalid not declared so by the civil courts. The supremacy of the civil law is complete.

J. H. BURNHAM,
Peterborough.

The Guardian replies as follows:—Our correspondent does not distinguish between civil and ecclesiastical validity. The fact is that the Church of Rome does still declare that certain mixed marriages are null and void. We know that in Ontario this declaration does not affect in any degree the legal standing of the parties concerned, but it does affect the conscience and action of the Roman Catholic party. As to whether an action could lie against any priest or bishop for asserting that certain marriages were null and void ecclesiastically we cannot say. Possibly Mr. Burnham is right, but we know of no case which has decided this matter.

MAJORITY AGAINST NEW STYLE DANCES

Montclair Residents, Answering Queries, Decide Against Tango Trot and Kindred Steps.

Newark, Dec. 11.—Dances of the tango, trot, "hesitation" and "dip" type are among the forms of amusement disapproved of by Montclair residents who have answered the questions relating to children's social activities, sent out a fortnight ago by a committee proposing to regulate and "simplify" the younger folks' entertainment in the town.

More than 200 replies to the list of eleven questions have been received by Scout Commissioner Frank F. Gray, secretary of the committee. These will be tabulated and analyzed at a meeting to be held in Unity Church tonight. The object of the campaign is the development of a "simple, sensible social code" for children, which shall be recognized as a guide in the community.

It was in answer to the question: "Forms of amusements now in vogue which you disapprove?" that the modern dances were disapproved. About ninety per cent. of those answering looked with disfavor on the new steps. The others omitted that question. Almost all who replied agreed that out-of-doors recreation are the ideal recreation for young folk.

A summary of the question shows, Mr. Gray has found, that the number of formal juvenile functions favored per year is three. There was a variance as to the number of informal parties favored. Children's entertainments during the Christmas holidays were limited to two or three by the majority.

It is proposed not to form a permanent organization to conduct the campaign. Instead a committee will be named tonight to direct the movement. Every organization, including those of young people, which desires representation on the committee will be allowed a delegate, it is stated.

LEPERS ARE CURED

Dr. Montizambert, director of public health in Canada, believes that he has discovered a cure for leprosy. During the past year two of the cases which have been under the treatment at the Canadian Leper Colony at Tracadie, N.B., have been sent away cured. In all there have been four absolute cures. The only doubt which is in Dr. Montizambert's mind is that the disease has run itself out, for two cases have been cured in some way without more than ordinary care and treatment. At any rate, four cases which have been under this special treatment have been completely cured, and apparently hopeless cases have been materially benefited.

The cure, Dr. Montizambert says, is chaulmoogra oil. He has made a special study of leprosy during the past 20 years, and amongst all the remedies which he has found used in various parts of the world, he pinned his faith to this oil, which has been in use in India for centuries. He will explain the treatment to medical societies and submit detailed reports of the effect of the Indian treatment.

A GROTESQUE BIRD

Remarkable Assortment of Colors of the Brazilian Toucan

IT VERY OFTEN SOLD AS A PET

The very peculiar looking Brazilian bird, the toucan, has a body about as big as that of a good sized pigeon, but its beak is very different and easily its dominant feature, though this bird is by no means lacking in bright and striking colors. The toucan's beak is half as long as its body, and it is broad and thin and set on edge vertically, shaped something like a blunted scythe, with the slightly curving rounded edge on top and ending with a hook point turned downward—a remarkable beak in size and shape—and this beak is tinted with a remarkable assortment of colors, purple and red and green and yellow, while around the beak at the head runs a line of black.

The eyes of the toucan are surrounded by circles of a bright light blue, and on its breast, regularly outlined, is a broad and deep expanse of bright yellow in size and shape in proportion to the bird about the same as the generous expanse of shirt front shown by a man in evening dress with his waistcoat cut low and well rounded out at the bottom, this show of yellow being edged with a red line. The toucan's body for the bulk of it is black or a very deep blue black, but around at the base of the tail run two bands of color, one red and one white.

It is not a song bird. It is sold as a pet, [illegible] to adults, and it is more often fancied by men than by women. It takes $25 to $30 to buy a toucan.—New York Sun.

Tapping the Plants to Gather the Pearl Like Drops of Juice.

Round about Shiraz, as far as Ispahan, southward to the country of the date palm, a great deal of opium is grown, and several thousand chests are shipped from Shiraz to China and various other large centers of the trade every season. The collecting of the opium juice begins in June, when, the flowers having faded and the leaves fallen, the poppy heads are ready to be bled. When the sun stands low on the western horizon the men with the tools start their work, making one or two incisions in the fleshy green skin of the heads on the side toward the setting sun. During the cool night hours the brown, strong smelling viscous juice comes out and collects in pearl-like drops on the surface of the seed vessel.

Before the rising sun gains sufficient power to dry or crystallize the sticky substance the gathering is in full swing. Stepping carefully from plant to plant, the men gather the opium on the broad blades of their crescent shaped collecting knives, which have an upturned back about an inch high to prevent the juice from dropping off. As soon as a knife is full it is handed to the owner of the field or his foreman, who stands among the collectors to see that none of the precious drops are hidden away by the workers to increase their daily wages. As soon as the morning work is over the fields are deserted until the afternoon, when new incisions have to be made. Each plant is tapped twice, and a large poppy head gives from twenty to thirty grains of opium.—Christian Herald.

Curious Lake of Soda in the Wilds of East Africa.

Lake Magadi, in British East Africa, is famous for its vast deposits of soda. Until recently few people have seen its shores, for it lies in the midst of a barren and waterless district, but the railway that was started a few years ago by an English company opens the way for travelers to this curious natural phenomenon. A recent visitor describes it in the London Field:

Ordinarily it looks as if it had frozen and as if snow had then fallen upon [illegible]. The temperature gives the lie to this appearance of [illegible], for the heat is intense and of [illegible] almost unbearable. The soda keeps the foot [illegible] through a boot, and the sharp projecting spikes, which [illegible], will play [illegible]. CAUGHT THE COINER WHEN VIOLIN FELL AND BROKE

An Accident Spoiled an Ingenious Counterfeit Scheme

A case which shows the ingenuity used in passing counterfeit coin is the following: A tailor, who also was a very successful coiner, had a little daughter who was some ten years old. She was being taught to play the violin, and twice a week she went to have a music lesson at a house about a mile distant. Once a week the innocent little thing carried besides her violin case and violin a package cunningly secreted in the false bottom of the violin case, which contained some twenty or more pieces of counterfeit coin.

The music master, a rogue who was in the know, found no difficulty in abstracting the package unnoticed by the child and in his turn passed it on to a woman "fence," who again gave it to a male friend, who delivered it safely to the "utterer," a woman again, at a street corner, the package being this time concealed in the false bottom of a canary cage. Thus it passed through six hands, and besides the man himself only the music master knew who manufactured the coin.

The tailor was caught by an accident. His little girl let the violin case fall in the street, the bottom of the case was smashed, and all the coins, done up in tissue paper, fell into the street. The child, much mystified, opened one of the little packages, and the glitter caught a policeman's eye. This mishap led to the instant arrest of the tailor, who confessed, hoping for a light sentence, a hope which was not realized. Among the coiner's stock in trade were discovered two works on chemistry, fourteen molds, two batteries, plaster of paris, two ladles, a melting pot, crucibles and a quantity of chemicals.—London Telegraph.

HENTY AS AN INVENTOR.

The Author's Reversible Boat That Was a Halfway Success.

George Henty, the author of boys' stories, is described in "Sixty Years In the Wilderness," by Henry W. Lucy, as the warmest hearted, shortest tempered man in the world.

"Before he found his true vocation in writing boys' books Henty tried various methods of supplementing his salary on the Standard. One was the recovery of tin from broken or disused utensils. For some months his study was filled with a bad smell and scraps of broken tin. The smell was engendered by efforts to melt off the tin from the baser metal with the assistance of a chemical compound invented by the operator.

"The next thing that attracted Henty's attention and filled him with hope of fortune was the building of a reversible boat, bound to right itself automatically. He took rooms up the river and, with some assistance from a village mechanic, built his boat. To a certain extent it proved an unqualified success. At the slightest well directed touch, sometimes without it, it would turn over, keel uppermost, with Henty in the river. Righting itself was, as the French say, 'another pair of sleeves.'

"Through some anxious weeks he was frequently ignominiously rescued by a passing boat and walked home, oozing water from pockets and boots. In the end his landlady gave him notice that she could not 'be always mopping up after him.' I fancy he gladly seized this opportunity of retiring from the boat building business."

Stories of the Gravediggers.

Grimly humorous is the tale of the Scottish gravedigger who complained that he did not get constant work.

"But, George," said the minister, "if you were to be constantly employed in the duties of the office you would soon bury the whole parish."

"That might be, sir, but hoo am I to keep a wife, and family unless I get regular work? 'Deed, sir, I havena buried a leevin' soul for the last six weeks."

Harder still was the case of another gravedigger who was asked to reduce his fee for digging a grave because, "mind ye, James, she was an auld woman and was sair spent."

Malay Houses.

Malay houses are invariably built on posts so as to raise the floor from four to six feet above the ground. The floor is composed of bamboo, with interstices between slats, the earth beneath becoming the receptacle of the drainage of the establishment. The universal plan of the well to do natives is to build the house in two divisions, the front one for receiving visitors and lounging generally, while the rear portion is reserved for the women and children.

WAR ON HUDSON BAY

IT WAS ONCE THE SCENE OF A NAVAL BATTLE.

During the Reign of William and Mary Canada's Inland Sea Was the Theatre of a Desperate Struggle for Supremacy Between the English and the French—Britain Lost Three Ships in Conflict.

Since the days of Henry Hudson, three hundred and four years ago, the waters of the Bay and Strait that bear his name have been navigated by white men. The Great Company, founded sixty years after the discovery of the Bay, sent out its ships laden with goods and brought them home laden with furs, using only this route. The adventurous Radisson and his companions laid the foundation of this trade and established the rule of the company throughout much of this northern region.

With trade there mingled the stern condition of war. The Hudson Bay Company was holding this country for England—this was before there was a United Kingdom—and several times the French attempted to drive the English from it, and thereby make Rupert's Land a part of New France, of which the capital was Quebec on its heights overlooking the St. Lawrence.

This war on the waters and along the shores of Hudson Bay took place during the reign of William and Mary.

The leader of the French forces sent to Hudson Bay was Iberville, after whom is named one of the counties of the Province of Quebec. In 1694 he compelled Port Nelson—Fort Nelson, it was then called—to surrender after a bombardment of three weeks. Two years later an English fleet recaptured the fort, at the same time securing a vast quantity of furs. Then both England and France prepared for a conflict, that, it was expected, would finally settle the question of supremacy in Hudson Bay.

Each country sent out a fleet, that from England consisting of four of the company's ships—the Hampshire, the Hudson Bay, the Dering, and Owner's Love. The English ships entered the Strait only forty hours in advance of the ships of the French, both fleets being much impeded by the ice. The French ships really followed in the wake of the English.

Having entered the Bay, where there was more open water, Iberville, in his ship Pelican, succeeded in slipping by the English ships unknown to them, and reached the mouth of the Nelson River, within sight of the fort. The garrison was greatly surprised, for it had been hoped that the English fleet would prevent the French ships from passing through the Strait. The appearance of the Pelican showed that this had not been done; but the English fleet was hourly expected, and shots were fired as a signal to the approaching vessels.

Iberville also anxiously awaited the coming of his own vessels, and so two days were passed in a state of suspense by both the garrison at Fort Nelson and the crew of the Pelican. On the morning of the third day, which was September 5, 1697, three ships were distinctly visible, and so confident was Iberville that they were his that he hoisted anchor and sailed away to join them. As he drew near he learned, to his surprise and, perhaps, somewhat to his dismay, that the ships were the English fleet, now reduced to three ships; for the fourth, the Owner's Love, had become separated from her companions when they were in the ice-field and was never more heard of.

Iberville was not daunted by the discovery. He decided to attack, and made straight for the three ships of the enemy. It was a case of three against one, but Iberville's one was much superior to its opponents, for the Pelican was manned by about two hundred and fifty sailors and marines, and the vessel carried forty-four pieces of cannon.

The battle began at once. Iberville first tried to run down and board the Hampshire. Failing in this, he turned to the Dering and the Hudson Bay, pouring into each a damaging broadside; the English replying with a musket fire into the Pelican's crew and a broadside of grape-shot which wrought havoc with the enemy's sails.

The Hudson Bay then tried to run in front of the Pelican and give her a constant hull fire, besides taking the wind from her sails. Iberville saw the intended movement. He veered around and by a fine piece of seamanship came so near the Hampshire that the crew saw that boarding was intended, but a terrific broadside of grape held the French in check, for a time saving the Hampshire. It was only for a time, for at the end of three and a half hours of fighting the Hampshire began to sink with all sails set.

At this time there were [illegible] men severely wounded on board the Pelican, forty having been struck by a single broadside. Notwithstanding this, Iberville decided to push the fight with the Dering, which was the smallest ship, and had suffered severely. The Dering, seeing that she was singled out for destruction, crowded on sail and managed to avoid an encounter. The Pelican being in no condition to give chase returned to the Hudson Bay, which soon surrendered.

In the meantime, the Hampshire had been steadily sinking, and shortly after the surrender of the Hudson Bay, the Hampshire went down with nearly all on board; and thus was concluded what was, in the opinion of the best authorities, both French and English, one of the fiercest and bloodiest naval battles of the war.

Amazing Resources of Southeastern Plains.

A recent traveler in the Amur River country of eastern Siberia speaks of wonderful possibilities of development there. The whole country appeared fine and promising. There are wide plains, wholly uncultivated, on which grows excellent grass, about three feet high, of fine texture. These plains, it is estimated, would support millions of sheep or cattle. The soil is of good quality and of a deep black.

In the gardens and plantations where settlements have arisen beautiful crops of all descriptions were to be seen—wheat, barley, oats and potatoes in abundance. Through the last 600 miles to the sea the country is one expanse of splendid forest, both on Russian and Chinese territory. In every mountain gully there were Chinese prospectors seeking gold. A hundred million people could be settled in this white man's country.

Easily navigable, the Amur provides a great natural highway for traffic from end to end. It is strange that neither the Chinese on the south nor the Russians on the north appear to develop the resources of the country. There are signs of progress, however. The chief of these is that wheat and barley are being harvested by reapers and binders—probably for the first time in Asia.

It is estimated that 100,000 workers enter the country every year from Europe. Farming, mining, lumbering and fishing are the chief industries.

A country which should be exporting millions of bushels of wheat and might in course of time become the chief source of the European supply is now importing bags of flour. The principal minerals are gold, copper and coal. Blagoveshchensk is the centre of an increasing gold mining industry, and so plentiful is gold that it was humorously said to be reckoned not by the ounce but by the pood, a Russian weight equal to 36 pounds.

As to the antiquity of Chinese industry in this part of Siberia there are evidences that the gold mines were worked by them centuries ago. Growing out of some of the old workings are trees of great size and age.

THE VOICE OF VICTORY

Under the old drill conditions, a loud voice was almost a necessary qualification for non-commissioned officers, and thereby arises a good story from one of the oldest volunteer corps.

A certain private whom we will call Blank was undergoing his course of instruction for a sergeant's certificate, and, although quite at sea with barrack-square movements, he had a 4.7 inch voice and plenty of cheek, and he meant to get through somehow.

The day arrived for the practical examination, and Blank turned out with his comrades and took his turn.

"I want this squad taken from here and halted facing the north side of the drill hall," said the adjutant.

The movement was simple, but entirely beyond poor Blank; still, he hesitated not.

"Squad!" he yelled. "Hi, yah-r-r-r-r-t a-ho hip!"

"Great Scot!" said the adjutant, as the echoes died away in the distance. "I don't know what the dickens he said; but he's got a lovely voice, and I shall certainly pass him." And he did.

A GOOD COLLECTION

An easterner was seated at a table in a restaurant in a western town. The proprietor, who was a very genial sort of a man, approached his table and entered into conversation with him.

"That is a novel idea of yours, certainly, calling your guests to dinner by firing off a barrel of your shotgun. But pardon my inquisitiveness, why do you discharge only one barrel?" asked the easterner.

"Oh, I keep the other bar'l to collect payment for dinner."

How many have become poor by buying inferior articles because they are cheap? This is false economy. The same applies to milk as well as any other commodity. HUMAN HEREDITY.

It Is Confined, So It Is Asserted, to a Likeness to Parents.

There are few subjects on which so much "scientific" nonsense is talked and written as on heredity. Not very much is known of it as regards plants, less of animals and almost nothing as regards humanity. To read books on heredity, especially those of the Eugenic society, is to read a mass of suppositions and baseless inductions where most of the facts are negative and only the exceptions are positive.

The very meaning of "heredity" is not understood. If any quality is truly hereditary then it is always hereditary. It never occurs except as the result of heredity, and it is constant—that is to say, it invariably follows. But there is no quality of which this can be said. That genius is not hereditary is known. Even talent is not. Nor is any aptitude. A lawyer's son more often wants to be a soldier or an artist than a lawyer, notwithstanding the environment, and it is so with most professions. The exceptions seem to be due to training and influence, not to hereditary transmission.

A superficial likeness to parents [illegible] hereditary, but that is all that [illegible] [illegible] There is nothing so easy and nothing so fatal in this tendency to attribute to heredity what is due to training or want of training. [illegible]

POLLUTED WATER.

Cheap and Simple Method by Which It May Be Purified.

The best thing to do with polluted water is to keep it out of your mouth and wait until you can get some pure water. Of course a man might starve to death in some places following that advice, so here is the next best thing to do. Disinfect the dangerous water. Here is the way to do it.

Dissolve a teaspoonful of chloride of lime in a cupful of water, making sure that all lumps are thoroughly broken up, then add three more cupfuls of water. Stir the mixture well and allow to stand for a few seconds in order that any solid particles may settle.

This mixture, if kept in a tightly stoppered bottle, may be used for four or five days, when a new solution should be prepared. Add one teaspoonful of this milky looking solution to each two gallons of water to be purified and stir thoroughly in order that the weak chlorine solution will come in contact with all the bacteria which may be present. Allow this to stand for ten minutes. This will give approximately one part of free chlorine to 1,000,000 parts of water and will effectually destroy all typhoid and other bacilli or other disease germs in the water. The water will be without taste or odor, and the trace of free chlorine will rapidly disappear. This method is one which is now recommended in the health literature of the country.

Water so disinfected is not dangerous so far as the chloride of lime is concerned if allowed to stand for ten or fifteen minutes after applying. The chief danger is that not enough disinfectant will be applied to render the water safe in all instances.

BOARDING IN A CUBAN HOME

You Must Not Mention Money, but You Pay All the Same.

In Cuba, where money is not talked of, where no one is valued according to his money, the need of it is nevertheless the sword hanging over every home. Money—the lack of it is evident everywhere, but the word is never mentioned, writes Kate Jordan in the New Idea Woman's Magazine.

"Be sure you do not speak of money," the Cuban friend who had introduced us had said. "From her cousin's brother-in-law I know the senora expects $8 a week for each of you. Put this in an envelope with her full name on it, which you know includes not only her husband's name, but all of her own family names, which I will give you, and leave it where she will find it. It will disappear, but," said our Cuban friend proudly and clearly, "it will never be mentioned."

To eat one's three meals under the summer sky gave a holiday flavor to what became habit. Our table was set under a palm on one of the galleries. Our first taste of the iced oranges of Cuba was a moment to be remembered. They are peeled whole and so close that even the juicy pulp are cut into a little. A fork is stuck into each orange, and, resting in a bowl of ice [illegible] all night, they are in the morning little globes of iced liquid sweetness. They are eaten while held up on the fork, on the pulp, the skeleton of the orange being left impaled on it.

The Havana housekeeper believes in having the cook, with the gravity of a police sergeant, deposit the food on the table, because in her point of view what is meant to be hot should be so [illegible] to be cold of a polar [illegible].

After the cook's triumphal bearing in of a dish other servants are on hand to give minor service.

WHEN THE PLAGUE RAGED.

Cat and Dog Laws in England in the Sixteenth Century.

Disease and the dog were believed to walk together in the sixteenth century. The terrier then was as much a suspect as the rat today. In plague times he had only to venture into the street to court death. Here is an order issued by the authorities of Winchester in 1583, which is typical of the rest: "That if any house within this cytie shall happen to be infected with the Plague, that then every persone to keepe within his or her house every his or her dogg and not to suffer them to goe at large. And if any dogge be then founde at large it shall be lawful for the Bedle or any other persone to kill the same dogge and that any owner of such dogge going at large shall lose 6 shillings."

Among the records of King's Lynn, under May, 1585, appeared this: "For as muche as it hath pleased Allmightie God to begynne to send us his visitation with sickness amongst us and that dogges and cattes are thought verie unfitt to be suffered in this tyme, Therefore, Mr. Maior, aldermen and common councell have ordered and decreed that every inhabitant within the same Towne shall forthwith take all their dogges and cattes and hange them or kill them and carrye them to some out place and burye them for breeding of a great annoyance.

"And likewise for cattes, if there be any nigh unto any house or houses visited with sickness. It is ordered that the cattes shall forthwith be killed in all such places." An exception was made in favor of any "dogge of accompte." Such a one was allowed to be kept if "tyed up or tied up or hid in a house."—Chicago News.

SWEATING COINS.

Gold Pieces Cleverly Robbed of Their Precious Metal.

THE SYSTEM IS A FINE ART.

Nowadays Chemical Baths, Splitting and Abrasion Take the Place of the Older and Cruder Plugging—Branding the Lightweight Money.

A drilled or "plugged" coin has become something of a curiosity. Every one remembers the inconvenience of these mutilated coins. It was a matter of daily occurrence to find oneself in possession of a silver, gold or even nickel coin defaced in this way. Sometimes the hole was filled with some baser metal; often it was left open. This system of mutilating coins had the advantage, however, of being perfectly obvious, and no careful person need be deceived.

Nowadays the work of defrauding coins is reduced to a fine art. The old, crude method of plugging the coins will not suffice, since the general public and the government are far more intolerant of the practice than ever before. If the precious metal is to be robbed from the coins it must be done so cleverly that even the expert will be deceived. It no longer pays to mutilate nickel or even silver coins, so, except in exceptional cases, it is only the gold coins which are mutilated. This practice, commonly known as "sweating," requires considerable skill, and the ingenuity displayed is often amazing.

The "sweating" must be done in such a way that the coin will appear perfect, even to the closest observer. The federal government will not permit any gold coin to circulate the weight of which is below the point of legal tolerance, which is fixed at one-half of 1 per cent. If a coin is found to be lighter than this it is stamped with a large L, to indicate its lightness, and is returned to the bank or the individual who last handled it. The only redress of the owner is to have the coins sent to Washington to be [illegible]. The owner must stand the loss in weight, which is often considerable. In cases where the coin has been "sweated" an investigation may follow, with criminal prosecution.

One of the most insidious methods of "sweating" and perhaps the most difficult of all to detect is the electroplating method. The gold coins are placed in a chemical bath, and part of the gold is detached by electricity and deposited on some other object. In this way the gold is removed with perfect evenness from all parts of the coin. The letters and general design or the milling may be slightly dulled in the process, but only as it might be from general wear and tear. The lightness of the coin will be detected by the scales at the treasury, but in the meantime such a coin may pass from hand to hand for a long time without arousing suspicion. It is obviously exceedingly difficult to trace the offender.

Another baffling method is to split the coin and remove the gold from the inner surface. The hole is then filled up with some baser metal, so that the weight will be the same, and the two sides are then welded together. It is possible to take a dollar's worth of gold or more in this way from a twenty dollar gold piece. If the work be skilfully done it is impossible to detect such a coin by its weight, and the only clew will be in some flaw in the milling. Naturally it takes a trained, experienced eye to pick out such a coin. Meanwhile the gold piece has probably circulated for days or even months, and it is exceedingly difficult to trace the offender.

One of the commonest methods of "sweating" is to shake up a number of gold coins in a chamois bag and preserve the dust and microscopical particles which have been loosened. The bag is first moistened, so that the gold will adhere to it, and is afterward burned and the gold assayed. The bruises or dents on the coins will appear to have been made in the ordinary handling. The profit from this treatment is small, but many people seem to find profit in it. The question arises if the ingenuity and labor thus expended would not bring a larger return if devoted to some legitimate work.

The men who handle the gold become marvelously expert in detecting the "sweated" coins. In handling millions of dollars' worth of gold a defective coin will rarely get past them. The coins are poured out in trays before them and turned over and the light coins picked out. A slight [illegible] in the milling, a faulty appearance of the lettering or a suspicious nick on the surface will be quickly identified. As a [illegible] test the coins, which will weigh a certain [illegible], are returned [illegible], and if the slightest discrepancy can be found every coin is examined separately until the faulty one has been discovered.—New York Times.

Iniquities Her Delight.

She was walking around the corridors of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts with her pince nez held at elbow length, evidently admiring some of the works. Although the gown that she wore was very expensive, it did not show good taste, and a single glance would convince one that she was of the class known as the "newly rich."

An acquaintance accosted her with the remark, "I didn't know that you were such an admirer of antiques, Mrs. ——"

"Oh, yes, indeed," she replied; "I just delight in iniquities."—Philadelphia Times.

A Tale of "Tipping."

To tip or not to tip the person who has done his or her duty is a question recalling an incident set down in Walpole's reminiscences of how a king once unwillingly encouraged the custom. "This is a strange country," commented George I. "The first morning after my arrival at St. James I looked out of the window and saw a park with walks, canal, etc., which they told me were mine. The next day Lord Chetwynd, the ranger of my park, sent me a brace of carp out of my canal, and I was told that I must give 5 guineas to Lord Chetwynd's servant for bringing me my own carp out of my own canal in my own park!"

A Puzzle.

"That is a puzzle," said a novelist of a dance in New York. "Yes, that is as much a puzzle as Mrs. Malaprop's definition of naivete.

"Mrs. Malaprop and a gentleman were discussing a beautiful young lady guest. The gentleman said:

"'What I regard as the most conspicuous thing about her is her naivete.'

"'Yes,' said Mrs. Malaprop; 'I wonder what made her get such a tight one.'"—Washington Star.

"Why, I started ter," replied the other, "but a [illegible] say [illegible] not [illegible]. He sez: 'Turn from yer present path. Ye're goin' ter de dogs.'"—Philadelphia Times.

Couldn't Breathe Through His Nose Stuffed With Catarrh

Catarrhozone Brought the Sea Breeze of Relief and is Cured Quickly.

The extraordinary efficacy of Catarrhozone is without a parallel. A morning cold is cured in ten minutes, a harsh cough is cured in an hour, the most offensive catarrh is thoroughly drawn from the system. In case of asthma and bronchitis the relief and certain cure that comes from the healing balsamic extracts in Catarrhozone is simply wonderful.

"For more than twenty years I suffered with a cough, bronchitis, asthma, and nasal catarrh, writes J. T. Fenwick, of Stanton P.O. "Every attack I had seemed to grow worse and I could hardly breathe on account of an accumulation of phlegm in the nose and throat. One day I tried Catarrhozone and in ten minutes was wonderfully relieved. I could breathe freely and naturally through the nose, and blood spitting was stopped—the phlegm was cleared away and my regular breathing restored. No remedy can do more than Catarrhozone."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00, smaller sizes 25c and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

Old Sporting Episode.

Mr. Tom Rutherford was in a reminiscent mood yesterday. In conversation with The Times, he said he is to-day the only one alive of seven Peterborough men who attended the Woodbine, Toronto, races in 1886, when Seagram's horse Bonefield won the Queen's Plate. The other six were: two tailors, a grocer, two hardware dealers and an employe of the Ontario Government. In this race, Stonemason and Arlington were the favorites. One of the hardware men, in a pool of $1 each, drew Bonefield. Mr. Rutherford drew Stonemason, a favorite. The hardware man gave Mr. Rutherford $3.50 for his Stonemason ticket to win the pool, giving him his Bonefield ticket. Mr. Rutherford said this was the only pool he won in his life, and he was paid for that.

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 11.—"Uncle Lew" Strickland, a negro, claims to be Mississippi's oldest inhabitant, being now in his 114th year, and still strong enough to hoe his little cotton patch and raise enough foodstuffs to hold body and soul together.

"Uncle Lew" lives in Rankin county, and he [illegible] into the county seat a few days ago to sell a bale of cotton he had grown on his little farm. Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the Parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters, and [illegible] the professor has in his possession, are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4850, 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

TRENT CONSERVATION ASSN HOLDS IMPORTANT MEETING

Mr. Burnham M.P. and Speakers From Out of Town Present Their Views

Last night there was a good attendance at the meeting held in the Bank of Montreal Chambers of the Trent Valley Conservation Association. Mr. W. H. Dunham introduced the subject of the meeting. The meeting was to make the organization permanent. The object is a proper conservation of the water in this district in the back lakes. The Government should have a memorial sent them on the subject. The first speaker was Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P.

Mr. Burnham's Speech.

Mr. J. H. Burnham said that with the increasing demand for power along the Trent Canal there sprang up increasing requests to the authorities that the waters comprised in the watershed should be controlled with a view to a more equable and less wasteful flow. When, however, requests were made it was found that the authorities did not know who had jurisdiction, and over what, how much obligation they were under to pay attention to power or anything other than navigation. It is quite plain that the Trent Valley Canal which is being pushed to a rapid completion would be of little use to the Trent district if the surplus water is not to be handled so as to be of value for power purposes. I made a request to Mr. Peck, M.P.P. that he should dig up at Toronto what material he could bearing upon the question. I did the same at Ottawa, and we have found that a conference was held between the Dominion and the Ontario Governments with respect to the control of certain dams. No reference was then made to power, however; I may say that on the 22nd of July, 1905, as a result of that conference, an order-in-council was passed by the Provincial Government setting out the list of dams attached to the order-in-council which should be handed over to the Dominion Government. This comprised all the main dams on the main lakes of the Trent watershed between the Kirkfield lock, where the water runs the other way, and Rice Lake. This order-in-council was confirmed in February, 1906 at which date the transfer took effect. The question of providing power comes up before you practically for the first time. There has of course been a great deal of talk about it, but we have never realized that no power policy has ever been adopted in this district. It is gradually being borne in upon the government authorities that some power policy must be adopted or else the industrial opportunities in the Trent district referred to will be lost. This meeting to-night is, I understand, for the purpose of realizing these facts and of pressing them home. In fact I think the meeting was called at my request, as I have been endeavoring to impress upon your Association the necessity of prompt action, and here I may say that it would appear as if it were also possible to make a request of the Ontario Government for power, in which event the Ontario Government might take the matter up with the Dominion Government and construct a power policy. Some such undertaking must be got under way, otherwise the various power propositions, such, for example, as that at Peterborough at the present time, cannot be carried out. It would appear as if it were possible to advance the whole Trent question another stage from that described in the order-in-council of July, 1905. We have at least arrived at this conclusion. We know who the authorities are and what jurisdiction they have. This is a very distinct gain. We also know what the waters in question are like and how they can be conserved to a greater extent than at present, for during the last summer we have been practically all through those waters. The difficulty that arises at present is that when increased conservation increased conservation is asked for, the authorities say "We have conservation enough for navigation." If there was a power policy then immediate steps would be taken to conserve the water to that end also, and the question which has produced hitherto so much confusion and so much loss would be solved. Therefore I would urge upon you that you interview both the Ontario and the Dominion Governments to the desired end. We cannot allow things to go on as they have in the past. They lay in a state of confusion and not only confusion but we might also say utter oblivion for a long time. The day for that sort of thing is gone by. These things must be taken hold of and put to their proper use. It is absurd that our vast power opportunities should be allowed to go to waste as they are at present doing. There can be no doubt that the two Governments should come to an understanding very readily in this matter, and it was a matter of surprise to me that records which we have found in the departments seem to have been wholly neglected or forgotten. I may say that in pressing home these matters before the Ottawa Government I found that they interpreted things one way, and that the Ontario Government apparently interpreted them another. Since however, the order-in-council was

Beautiful Words of Yankee Paper

The following lovely reference to a woman appears in the Pittsburgh Observer (R. C.):

"The Pittsburg Observer, a Woman Catholic paper, was asked how to deal with a woman who 'was brought up in the Catholic faith and trained in the parochial school, but who married a Protestant, left the Church, joined a Protestant Church, and is raising her family Protestants.' After declaring that such a woman is 'leading a most sinful life,' the Observer said:

'The harlot or drunken woman is a model of virtue compared to her, yet it would be very humiliating to associate with these in order to win them back to God. So it is a humiliation for a truly Catholic woman to associate with the other.'"

It will not take much of this new kind of religious enthusiasm to provoke a riot in the dominions of our lively neighbor.

TO THE CUSTOMERS OF THE OTONABEE POWER CO LIMITED

Dear Sir,—We regret to have to inform you that the City Council have not only refused to submit to the ratepayers a by-law for the extension of our franchise, but have ordered us to remove our poles and wires from the streets of Peterborough on January the 1st, 1914. This order of the Council will make it impossible for us to serve you with electricity after that date, and while deeply appreciative of past patronage, we exceedingly regret having to sever business relations with you, but we are bound to bow to the superior authority vested in the Council.

Yours truly,
W. F. FERGUSON, Pres.

One man was killed and three others seriously injured, including the engineer of the passenger train.

NOT OUTS DANCE WAS ONE GREAT SUCCESS

Last night the big Conservatory of Music hall, beautifully decorated, was a scene of merriment. The occasion was the "Not Outs" annual dance. The youth and beauty of Peterborough was well represented. The floor was in splendid condition and the Misses Gladman who furni and the Misses Gladman who furnished the music gave great satisfaction. At midnight a recherche supper was served. The chaperons were Mesdames E. B. Clegg, S. T. Medd, A. W. McPherson, E. V. Frederick and Mrs. R. Gliddon.

RATEPAYERS SHOULD GO SLOW RE DALHOUSIE STREET BRIDGE

THE TIMES BELIEVES A NEW BRIDGE ON HUNTER ST. MUST BE PROVIDED.

In Order to Accommodate the Increased Traffic and Afford Crossing for Street Cars.

In the Times of yesterday appeared a letter from Mr. C. Hamilton in which the writer very strongly opposes the contemplated appropriation of either $110,000 or $98,000 for the proposed Dalhousie street bridge. There would seem to much forceful argument and sound logic in the writer's contention. The ratepayers of this city are now staggering along under an almost insupportable burden of taxation. As claimed by the writer of that letter it is an open secret that the Hunter Street bridge will soon have to be replaced by a heavier and more modern structure. The general feeling is that such a bridge would be of an elevated or raised description, to lessen the present steep grade, provide accommodation for street rails and to permit the passage of steamers beneath. Such a bridge would cost from $230,000 to $250,000. Why spend now either $98,000 or $110,000 for a bridge at Dalhousie street which would only accommodate a comparatively trifling number of our citizens?

There are points that should be carefully considered by our citizens before committing Peterborough to a practically needless addition to her taxes.

NAVY QUESTION IS CERTAIN TO COME BEFORE HOUSE

Ottawa, Dec. 12.—There is a great deal of speculation at the Capital as to what will be done in regard to the navy question this coming session. It is well known that since the return of Premier Borden the Cabinet has had the question under serious consideration, but no intimation as to the plans of the Government have been given. Last session the policy of the Ministry was kept a close secret and absolutely nothing leaked out until the Premier made his famous announcement in the House. It is is likely that the same policy will be this year and nothing will be made public until the Premier makes an announcement in the House.

It is possible that the Naval Bill in the same form of a year ago may be re-introduced.

However there is a strong feeling that it is useless to re-introduce the measure in view of the hostile Liberal majority in the Upper House.

Many claim it would only mean a repetition of the turbulent and disorderly scenes of last session and would only emphasize before the world the humiliating position in which Canada has been placed through the actions of the Liberals.

The navy question in some form will be before Parliament this session. This can be taken for granted. In the meantime the permanent policy is being worked out and will be ready to submit to the people at the next election as promised by Premier Borden.

INCINERATOR WILL BURN EVERYTHING BUT ASHES

ASHES ARE DESIRABLE FOR FILLING IN PURPOSES.

The Public are Asked to Keep Ashes Clean From Other Refuse. Wrap All Other Undesirable Material up in Paper for Consumption in Bulk.

The City's Property Committee met last night, Chairman Ald. Geo. Duncan presiding. There were also in attendance, Mayor Bradburn, Aldermen Duffus, Green and Langford, Jr.

It appears that under the new Act, next year the assessment for garbage, ashes, etc., will be charged against the values of properties, and not in accordance with amount of refuse, etc., collected from individual houses according to business operations.

Now that the incinerator is working, the garbage collectors suffer a loss and are asking recompense therefor. That is to say, under the old conditions, animal and vegetable garbage was kept separate from miscellaneous refuse, and the animal and vegetable matter was a live asset to the garbage collectors, who sold same for pig swill. Under our recently acquired modern conditions, however, the people are warranted in wrapping up their garbage and refuse, (ashes excepted) in paper, which will be taken to the incinerator in bulk and consumed. This means a loss of revenue to the garbage collectors in the shape of salable pig feed, which is now to be disposed of in the incinerator. Hence the collectors asked to be reimbursed to the extent of $100 for their loss in revenue from now until June 1st, next year, when their contract expires. This request was granted.

From now onwards, all the citizens have to do is to keep their ashes separate: everything else the insatiable jaws of the new incinerator will accept with pleasure. The Council particularly asks citizens to keep their ashes clear of all other refuse; the clear ashes will be used for filling in purposes, all other undesirable material the incinerator will take care of.

MR JOSEPH W WORTH A CANDIDATE FOR CITY COUNCIL

Mr. Jos. W. Worth is in the field for Ward 3 of the City Council. A Yorkshire man by birth and training, Mr. Worth will bring into the fight that natural strength and straightforwardness which distinguishes the men of his country wherever they go. He has travelled somewhat widely for a comparatively young man, having visited most of the capitals of Northern Europe. His outlook is broad, and he is willing to learn. In his position as partner in the Bonner-Worth Worsted Co., Mr. Worth takes a considerable share in the industrial life of our city and is closely in contact every day with the people whom he seeks to represent. Economy with efficiency would be his aim in the City Council. He is a member of All Saints' church.

W.F.M.S. OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH HOLD ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING

The annual meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Paul's church was held yesterday afternoon in the lecture room of the church. The president, Miss Dickson, occupied the chair. There were about 150 ladies present, including representatives from the various other churches.

The annual report of the Society presented by the Secretary, Mrs. Harstone, showed that the Society was in a flourishing financial position there being a balance of $910.00 on hand.

Reports were also received from the Fraser Mission Band and Faithful Workers Mission Band.

The speaker of the afternoon was Mrs. (Dr.) McClure, of Honan, China, who depicted very vividly her life in China where she has worked for the past 23 years. In beginning her address Mrs. McClure said that she was more than pleased to be in Peterborough, for not far from her home in China was a fine grey stone building, the Mrs. Mary Marwell High School, erected by Mrs. Mary Marwell of this city. Mrs. McClure said that this building had not only proved beneficial to those living in that town, but had been the means of proving to the Government the moral value of mission schools, several of which are being erected at the Government's expense.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. [illegible]
President—Miss Dickson.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Payne.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Robt. Hall.
Secretary—Mrs. Harstone.
Treasurer—Mrs. McKee.
Organist—Mrs. Logan.
Executive—The Mrs. Turner, Allan, Graham, Mowat, Keyes, Munro, Mason, Shook, Cowan, Erskine, Miss Kingan.

During the afternoon refreshments were served and the meeting closed with the benediction.

MODERN MONEY-RAISING METHODS

At the regular meeting of the Ministerial Association, held in the Y.M.C.A. building, the following resolution was carried:

1. That this Association hereby expresses its sense of the great encouragement which has come to its members through the "Every Member Canvass" and its warm appreciation of the very general and generous support promised by the members of our Churches.

2. That the members of our Association consider this a favorable opportunity to express their conviction that Bazaars, Public Entertainments and other appeals to the community should be discouraged as means for raising funds for either Church support or Church extension.

This it is hoped will lessen what seems to have become a burden, especially to the merchants of our city.

3. Jealous of the honor and usefulness of the whole church in her relation to the the community, we would strongly deprecate any approach to the commercializing of religion or anything else which may tend to obscure the Divine character and lofty Mission of the Church.

MEXICO IS ONCE MORE THE SCENE OF FIERCE AND BLOODY BATTLE

Rebels Capture Railway Station and Causeway Entering the Town Through Swamp

Mexico City, Dec. 12.—More than 1,000 men are said to have been killed and wounded in the Tampico fight. The fall of Tampico into rebel hands will give revolutionists a large income from oil taxes.

Vera Cruz, Mexico, Dec. 12.—With 700 American and European resident refugees in consulates excitedly awaited its issue, and the battleships of four nations watching in the offing desperate fighting for the possession of Tampico between Federals and rebels continued here to-day. Wireless despatches received here say the battle is bloody. The American, English, German and French warships are ready to land marines to protect foreigners or to take them off the instant their lives seem to be in peril.

The battle, which was suspended by darkness last night, after an all day fight, was resumed at 2 o'clock this morning when two Mexican gunboats in the river which forms Tampico's port were menaced by rebels from the side of the river opposite the city. Hot firing continued here throughout the morning, the rebels, concealed in the brush, sniping constantly at the Federals on the gunboats, and the latter replying with both small arms and quick-firing guns wherever a knot of the attackers showed.

Fierce Fighting.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Probably as fierce fighting as modern Mexico has witnessed is in progress to-day in and about the city of Tampico, according to official wireless despatches here to-day.

ALD DUNCAN NOT A CANDIDATE FOR MAYOR

Alderman George Duncan desires The Times to announce that he is not a candidate for the Mayoralty this year. While appreciating the repeated requests from a large section of the community that he stand for election, he sincerely regrets that business calls prohibits his entering the field this year. However, Ald. Duncan will be found at his old desk in the Council Chamber next year, representing South City, as his term of office as Alderman does not expire until the end of nineteen hundred and fourteen.

NOTICE TO ORANGEMEN

BRANCH PROTESTANT FEDERATION FORMED AT HALL'S BRIDGE

A largely attended meeting was held in the True Blue Hall, Buckhorn, on Thursday evening, when a branch of the Protestant Benevolent Federation was organized. There were about seventy-five persons present, and the meeting was most enthusiastic throughout. Stirring addresses were delivered by prominent speakers from Peterborough as well as encouraging remarks from a number of prominent local people. The new organization are off to a good start and may be depended on to carry out the policy of the Association "Equal rights—no special privileges."

UNIONISTS ASK FOR MONEY TO HELP ULSLER IN HER BIG FIGHT

Plenty of Men but Lack of Funds to Provide the Equipment

London, Dec. 12.—Mystification has been created by the solemn announcement by the Times to-day that although political leaders on both sides continue to abuse and defy each other from the public platforms, friendly interchanges for settlement are already in progress.

Leaders Have Not Met.

The fact is that Mr. Asquith and Mr. Bonar Law have not themselves met, but two front bench men on each side have, over the dinner table continued a sort of reconnaissance of the situation, and each reported the result to his leader.

Nothing, however has transpired to suggest the probable line the agreement will take, and Ulster's sympathizers in England are continuing their campaign.

The Unionist Appeal.

To-day the Unionist peers, Lords Bedford and Castlereagh, and six Unionist members, including Mr. F. E. Smith, issued a public appeal on behalf of Ulster's armed resistance. It says:

"We have the men; we want the money to equip them. We shall be glad to receive money subscriptions from all who sympathize with Ulster in her preparation to vindicate her own right to be consulted before the House Rule Bill is passed into law."

TO GET RID WRINKLES AND BAD COMPLEXIONS

(From Beauty's Mirror)

It is more important now than during the period of profuse perspiration to keep the pores clean. All cosmetics clog the pores. In winter interferes greatly with elimination of waste material, injuring instead of aiding the complexion. Ordinary mercolized wax serves all the purposes of creams, powders and rouges, giving far better results. It actually peels off an offensive skin, at the same time unclogging the pores. Minute particles of scarf skin come off day by day, causing not the least pain or discomfort. Gradually the healthy, younger skin beneath peeps out, and in less than a fortnight you have a lovelier complexion than you ever dreamed of acquiring. Mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is spread on nightly like cold cream and washed off mornings. One ounce usually suffices.

For removing wrinkles, without coating the pores with pasty stuff, here's a [illegible] 1 oz. powdered [illegible] dissolved in ½ pint witch-hazel. Bathe the face in this daily for a while; every line will vanish completely. [illegible] the first application [illegible] results.

Reading the Postcards.

"Why is there such a hot fight over the appointment of postmaster in this little town?" asked the stranger. "The office doesn't pay anything much, does it?"

"That ain't it, mister," replied the native. "You see most of us are particular as to who reads our post cards."

Two Kisses

By C. ARNOLD COLE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

Formerly railroad cars passing through tunnels were not lighted as they are now. A number of episodes have been recorded of affectionate action in these dark holes in the ground, and kisses have been surreptitiously taken. Leonard Starkweather, a young man of some twenty-one years and proportionately inexperienced, took one of these kisses, and it led to no end of worry on his part. He finally paid the penalty.

He was traveling with Miss Gwendolin Stewart, a young lady two years his junior. Miss Stewart had one of those complexions which can only be compared to a ripe peach of a light shade, a pale rose on ivory. Her lips were of that same shade of pink and quite tempting enough to cause any man to wreck himself to touch them with his own. Starkweather had been introduced to her by a mutual friend before the train started, and she had been put under his care. This rendered his act all the more dishonorable.

The better to cover his tracks the kiss was stolen with malice aforethought. He told the young lady just before the train entered the long tunnel, the location of which he well knew, that he was going into the smoking car for a whiff at a cigar. Instead of doing so he went into the next car back, where he remained till the train shot under the hill. The young lady sat on the right of the car, the eighth seat from the rear. This he had carefully noted. Putting his hand on the back of every seat till he reached the eighth, he felt carefully till he had noted Miss Stewart's position, then quietly bent down and took the kiss.

A muffled cry was heard above the rattle of the train, but when the car shot out into the light there was no evidence of anything wrong. Starkweather had made good his escape, and Miss Stewart was apparently endeavoring to regain her equanimity by fumbling with her handkerchief, which she was examining as though she had bought it at a bargain counter and doubted if she had not been sold as well as the linen.

Half an hour passed—quite enough to enable her to quiet down after the episode—when Mr. Starkweather returned to his seat beside her, bringing with him the odor of tobacco smoke. He was a trifle nervous, but felt relieved to find Miss Stewart quite composed. He expected that she would tell him of the outrage that had been inflicted upon her and ask him to take measures to discover the perpetrator. He was surprised that she didn't mention the matter and considered her refraining from doing so due to maidenly modesty.

But Miss Stewart's treatment of her escort was somewhat different from what it had been. An innocent freedom was replaced by a slight reserve. The ingenuousness, the confidence—call it what you will—of girlhood seemed to have departed from her. Occasionally Starkweather caught her looking up at him sidewise with an expression that he could not fathom. He began to be troubled lest she had known or at least divined that he was the man who had insulted her. But how could she have got any inkling of this? When he kissed her not a ray of light had penetrated the car. He had felt no touch. His face was smoothly shaven, so that no pointer could have been obtained from the character of a beard. No; it was simply impossible that she should have any evidence of having been kissed by him. This being the case, why should she have withdrawn that outspoken confidence with which she had treated him? And yet it was not a turning against him; it was rather like that condition which comes between friends of different sexes when the man lets go friendship to grasp at love.

Starkweather looked upon a young girl as something too holy to be profaned. This is a characteristic of youth, and another is a great sensitiveness to woman's treatment. His theft was to him like that of the Spartan boy who stole the wolf—not admitted so long as not found out. The boy had the wolf under his coat and let it gnaw the flesh away rather than that it should be discovered. Starkweather began to believe that Miss Stewart knew he had kissed her. Perhaps if he had been sure of this it would have been more tolerable than the uncertainty under which he suffered. Horrible situation! An innocent girl had been put under his care, and he had kissed her in a tunnel. Should she really know that he had so betrayed a trust possibly before they parted she might resent the outrage as it deserved. The thought was maddening.

They arrived at their destination after dark. Starkweather saw the young lady to her home, leaving her at her door. In the light of a street lamp he stood, half expecting that she would give evidence of her wrath. Instead she turned up to him those lips that had tempted him. What did it mean? He didn't stop to ask. He kissed them.

"Did you know I kissed you in the tunnel?" he asked.

In reply she gave him his handkerchief with his initials on it, which she had pulled out of his pocket when the kiss was taken.

"Are we engaged?" she asked.

"Of course."

HEAT IN LABRADOR.

Tropical Weather Hit Dr. Grenfell's Helper Pretty Hard.

Dr. W. T. Grenfell, the famous Labrador missionary, and Dr. Greaves, the young Scotch physician who is his chief lieutenant, spent several weeks in St. John's, Newfoundland, in June, while their mission yacht, the Strathcona, was in dry dock. The weather in St. John's was unusually cool for June, even in that wind-swept city, but Dr. Greaves made no complaint until one afternoon, when the sun barely tempered the chilly breeze with a hint of coming summer, he informed his fellow guests at the hotel that it was time he was off to "the Labrador," as that rocky and forbidding land is called by those who know it. "I can stand cold all right," he said, "but this weather takes it out of me. I haven't walked two hundred yards, but I am all out in a perspiration. I'm afraid I am getting as bad as my assistant in the hospital at Battle Harbor. One day, when he was working with his coat off, the temperature went up as high as fifty degrees in the hospital. Peeling off his vest, he turned to me and said, plaintively: 'Doctor, no man should be asked to work in weather like this.'"

Sorrow.

Sorrow is not an incident occurring now and then. It is the woof which is woven into the warp of life, and he who has not discerned the divine sacredness of sorrow and the profound meaning which is concealed in pain has yet to learn what life is.—F. W. Robertson.

TRUNKS OF ELEPHANTS.

They Serve Many Purposes and Take the Place of Hands.

Elephants are interesting because they have such varied feelings, such a wide range of intelligent appreciation. Doubtless this is in part due to the possession in the trunk of an organ the development of which has itself permitted development of brain power. Very great brain power could not have been developed as an accompaniment merely of hoofs; hands, however imperfect, were necessary or something else that would serve as a partial substitute for hands.

By watching a herd of elephants any one can speedily see the large range of uses to which the trunk is put and the large range of needs and emotions which it develops and satisfies. During courtship the bull and cow caress one another with their trunks. Elephants are very curious, and the trunks are used to test every object which arouses their curiosity. The cow is constantly fondling and guiding the calf with her trunk. The trunk is used to gather every species of food and to draw water. It is used to spurt dust or water over the body. It is used to test rotten and dangerous ground. It is in constant use to try the wind so as to guard against the approach of any foe.

As one watches the great beasts the trunks continually appear in the air above them, uncurling, twisting, feeling each breath of air. Now and then a great ear is flapped. Now and then the weight of the body is slightly shifted from one colossal leg to the other. The huge beasts are rarely entirely motionless for any length of time. Nor are they long silent, for aside from subdued squeaks or growls and occasional shrill calls there are queer internal rumblings. Their eyes are very bad. Like the rhino, they can only see as a very nearsighted man sees. At a distance of eighty yards or so, when in my dull colored hunting clothes, I could walk slowly toward them or shift my position without fear of discovery.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's Magazine.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,648 in-patients, 26,597 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 70 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 16,200 were from Toronto, and 5,818 from other parts of the Province; 10,180 of the total in-patients were cured, and 1,367 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, 278 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 2 knock-knees, 19 bow-legs, 62 club feet, 8 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 5 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and outpatients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-feet splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Our Point of View

If the cost of living does not come down soon somebody will be tempted to kill the dove of peace and eat it in a stew.

• ● •

The month of November was a hard one for President Wilson. He had a currency bill and a wedding bill on his hands at the same time.

• ● •

Albania is to have a queen who weighs 236 pounds. That low, hollow groan you hear comes from the immediate vicinity of the throne chair.

• ● •

The best proof that the color line was not drawn at the White House wedding is found in the fact that one of the bridesmaids was White and the other Brown.

Miss Pankhurst, who took $20,000 in U. S. currency back to England with her, the proceeds of her American tour, is more proof that Uncle Sam's realm is the land of the free and the home of the sucker.

• ● •

In Europe they know how to use the forces of nature to good purpose. For instance, in England there is a windmill that lights a church and parsonage and pumps the organ. It may also operate the preacher for what we know to the contrary.

• ● •

A local minister told a boy that he must be born again, but the urchin objected on the ground that something might slip and he would be born a girl.

• ● •

It is said that in Burmah people live to be one hundred years old. That may be all right over there, but just think how persons would suffer if they lived that long in Lindsay.

THE COST OF LIVING

Sir Wilfrid Laurier does not be relegated to opposition to discover that the cost of living was increasing. From 1890 to 1897 the cost of living decreased from 16 to 97 per cent. From 1897 to 1911, under Sir Wilfrid's "Free Trade" the cost increased on twenty-three different products from 80 to 167 per cent. Even with this enormous increase Sir Wilfrid and his colleagues, revelling in the cost of high living did not discover the increased cost of living to the artisan. Loss of office is the only effective "eye-opener" to administer to the Laurierites.

Any Headache Cured, Tired Systems Re-Toned

When You're Dull, Tired, Restless Day and Night Something is Wrong in the Stomach

A Prominent Publishing Man Says the Quickest Cure is Dr. Hamilton's Pills

Headaches never come to those who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and this fact is vouched for by the Assistant Manager of the Poultry Success Magazine, of Springfield, O., Mr. J. H. Callander, who writes: "No better medicine than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. We use them regularly and know of marvelous cures that resisted everything else. They cleanse the whole system, act as tonic on the blood, enliven digestion, help the stomach, and make you feel strong and well. For headaches, indigestion and stomach disorders I am confident that the one prescription is Dr. Hamilton's Pills."

Being composed of natural vegetable remedies, Dr. Hamilton's Pills possess great power, yet they are harmless. They aid all organs connected with the stomach, liver, and bowels. In consequence, food is properly digested, the blood is pure and nourishing, the body is kept strong and resists disease. all druggists and storekeepers sell Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, 5 for $1.00, or by mail from the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE WAGES OF KNOWLEDGE.

We expect those who take it upon themselves to instruct the young in our schools to be equipped with a reasonable fund of knowledge. It is necessary now that all pedagogues must spend much time in acquiring training, and they must attain a certain standard before being allowed to practice their profession.

One would suppose that the important work in teachers' hands and the amount of preparation necessary for it would guarantee the teacher a reasonable reward for his, or her, services. On the floor of the Quebec Legislature a few days ago it was stated that the salaries of women school teachers in that province now average $163 a year. Imagine a woman being called upon to support herself in decency, let alone in comfort, on that salary. And as some of the teachers get more than the average, others get much less.

In Ontario conditions are better. The minimum salary is probably in the neighborhood of fifty dollars a month, which is little enough if we hope to secure competent instructors.

TRENT CONSERVATION ASSOCIATION MEETING

that of the Ontario Government. I applied to the Ontario Government in November for an interpretation thereof. Mr. Hearst told me that he had handed my enquiry to the Public Works Department at Toronto, and in due time I received the Ontario Government's ruling so that the only question, I believe, now before you is that of getting established and on its feet some policy or method of dealing with the power opportunities along the Trent, and I may suggest that it would be advisable to change the word "Otonabee" to that of "Trent," since the former serves no purpose but that of confusion. We might also state that after a great deal of trouble we have succeeded in getting the Department at Toronto to take further notice of the forest areas under their jurisdiction in the Trent water-shed, and following upon the very complete report made by Dean Fernow at my request to the Dominion Conservation Commission a report has been made by that Commission to the Dominion Government upon the said subject so that the whole question of conservation and use has now arrived at what we might say a conjunction which is a fitting time for us to take hold of and follow it out.

The third and last division of this subject—that of log flotation, is exercising the minds of the lumbermen. They are trying to bet their ancient rights and privileges on a settled and recognized basis also. When these three things are accomplished viz:—navigation, power and log flotation the whole Trent question will be solved.

Mr. Denham called on Mr. Boyd, of Bobcaygeon. This gentleman said he was in sympathy with the movement, but out of touch with conditions.

Warden Bottum, of Bobcaygeon, said at his village they generally had too much water. He approved the movement for conserving the water.

Mr. J. J. Edwards, of Lindsay, said he thought the Association would do good work.

Mayor Bradburn, in a short, but well put speech, said he came more to listen than to speak. In Peterborough we want water and we want it 12 months in the year. In August, in this city the water is too low. His trip to the north country showed him the wonderful reservoirs there. He recommended a deputation being sent to Ottawa.

Mr. Denham, chairman, said he was vitally interested in the power question. He, he admitted is more after power than after navigation. The Government says it can conserve water for navigation, but not for individual power users. All he asks is that the Government recognize the various industries as much as navigation or logging business. Without power the local plants must close down and employes to be thrown out of employment. Last year the Quaker Oats plant has only been able to run 10 or 12 hours daily instead of 24 hours. It is not Mr. McClellan's fault, but the fault of those behind him. The manufacturers want the Government to take charge of the water in the back lakes. The dams out North should have been built higher to hold back the water. By getting more horsepower the companies represented would put up bigger mills and employ more men. He thought a committee should be appointed to look after the power question. During last spring enough water went over the Quaker Oats dam to run the whole mill for a year. There was a tremendous loss.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, of the C.G.E. Co., wanted the Government to properly conserve the water. He thought a memorial should be sent to the Government showing the value of the factories and the number of men affected by the water question. The Government will find a way to conserve the water.

Mr. J. C. Sheck agreed with the remarks of the previous speakers. We must show the Government that conservation of water is of general interest.

Mr. Dickson Davidson said a deep debt of gratitude was due to Mr. Burnham for the interest he has taken in the water conservation question. He advocated sending a deputation to Ottawa.

Mr. Bailey of the Lakefield Cement Co., gave a brief address as did Mr. Fitzgerald, reeve of Lakefield.

Mr. J. H. McWilliams presented a report prepared for Mr. Fernow, of Toronto, that he had prepared, covering all the northern lakes and their tributaries. He advocated re-forestration.

Mr. [illegible] Dixon gave an interesting account of conditions in the back country.

Mr. Jas. Kendry, ex-M.P., said the Government is taking away the water from the power owners between here and Lakefield. The Government should maintain an even flow of water. He agreed with Mr. Denham that higher dams should be built.

Mr. Grant, of the T.V.C., said his position prevented him giving an opinion. Mr. McClellan said practically the same thing. He thought re-forestration was an important matter.

Mr. Moore, of the Peterborough Light and Power Co., said the power users are only a medium as much as the turbines the waters turn. It is the employees and the public who suffer from lack of water. He advocated water conservation and reforestration. The whole argument to present to the Government is to show what is running to waste.

Mr. Denham said his company was willing to pay the Government for increased horsepower.

Mr. W. Langford asked whether there was any expert advice regarding conservation of the North country water.

Here Mr. Burnham took the chair. The following officers were elected:

GILLESPIE
FOR MAYOR

To the Electors of the City of Peterboro

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

At the urgent solicitation of many of my business and personal friends, I have consented to become a candidate for the position of Mayor of your City, and respectfully solicit your votes and influence.

As in the past, I shall not make any rash promises, to gain the vote of any elector, but, if elected, my attitude on every question will be to stand firm for the best interests of our Progressive City.

Having been interested in Peterborough all my life, and one of your Aldermen for five years, I may fairly claim to be in close touch with every section and every interest of the municipality, and familiar with its needs and ambitions.

I believe that in all respects the will of the people should prevail; that a vigorous but economical administration is the best administration, and that if your Chief Magistrate is able to devote a fair proportion of his time to his civic duties, it will not be to your disadvantage if he brings with him the experience and energy he displays in the conduct of a large and successful business of his own.

If my course in the Council during the past five years has in the main met with your approval I shall esteem it an honour to have your further approval and support in the coming contest.

Yours respectfully,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

NAMING A YACHT

The naming of a book is no holiday task, and authors particularly proud of a title are tolerably sure to discover that it has been already used. But the naming of a yacht is almost a greater perplexity. Plagiarism may in this case result in practical confusion carrying the most awkward consequences, and not all titles to which, in search of variety, recourse has already been had are satisfactory from all points of view. Not long ago, for instance, a very grave British cabinet minister, perhaps wishing for once to be sprightly, called his yacht Flirt. He had not consulted his family, who were, however, quite sure, he thought, to delight in his outburst of gayety. However, his daughters naturally remarked how very disagreeable it would be to go ashore with that label around their hats.

LOVELY LUCERNE

The Tourist Center of the "Playground of Europe."

Lucerne, situated in the heart of Switzerland, stands, as it were, enshrined amid the grandest and most picturesque features of Alpine scenery and is, of course, the tourist center par excellence of the "Playground of Europe," three main lines of railway converging on the famous town beside the lake. Nor could nature, indeed, have well done more for "Lovely Lucerne," as all the world acclaims it (declares a writer in London Sketch). On one side stands the Rigi, on the other Pilatus (7,000 feet high), with between them the fair, glimmering expanse of the Lake of the Four Cantons and beyond it again a widespread panorama of the glaciers and snow peaked ranges of the Alps.

From the Rigi (6,000 feet), easily climbed, by aid of its famous "mountain train," the view takes in the Bernina, Gothard, Unterwalden and Bernese Alps, stretching far and wide, from the Santis in the east to the Blumlisalp in the west, and to northward the Jura mountains, the Black forest and the Vosges barrier between Frank and Teuton. From the Rigi some fourteen lakes are visible on a clear day, among them Sempach, by the shores of which was fought the famous battle where the Swiss won their freedom.

HOME HEATH CLUB,

Written by
DR. DAVID H. REEDER,
Chicago, Ill.

GRADE CROSSINGS:—More than a score of years ago I began teaching you through the Home Health Club "how to get well, how to keep well and how to keep young." From your letters I know somewhat of the vast amount of suffering that has been overcome and many of the helpless put into the helpful class.

Many neighborhoods, villages, towns and even cities have felt the influence of the Home Health Club for good and have been made cleaner, safer and more healthful places to live.

As I have before stated, the small village is frequently a more dangerous place, from the health standpoint, in which to live, than is the large city. One of the most dangerous, disease and death spreading agencies that is to be found anywhere is the common privy with the open vault or pit. Every reader of the Home Health Club should from now on become an avowed enemy of the old-fashioned privy and also of one other agent of death, violent death at that, the grade crossing.

I know one railroad crossing that is called "Death Crossing." Many people pass over it daily, many have been killed. I personally have had two narrow escapes at "Death Crossing." Once by snatching the lines from a driver's hands and throwing the horse back upon his haunches, the fast express just missed the horse's head. Another time the watchman motioned for me to proceed although I preferred to wait longer and be sure. I passed safely over with my family, but a farmer who started at the same time, but could not so quickly with his horse, was ground into small pieces by a train which even the watchman did not see coming.

A few weeks ago I drove, with a friend, to a nearby farmhouse and as soon as we stopped the farmer's wife ran out and told me that someone had just been killed at the grade crossing only a short distance from the house. I hurried to the spot and as I drove up I saw a man reeling toward me, covered with blood and dirt. I could not recognize him, but he cried out in agony, "Oh, Doctor Reeder, my wife is dead, Mrs. Schafer is dead and her sister and Mrs. Brace are terribly injured." I ran to him and he fell into my arms. As soon as he partly recovered himself I left him with my friend and hurried to the injured women. I saw at once that I could do nothing for them. Both were fatally injured. The man was my neighbor and friend. His bride of a year I had known for fifteen years, one of those noble women that are always doing something for somebody. The engine and fifteen cars had passed over her frail little body and I had to crawl under the trucks to reach the largest part of it. I found a lap robe and after picking up dismembered parts I got others, who had arrived to help me carry it about 100 feet back to the road.

I have been through several railroad wrecks and had all kinds of experience in hospital work, but that was the most terrible experience that has ever come to me. The grade crossing did it. I made up my mind that one of the things I would work for in future would be the abolishment of the grade crossing. You can help.

Every reader of the Home Health Club has an influence and when the whole number of us unite to accomplish any good work, our combined influence becomes a power that is well nigh irresistible. Here is the way:

No matter who you are, write to your congressman or member of parliament and ask him to introduce a bill to congress or parliament compelling all railroads and urban street car lines to abolish grade crossings. Enough letters of that kind from the people will bring action and action along these lines will save lives and property. Do it and do it to-day.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5030 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor: Have been a reader of your writings and like your methods of treatment. Will you write me about hip joint disease, the symptoms how long it takes to form, a cure, your idea of treatments, if these cases are incurable, when relapses occur again and again. The case is of ten or twelve years standing with general health good, but relapse occurring about once a year or once every two years, gradually coming less and with less pain. What do you think of such a case?

Mrs. M. F.

Disease of the hip is often of a tubercular character or at least will so develop. It is most frequent among scrofulous persons, especially children. It may be the result of diseased conditions or of injury and it is surprising how slight a fall or other injury may produce serious results, in scrofulous children. Probably the trouble will be first recognized as stiffness of the joint. The large bone of the thigh being fastened to the hip bone, there will be a hollow in the small of the back whenever the limb is forcibly straightened. There may be fullness in the region of the joint, though as a rule the affected limb will greatly diminish in size. An abscess may form in the hip joint, and pus discharge. Death is apt to follow from exhaustion or the poisonous effects [illegible] will be the result. [illegible] will readily [illegible] a great deal of [illegible] ... and be [illegible] as far as the [illegible] is [illegible] atine is most excellent along with broths and milk. A stimulating liniment as an outward application is advisable. Abscesses must be treated in accordance with their requirements. If the limb should be stiffened and crooked, it may be thoroughly relaxed by Lobelia fomentation and then straightened when splints manufactured especially for this purpose may be used to advantage. Such a difficulty requires the most skilful treatment, often of a surgical nature. Hygienic surroundings must be the very best.

In order to strengthen her general health and strength, one of the best preparations I know of is the Compound Gentian which I have often spoken of.

DAILY SHORT STORY

FUN THAT FAILED.

Mark Twain's Burlesque of Emerson, Longfellow and Holmes.

IT SHOCKED THE IMMORTALS.

W. D. Howells' Description of the Dismal Effect of the Humorist's Attempt to Make Game of the Dignified Literary Trio at the Boston Dinner.

In his memories of Mark Twain in Harper's W. D. Howells tells of the dinner in Boston when Mark Twain, with fatal effect, made game of Emerson, Longfellow and Holmes:

"He believed he had been particularly fortunate in his notion for the speech of that evening, and he had worked it out in joyous self reliance. It was the notion of three tramps, three deadbeats, visiting a California mining camp and imposing themselves upon the innocent miners as respectively Ralph Waldo Emerson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and Oliver Wendell Holmes. The humor of the conception must prosper or must fail according to the mood of the hearer, but Clemens felt sure of compelling this to sympathy, and he looked forward to an unparalleled triumph.

"But there were two things that he had not taken into account. One was the species of religious veneration in which these men were held by those nearest them. They were men of extraordinary dignity, of the thing called presence for want of some clearer word, so that no one could well approach them in a personally light or trifling spirit. I do not suppose that anybody more truly valued them or more piously loved them than Clemens himself, but the intoxication of his fancy carried him beyond the bounds of that regard and emboldened him to the other thing which he had not taken into account—namely, the immense hazard of working his fancy out before their faces and expecting them to enter into the delight of it. If neither Emerson nor Longfellow nor Holmes had been there the scheme might possibly have carried, but even this is doubtful.

"I was the hapless president, fulfilling the abhorred function of calling people to their feet and making them speak. When I came to Clemens I introduced him with the cordial admiration I had for him as one of my greatest contributors and dearest friends. Here, I said, in sum, was a humorist who never left you hanging your head for having enjoyed his joke, and then the amazing mistake, the bewildering blunder, the cruel catastrophe was upon us. I believe that after the scope of the burlesque made itself clear there was no one there, including the burlesquer himself, who was not smitten with a desolating dismay. There fell a silence, weighing many tons to the square inch, which deepened from moment to moment and was broken only by the hysterical and blood curdling laughter of a single guest, whose name shall not be handed down to infamy. Nobody knew whether to look at the speaker or down at his plate. I chose my plate as the least affliction, and so I do not know how Clemens looked, except when I stole a glance at him and saw him standing solitary amid his appalled and appalling listeners, with his joke dead on his hands. From a first glance at the great three whom his jest had made its theme, I was aware of Longfellow sitting upright and regarding the humorist with an air of pensive puzzle, of Holmes busily writing on his menu with a well feigned effect of preoccupation, and of Emerson holding his elbows and listening with a sort of Jovian oblivion of this nether world in that lapse of memory which saved him in those later years from so much bother. Clemens must have dragged his joke to the climax and left it there, but I cannot say this from any sense of the fact. Of what happened afterward at the table where the immense, the wholly innocent, the truly unimagined affront was offered, I have no longer the least remembrance. I next remember being in a room of the hotel where Clemens was not to sleep, but to toss in despair and Charles Dudley Warner's saying in the gloom, 'Well, Mark! You're a funny fellow.' It was as well as anything he could have said, but Clemens seemed unable to accept the rebuke.

"I stayed the night with him, and the next morning after a haggard breakfast we drove about, and he made some purchases of bric-a-brac for his house in Hartford, with a soul as far away from bric-a-brac as ever the soul of man was. He went home by an early train, and he lost no time in writing back to the three divine personalities which he had so bewilderingly sought to flout. They all wrote back to him, making it as light for him as they could. I have heard that Emerson was a good deal mystified and in his sublime forgetfulness asked, 'Who was this gentleman who appeared to think he had offered him some sort of annoyance?' But I am not sure that this is accurate. What I am sure of is that Longfellow a few days after in my study stopped before a photograph of Clemens and said, 'Ah, he is a wag!' and nothing more. Holmes told me, with deep emotion, such as a brother humorist might well feel, that he had not lost an instant in replying to Clemens' letter and assuring him that there had not been the least offense and entreating him never to think of the matter again. 'He said that he was a fool, but he was God's fool,' Holmes quoted from the letter with a true sense of the pathos and humor of the self abasement."

PILGRIMS IN INDIA

They Travel Packed in Trains Like Sardines in a Box

USUALLY TRAVEL THIRD CLASS

Of course pilgrims in India usually travel third class, and the best of such accommodations makes no provision for comfort. Most of the carriages are divided into small cubicles, with long, narrow wooden benches running along the two sides. There is no convenience of any kind, and the travelers are packed into the compartment like so many sardines in a tin.

On festive occasions, when Hindus journey by the hundred thousand to the sacred spots, it is a sight worth traveling many miles to see a pilgrim train bound for some shrine on the Ganges. When it stops at a wayside station scores of intending passengers try to force their way into the already closely packed third class carriages by battering down the locked doors or even endeavoring to crawl through the windows over the heads and shoulders of the occupants. The police use their batons freely to drive the invaders away, but usually a few manage to evade the constables and secure a foothold on the train.

Sometimes the authorities are compelled to carry passengers in open trucks. They plant themselves in the bottom of these cars and remain there, exposed to the inclemencies of the weather, for ten, twenty, thirty, forty hours at a stretch, one treading on the toes of the other—fretful babies crying, men and women grumbling—until the end of the journey is reached.—Wide World Magazine.

CROCODILE TEARS

Old Legends That the Brutes Shed Them Over Their Prey

There was an old story, to which we find constant reference in Elizabethan writers, that crocodiles wept over their prey. No doubt the legend arose because the crocodile possesses largely developed lachrymal glands, but it appears in various amusing forms.

As early as the fourteenth century, in "Mandeville's Travels," we find: "In that contre ben great plentee of Cokadrilles. Theise serpentes slen men, and thei eten hem wepynge."

An odd turn is given to the tale by the narrator of one of Sir John Hawkins' voyages. Whether he was a married man or not we do not know, but he writes: "His nature is ever, when he would have his prey, to cry and sob like a Christian body, to provoke them to come to him, and then he snatcheth at them! And thereupon came this proverb, that is applied unto women when they weep, Lachrymae crocodili, the meaning whereof is that as the crocodile when he crieth goeth then about most to deceive, so doth a woman most commonly when she weepeth."

In Fuller's "Worthies" there is the added information that "the crocodile's tears are never true save when he is forced where saffron groweth." Shakespeare, Spencer and Dryden allude to this old world fancy.

MILK! MILK!

How many have become poor by buying inferior articles because they are cheap? This is false economy. The same applies to milk as well as any other commodity. Our milk costs a little more than other milk but the "quality" is there and it is cheaper in the end. Try it and find out. Many tell us they have proven this fact. Have you?

FOR THANKSGIVING'S FUN

There is a time for work and a time for play. Thanksgiving time, the time of pumpkins and jack-o'-lanterns, is the natural play time for grownups as well as little people.

The fancy dress costume behind which one hides for an evening often taxes one's greatest ingenuity to design.

A Pierrot costume is always dainty and becoming. It seems somehow to impart to the wearer the very spirit of fun. It may be the regulation costume of the clown, the motley or it may be of white effectively finished with the usual fluffy black silk pompons. A huge ruff and a pointed cap also add to the effect.

For this costume in size 34 5 yards of material are required.

The shepherdess costume is another favorite. With its draped panniers, straight bodice and slender skirt it is very dainty and attractive.

One of the old fashioned looking flowered muslins with a plain skirt is the usual thing and perhaps the most appropriate.

A broad brimmed hat and a shepherd's crook would complete the costume.

This design may be copied in size 36 with 5 yards of 36 inch material.

THE "NIGGER TEACHER"

By WALTER B. HENDRICKS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

"Were you here when the war broke out?" I asked a citizen of Alabama during a visit to that state in 1913.

"Wal, yes, I reckon I war hyar about that time."

"Do you remember Cyrus Vandevoor?"

"Reckon I do remember Cyrus Vandevoor. Nobody who was hyar when he was hyar 'll forgit him, I reckon."

"Do they remember him kindly or unkindly?"

"They remember him mighty kindly about the time he went away, but when he fust came down hyar they didn't take to him at all."

"What changed them? Tell me all about it."

"Well, sah, Cyrus Vandevoor was one of them abolitionists that didn't know enough to let the southern people alone to do what they liked with their niggers. At that time we didn't want our slaves to know too much, fo' if they did we would lose our property. Vandevoor set up a school fo' the blacks. Some of our most influential citizens went to him and protested. He said that he believed it to be his duty to teach 'em, and he proposed to go on with the wo'k.

"They went away and consulted, but they didn't say anything mo' to Vandevoor, who continued teachin' the niggers. That was just befo' the wah, and we was all gittin' mighty hot down hyar. Finally one night Vandevoor's schoolhouse was observed to be on fiah. The darkies ran fo' buckets to put water on it, but the committee stopped 'em, tellin' 'em they couldn't put on any water. Co'se the niggers was mighty cut up about this, and it made a heap o' trouble among 'em. The schoolhouse burned to the ground, and there was nothing left but a few charred timbers. Vandevoor wasn't nigh. He had gone to see a sick darky that had been one of his scholars and didn't get back till his schoolhouse was burned to ashes.

"That was a very dry season, there not having been any rain fo' months. After the fiah everybody went to bed. The wind rose, and—well, some s'pose it carried a spark, and some s'pose the spark got lodged in the shingles of the roof when the schoolhouse was burning. Anyhow, about 11 o'clock there was an ala'm o' fiah at Cunnel Woodbridge's house. The cunnel was playin' a game o' draw at Majo' Atwater's with Captain Sykes, Cunnel Thorpe and several other influential citizens. They had burned the schoolhouse and afterward gone to Majo' Atwater's fo' a julep and a game o' cyards. Cunnel Woodbridge sta'ted up when somebody rushed in and told him his house was afiah, sayin' he had left his little gal tha' alone. The cunnel was a widower, with this little daughter, about twelve years old.

"By the time the pokeh party got to the house the downstairs was burnin', and nobody could get upstairs. Little Mary Woodbridge ran to a winde' and, seein' her father below by the light o' the flames, stretched out her a'ms to him and cried out:

"'Papa, save me!'

"I was lookin' myself at the cunnel, and I neve' saw such an expression of agony on a man's face in my life. No one could get up to the child, fo' everything below was afiah.

"Just then a man come along and took in the situation. He was that cussed nigger teacher. He was young and active as a cat. There was a rusty lightning rod in a corner of the house runnin' up right to the window wha' the gal was. Vandevoor he took hold of it and climbed up it to the window and reached out his arm. The gal took hold of it and swung down beside the abolitionist, who held on to the rod with the other hand.

"Wual, there he was. He couldn't come down hand over hand with only one hand, and he couldn't hold on long. Anyhow, it was [illegible] all the while, and he and the gal would be burnt to death. But he [illegible] he was [illegible] the [illegible] had been [illegible] into a [illegible] of 'em [illegible] some one come with a ladder and [illegible] it up to 'em. Cy [illegible] it and the gal got down. [illegible]

"You just ought to seen Cunnel Woodbridge when he got his daughter from the man whose schoolhouse he had helped to burn. And his burnin' the schoolhouse was what burned his own house, and if it hadn't been for Cy Vandevoor he would 'a' burned Mary. The cunnel couldn't look the nigger teacher in the face. He just put out his hand and said nothin'.

"That was the night befo' Fort Sumter was fired on, and the next mornin' when they looked fo' Cyrus Vandevoor he wa'n't no wha' to be found. They reckoned he'd lit out to the no'th to fight the south."

"What's become of Mary Woodbridge?" I asked.

"Oh, she's livin' here with her aunt. She's grown up now. Lots o' young fellers want to marry her, but she says she's waitin' fo' that nigger teacher that saved her from burnin'."

"Where can I find her?"

"Over tha' in that white house." As I walked away he called: "Say, stranger, what do you want of her?"

"I'm the nigger teacher. I've been waiting for her too."

A Short-Legged Choir.

Near Brantford there is a small congregation of one of the countless odd sects whose members prefer their own Scriptural interpretations or peculiar form of church government to those adopted by the more powerful denominations. One of the families which formed a chief support of the congregation included a father who kept a judicious eye over the financial concerns of the church, and a stalwart son who brought an excellent baritone voice to the services of the choir. At a business session of the congregation, the son, who may be designated as John Junior, urged that a modest sum, say $50, be applied toward enlarging the space allotted to the choir, and he pointed out that so cramped was the accommodation that he and other male members at least had not room to stretch their legs comfortably.

This brought John Senior to the floor, and with simple seriousness he proceeded to offer his solution of the problem. "It is not necessary," he said, "to spend money so that the choir members should have room to stretch their legs. What we must do is to let the present singers resign and secure some men with shorter legs to take their places, and if necessary I will make a motion to that effect."

Thus ended summarily the agitation for an enlarged choir loft.—Saturday Night.

HOME FOR SNAKES.

Poisonous Reptiles Rendered Harmless and Kept In Comfort.

One hears daily of charitable individuals with plenty of time and money inaugurating homes for various unfortunate types of humanity, but the most unique establishment of its kind is certainly the Vendon Institute of San Paulo, in Brazil, where a permanent and comfortable home is provided for poisonous snakes.

The institute is in a part of Brazil noted for its superabundance of venomous reptiles, where the loss of life from snake bites became so serious that something had to be done by the Government to cope with the situation.

Large bands of men wearing thick boots, leggings and gloves for protection against the snake bites daily hunt the thickly grassed districts round about the institute, armed with long, thin tubes terminating in two semi-circular claws, which are controlled at the end nearest the body, and can be opened or closed at will. By this means they are able to grasp the snake firmly by the tail, without any danger to themselves.

As soon as a snake is caught in this manner, it is unceremoniously thrust into a basket, where, together with a writhing, coiling mass of its brethren, it is conveyed to the home.

Here, under the personal supervision of a fully qualified doctor, garbed exactly as the surgeon in the operating room of a hospital, with the long white overalls, fine rubber gloves, and so on, the snake is robbed of its poison—termed "serum"—and made quite harmless.

When the operation is over the snake is taken away and placed in a large garden, from which escape is a matter of impossibility.

Of course, it would be most cruel to turn the poor, defenceless snake adrift into the woods again, for he would be entirely at the mercy of his enemies and soon succumb. So this garden, which contains almost everything Mr. Snake would find in his natural element—trees, shrubs, long, thick grass, pools and streams where he may disport himself on warm days—is provided by the institute.

Hundreds of perfectly harmless reptiles of almost every kind may be seen gliding about the gardens, and one can well imagine the horror a traveler with no knowledge of the circumstances would experience in finding himself suddenly surrounded by hordes of these reptiles.

Keeping a Dog.

A dog is a fine thing about the house if you are afraid of burglars and don't care anything about the neighbors. But let a vigorous dog, sleeping on the porch, scratch his neck under his metal collar and the night is disturbed by a sound that is a cross between an old fashioned clock running down and a [illegible] roller brushing up a cement walk. The house vibrates as from a [illegible] [illegible]. AN ARMY LOVE AFFAIR

By JOHN ADAMSON

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

The United States army and navy, which used to be very aristocratic institutions, are, like everything else, becoming democratic. The old army before the civil war was like one family—that is, the officers and their wives and children constituted one select social circle. Recently there have been several episodes to indicate that the old spirit is dying, but dying hard. The following story illustrates this:

I was graduated at West Point at twenty, and I don't know a more dangerous age than that for a young officer. His pay enables him to marry. He has seen nothing of the world and nothing of the opposite sex except for a couple of months each summer for two years during the encampment season while he was a cadet. Released from a confining life, he is ready to fall in love with the first girl he meets.

I was graduated in the engineers, and the first job I was given by the government was making an estimate on certain intended repairs on a fort on the Atlantic coast in a southern state. The fort had not been kept up, having been left in charge of an ordnance sergeant, but in view of a feeling on the part of the people of the United States that our coast defenses needed strengthening the government decided to look into the matter.

Fort L. was situated on a point of land extending into the ocean and as lonely as a lighthouse. For a few months in the spring the neighborhood was a resort for northern persons, chiefly invalids, there being several hotels on the beach. I was sent to the fort in October. When I first saw the old pile with its empty casemates and empty quarters I shuddered at being obliged to pass some time there.

The sergeant made me as comfortable as he could in a casemate, his wife taking pains that it should be clean, and my bed was provided with snowy white linen.

And now comes the point of my story: The couple had a daughter seventeen years old. What could I do? What did I do but make love to her. I knew [illegible] that there is a barrier in the army between the families of commissioned and noncommissioned officers. I knew furthermore that Mary Converse was getting no education and had never mingled with the class of people to whom I was used. If I married her it would place her out of her element and she would be a millstone drag on me.

But here was I in the springtime of life, shut up with a girl in a fortress and no other associate. I doubt if any precaution would have availed. She was situated just as I was, shut up with a young soldier, and could no more resist a natural drift toward me than I toward her.

Before leaving I asked Mary Converse to be my wife. I knew I was wronging her and myself in doing so, but I had conceived high notions of honor at West Point and considered myself pledged to her. At her age, and being one of those feminine girls who when they love love hard, I believed that if I deserted her it would wreck her life. So I went away engaged, well knowing that if I did not desert her both our lives would be wrecked.

My first visit to my fiancee was in the following spring. The hotels on the beach were now open, and I took up my quarters in one of them. Some seven months only had elapsed, and Mary was not much changed. I felt the same toward her as before. The reasons I attributed this to are that it was a case of young and innocent love, and Mary was a superior girl. She was bright, she had what we call character, and she was pretty.

At the hotel I met a Mrs. Boyington, the wife of an army officer, who conceived a motherly friendship for me. She was [illegible] years my senior, and I craved some one to whom to bestow my confidence. So I told her of my affair.

"It must be broken off," said the lady, "both on your account and the girl's."

"She [illegible] be able to endure it without serious consequences," I replied.

Our talk ended in the lady's going to see my betrothed. On her return she handed me a note from Mary badly written, misspelled and blotted with tears, in which she said that Mrs. Boyington had explained to her that she would [illegible] herself by marrying me and she released me.

I was so far attached to her that I spent some time making up my mind to accept the release.

After that I met many young ladies, but none of them pleased me. I was preoccupied with my first love. Indeed, I did not propose to replace her. Since the difference in our stations prevented our marriage I would marry no one. At intervals I met Mrs. Boyington, to whom I told my feelings.

"Don't talk that way at your age," she replied. "You'll surely find some one you can love."

Six years later Mrs. Boyington and I met at the same station. She asked me to dine with her, and whom should I meet in her quarters but Mary Converse, but not, so far as character and manners were concerned, the simple Mary Converse of years before. Mrs. Boyington had educated her and given her many social advantages.

She had been as true to me as I had been to her, and before we parted our engagement was renewed.

Impossible.

Bee—What ridiculous, impossible things these fashion plates are! Mrs. Bee—I know they used to be, but today many of them are engraved from photographs. Bee—Well, this one can't be. Here are two women going in opposite directions, both with brand new gowns on and neither looking back at the other.—Boston Transcript.

Parental Effort.

"What are you working so hard for?"

"I want to provide for my boy's future," replied Farmer Corntossel. "I want to lay by enough wealth so that I can leave Josh this farm for a golf course."—Washington Star.

Education is all polish. It does not alter the nature of the wood that is under it. It only improves the appearance a little.—[illegible]

Marks of Social Distinction.

"The Hugginses," said Sherlock Holmes, "are very popular with the wealthy classes."

"How do you know?" I queried, confident of a brilliant answer.

"Because there are so many grease spots on the pavement in front of their house."

"I don't see the point," said I.

"You auto," said Sherlock.—Newark News.

Even In That Day.

From Bee's dictionary, published in [illegible]:

"Shopping—Among women, going about from shop to shop, buying little articles perhaps, perhaps not, but always pulling about great quantities of goods."—Boston Transcript.

Tumblers.

Drinking glasses called tumblers owe their name to the fact that they are the successors of the little round silver bowls, so perfectly balanced that, which ever way they were tipped about on the table they tumbled into position again and there remained with the rim upward.

Fairly Lazy.

"Is Jones lazy?"

"Lazy's no name for it. Why, he'd go into a revolving door and then wait for somebody to come in and turn it around."—Judge.

He that [illegible] will sit down [illegible].—Irish Proverb.

Catarrh or Colds Never Quickly Cured By Swallowing Drugs

Cough Syrup, Tablets, etc., go to the Stomach, Perhaps Sicken It, But Don't Kill the Germs of Catarrh

The Direct Breathing Cure is the Best

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to rout out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essence that ease, heal and cure.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. F. Best, a well-known resident of Bridgetown, W.I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. Ten minutes taking Catarrhozone gave me a little relief, so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cured me. I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

The Slim Woman Is Winning

The day of the slim woman's triumph has arrived. "The slimmer one is the more stylish," say the dressmakers.

This would have been sad news for the fat woman a year ago. She would have had to try dieting or exercise. Nowadays, however, the woman who is too fat for the styles goes to a druggist and gets a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, one of which she takes after each meal and at bedtime, and so reduces her superfluous flesh quickly.

These tablets, being made in accordance with the famous prescription, are perfectly harmless, and they are, also, the most economical preparation a person can buy, for they cost only 75 cents a large case, one of which is frequently enough to start a person losing at the rate of 12 to 16 ounces a day. Pretty nearly every druggist keeps this tablet in stock, but should yours be sold out, you can easily obtain a case by sending to the makers, the Marmola Company, Farmers Building, Detroit, Mich.

PARTY, LOOKING AROUND FOR NEXT LEADER, FAVORS MR. BECK

Toronto, Dec. 12.—The Conservative party in Ontario may be said to be giving to-day unofficial consideration as to who will be the next Premier of the Province.

Sir James Whitney's health has been the cause of some concern to his loyal supporters, and while they would like to see himcontinue in his present high office for ever, they realize that the time may not be far distant when the question of successor must be decided.

Active party workers in and out of Toronto have given thought already to the question. Two names have been considered: Hon. W. J. Hanna, and Hon. Adam Beck.

An active party worker said yesterday that Hon. Adam Beck was the man who possessed the elements of popular strength that would insure his election.

Sir James in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 12.—Sir James Whitney, Premier of Ontario, and Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education are spending a holiday fortnight in Washington for rest and strength. They have for the past weeks enjoyed themselves quietly, seeing the sights among which have been the Houses of Congress in session and the Supreme Court of the United States.

Sir James said that the visit of himself and his colleague had been delightful in every way. He had been much run down in health, and a short rest in the milder climate of the South was achange that promised hopefully. They will remain here three or four days longer before returning to Canada.

BECKER CANNOT SEE MOTHER

New York, Dec. 12.—The aged mother of Charles Becker, former police lieutenant, who is in the death house for the murder of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler is dying in this city, ignorant of the reason that prevents her son coming to see her, it was learned this morning. Becker himself only knows that his mother is ill and has not been told that her death is momentarily expected, it is said.

The one exception to the rule that condemned men shall never leave the death house was that of Albert T. Patrick, who as his own lawyer was permitted to appear in the courts in New York and Brooklyn.

Members of Becker's family were told, when they made inquiries, that it would be impossible to have the condemned man taken to see his mother.

Where Ears Grow Sharp.

A French balloonist has recorded the clearness with which sounds coming from the surface of the ground can be heard at a high altitude. At the height of 5,000 feet the ringing of horses' hoofs on a hard road was clearly audible. At 4,600 feet the splashing sound made by ducks in a pond was heard. The barking of dogs and the crowing of cocks could be heard at seven or eight thousand feet. These sounds penetrated through a white floor of cloud that hid the earth from sight, says Harper's Weekly. In the perfect silence of the air the investigator was startled by what seemed stealthy footsteps close at hand. It was ascertained that this noise was caused by the stretching of the ropes and the yielding of the silk as the balloon continued to expand.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famou Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonial the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4430, 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

VOL. XL, NO. 29[illegible] PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO, MONDAY, DEC 15, 1913 PRICE, TWO CENTS.

TWO BYE-ELECTIONS HELD SATURDAY WITH THEIR RESULTS

Conservatives Win in South Lanark and Also in Macdonald Manitoba

Toronto, Dec. 14. — Two by-elections for the Dominion Government were held on Saturday, viz., in South Lanark and Macdonald, Man. The result was that the Conservative won in Lanark and also in Macdonald.

SOUTH LANARK.

The fight in Lanark was a particularly hot one. As is generally known this constituency was left open by the death of the late Hon. John Haggart. There were three candidates in the field, viz.: Dr. A. E. Hanna, Perth, the nominee of the Conservative convention; Lieut.-Col. J. M. Balderson, K.C., Perth, Independent Conservative, and Mr. Arthur Hawkes, Toronto, the candidate of the Canada First party. The official nominations took place in the Town Hall, on Dec. 6th. Following the formal proceedings, with Returning Officer W. J. Pink in the chair, a public meeting was held. At the inception of affairs the fight began in earnest, immediately following the nominations when a wordy war started between Dr. Hanna and Col. Balderson, and Mr. Hawkes descended on the meeting as a dove of peace. Col. Balderson's followers were present in as strong numbers as Dr. Hanna's forces, and there was a goodly number of non-partisans there to see the fun.

The convention of last August, the events leading up to it, and those transpiring since it was held, formed the bone of contention, which Dr. Hanna and Col. Balderson wrangled over. It would seem that Mr. Hawkes was a self imposed candidate. Mr. Hanna, from the start appeared to be the choice of the people at large. The campaign was naturally somewhat opaque as to results to the politicians, owing to the triangular duel.

Returns from the rural districts immediately began to increase the lead of Dr. Hanna. Half the subdivisions in Sherbrooke gave Hanna 38 majority, while in North Elmsley, two out of the four polls gave Hanna the same majority.

Bathurst gave Hanna 32 majority. Montague reported a majority of 11 for Balderson, but this may be changed to a majority for Hanna on corrected returns.

Arthur Hawkes, self imposed candidacy was a dismal fiasco. He loses his deposit, only getting 70 out of 3749 votes cast.

MACDONALD.

The bye-election in Macdonald was fought out on Saturday and the Conservative won. Nominations were held on Dec. 6th, the candidates being Alex. Morrison (Conservative) and Dr. A. W. Myles (Liberal), for the federal seat of Macdonald. The riding was thrown open on the admission of Mr. Morrison that some of his agents had employed unlawful methods in the by-election in which Mr. Morrison defeated R. L. Richardson by a majority of about 8000.

The result was:

The final result, from fifty two out of sixty two polls gives Alex. Morrison, Conservative, a majority of 830.

C. P. R. NOTE ISSUE A GOOD THING FOR THE WHOLE COUNTRY

Brings in $41,000,000 for Use in Railway Development and Gives Shareholders About $10,000,000 Spread Over Ten Years

Toronto, Dec. 13.—Canadian Pacific Directors on Monday announced an issue, to shareholders of record December 23, of $52,000,000 of 6 per cent. note certificates redeemable on or before March 2, 1914, but also redeemable by drawing at any previous date. These notes were offered to shareholders to the extent of one-fifth of their stock holdings ($100 note to every five shares), at the price of $80 per $100 note. A trust fund of $65,000,000 of securities, including deferred payments on land sales, was set aside as a basis for the issue.

The stock slumped four points from the high figure reached on Monday when the first definite hint of an immediate "melon" was put out by Sir George Paish, and has remained at or below that recession for the rest of the week, in a generally weak market.

Nature of [illegible] Melon.

The objection to the form of the melon was undoubtedly the fact that it called for a large contribution in cash from the shareholders or the general public to whom they might assign their rights. However, the notes themselves speedily proved highly attractive to investors owing to their high yield and excellent security, and the demand for rights made it amply evident that the public would be quite prepared to take the privilege of subscription off the hands of those shareholders who did not care to exercise it, at a price equivalent to better than par for the notes themselves. Shareholders also must not have realized that they were in no way obliged to subscribe, for [illegible] in order to maintain their 10 per cent. income on their stock.

Abandon Special Income Account.

Since a large portion of the income-producing securities of the Special Income Account are now segregated to form the trust fund of the new note issue, it is reasonable to suppose that the maintenance of a separate Special Income Account will now be abandoned, and the balance of the income from that account will be merged into general earnings. While it is difficult to determine just how much of the securities which were contained in Special Income account are to be segregated, it is evident that there will be a very large block of securities, and a very large income, left over for the shareholders. The securities in the proposed trust fund are valued at $65,000,000; but deferred land payments alone figure at $44,[illegible] in the last balance sheet, leaving less than $11,000,000 to be made up from the remaining items in the Special Income Account. It is difficult to figure just how much is the total of the securities in that Account, but last year they produced, exclusive of the interest on "cash proceeds and deferred payments on land sold," the sum of $4,500,000 in income nearly all from very high grade bonds and stock; from which it would appear that at least $75,000,000 worth (market value) of bonds, stocks and other securities must be contributing to the fund, of which [illegible] would be left out of the [illegible] altogether, and would contribute its quota of revenue to the main body of income.

Plenty Left for Dividends.

That this main income will be vastly more than sufficient to maintain the 10 per cent. disbursement is evident enough. The earnings of the railway proper, after deducting preferred dividend, were last year about [illegible]. They will be enlarged this year by $1,100,000 of reduced bond interest due to the paying off of $22,000,000 3 per cent. bonds out of the proceeds of stock. They will be further enlarged by the earning power of the $41,000,000 raised by the new note issue, the interest on which [illegible] by the segregated trust fund, leaving all that it may produce as profit for the railway—say $2,100,000, allowing an earning power of 5 per cent. They will be further enlarged by the balance of income transferred from the Special Income Account after the segregation of the land assets and investments arising therefrom, which should be over $3,000,000. [illegible] allowing for [illegible] ing annually [illegible] out invested [illegible] for the common stock [illegible] plus $1,100,000 plus [illegible] plus $3,000,000 [illegible] $26,000,000 or 10.0 per cent. on the $260,000,000 of common stock. There are still further additions to arise out of the book-keeping changes announced by the President at the last meeting, under which several classes of earnings which have hitherto been booked direct into capital account will now be recorded as distributable income, and also the income-producing power of $17,000,000 of payments on the last stock issue, not received until after the close of the last fiscal year.

BOMB KILLED THE WRONG PERSON

Police Hunting for Foreigner Who Sent Infernal Machine to Bottling Co.

New York, Dec. 13.—A young foreigner, swarthy and clean-shaven, was sought to-day by detectives as the sender of the infernal machine which killed Ida Anusowitz yesterday as she opened it at her desk in the office of the O.K. Bottling Company.

From a patchwork of clues the police wove overnight a theory of motive for the crime. The slain girl they believe was not the victim for whom the bomb was intended: William H. Callahan, the proprietor who in business rivalry, and this, the police believe, prompted the act.

FATAL BATTLE IN MILLINERY STORE

Divorced Husband Kills Two, and Wounds One, Then Commits Suicide.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—Three persons were killed and one woman fatally wounded in a millinery store here to-day. The divorced husband of the wounded woman, shot and killed the proprietor of the store and the latter's wife, shot his own former wife, and then committed suicide. The names of none of the persons were contained in the first police report.

The dead are Louis F. Nieman, Mrs. L. F. Neiman and Emmanuel Harner, the slayer.

WOMAN WHIPS THREE BIG MEN AT A DANCE

Ponchatoula, La., Dec. 14.— Mrs. Bertha Corneille, residing a few miles west of Ponchatoula, has proved herself the champion scrapper of this section. At a dance given at the Midway Pavilion, Mrs. Corneille whipped Officer Jacob Braun, W. M. Brown and Stepson Henry.

Brown is confined to bed from injuries. Mrs. Corneille is unhurt, but has been arrested and released on bond.

PRINCIPAL GORDON AT KNOX CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

Knox church was more than fortunate in securing as preacher on the occasion of their seventh anniversary the Very Rev. D. M. Gordon, M.A., D.D., Principal of Queen's University Kingston.

His sermon yesterday morning was based on John xiii; 3-5. The theme treated was The Divine Character of Loving Service.

The preacher described the incident recorded. The jealousy of the disciples was brought to a point by the necessity of one washing the feet of the rest. The master becomes a servant, and at once raises the moral atmosphere. His act revealed the Divine character. John selected this incident as giving the same teaching. The true life of man is in the very life of God, and that life is a life given in helpful service. That is the lesson of the broken bread and the outpoured wine.

Our Lord further claimed to manifest in His own life and character the love of God. Some times we try to work out the question "Is Christ Divine" as if we knew beforehand what could be expected of a Divine Being. John takes the reverse method. We do not understand the fulness of the Divine; but we know Jesus. God's children must be like our Father and the elder brother. For us, as for Him, true life is not getting, but giving.

In the evening the Principal again preached an impressive and eloquent sermon to an even larger congregation. The chair of about thirty voices, under the leadership of Mr. Geo. Kenyon, rendered an excellent musical program.

PREPARE NOW TO FORCE COLD STORAGES TO DISGORGE FOOD

Government Will Likely Pass Legislation to Prevent Hold-ups When Supplies are Scarce

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—It is probable that legislation will be introduced at the forthcoming session of parliament to provide for Federal supervision and inspection of the cold storage plants throughout the country.

Certain jurisdiction is at present exercised over cold storage plants that are in receipt of a federal subsidy, but there are many other independent cold storage plants in which there is only spasmodic inspection by boards of health, and it has been found unsatisfactory.

It is understood that by the bill which will in all probability be introduced this session no effort will be made to limit the time of storage but provision will be made by which the government will know exactly at all times the quantity of foodstuffs that are stored away.

It has been alleged that while there has been at times a scarcity of foodstuffs, with high prices prevailing cold storage plants have been overflowing with supplies. Investigations have shown that in many cases the allegations have been well founded. It is believed that with a possession of the knowledge of the quantity of foodstuffs in storage it would not be difficult to compel distribution.

LIVERPOOL GIRL IS MURDERED IN OFFICE

Pretty Manager of Tarpaulin Works Found in Canal Tied in Sack.

London, Dec. 13.—An extraordinary atrocious murder, in Liverpool, has shocked all England. The body of Miss Bradfield, the pretty young manager of Braden's tarpaulin works was found tied in a sack and floating in a canal.

Investigation showed that she was brutally murdered on Wednesday evening in the firm's office, while thousands crowded the streets nearby.

The body was doubled up and stuffed into a sack, which was weighted with iron bars, then wheeled on one of the firm's hand carts and thrown into the canal. Robbery was the motive.

SENATE LIBERAL MAJORITY MAY NOW BE REDUCED

Rumored Government Will Follow Its Precedent of Last Year—Reported Senator Cox of Toronto is Affected

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—It is rumored that the Liberal majority in the Senate may be further reduced when parliament opens by declaring vacant the places of several senators who were not in attendance at the last two sessions of parliament. Section 31 of the B.N. Act provides that the "place of a senator shall become vacant if for two consecutive sessions of parliament he fails to give his attendance in the senate."

It will be remembered that at the last session, upon motion of Hon. Mr. Lougheed, the government leader in the senate, the seat of Hon. Dr. Michael Sullivan of Kingston was declared vacant. It occasioned some surprise at the time, as Dr. Sullivan had been appointed many years ago by Sir John Macdonald, was disabled by his health from attending to his senatorial duties, and no action was requested by the Liberal members of the Senate. It is now seen that the government by establishing the precedent in the case of one of its own supporters, can now rigorously insist upon the mandate of the constitution being enforced against senators who sit to the left of the speaker.

While considerable reserve is being maintained as to the senators in default, it is currently reported that the seat of Hon. George A. Cox, a senator from Toronto, will be declared vacant for non-attendance during the last two sessions of parliament.

Must Drop Title.

A curious announcement in the Canada Gazette a week or two ago is being discussed in relation to the prospective vacation of senatorial seats. That announcement was to the effect that a new table of precedents had been promulgated by the colonial office for Canada. A careful comparison of the new table with the old shows only one change, namely, that the title of honourable hereafter conferred on a senator for life, will hereafter be borne only by senators while members of the senate. Ex-senators will not be entitled to the prefix "Honourable" hereafter.

PRINCE ALBERT TO VISIT CANADA

Will Accompany Prince of Wales on Empire Cruise.

London, Dec. 13.—It has been about decided that Prince Albert will accompany the Prince of Wales on his projected trip to Canada next year, and that the trip will be extended so that the royal princes will visit South Africa, Australia and the Pacific coast of Canada as well as the Atlantic coast, and the United States. The princes will be regularly assigned as officers to the cruiser in which they are to make the trip, and will be under naval discipline throughout. The King is taking a keen interest in the trip, which will in part duplicate that in which he and his elder brother, the Duke of Clarence, participated.

PORTUGAL NOW TOTTERING TO ITS FALL

Costa, Ruling With Iron Hand, Certain to be Swept Out With His Government

Lisbon, Dec. 15.—After three years' trial the Republic of Portugal may be set down as a gigantic failure. The recent royalist attempt failed for lack of proper organization and support, but the affairs of the republic are drifting to another national crisis, in which syndicalists, monarchists and opportunist politicians of varying strength will contend for supremacy, and the condition of Portugal may be much worse before it is better.

After an absence of three years we find a discontented, distrustful people, burdened with increasing taxation, an ambitious and unpopular government, floundering in a maze of intrigue and bewildering legislation, prisons more crowded with political suspects than they ever were in the time of Franco the Dictator; a depleted treasury despite a carefully manipulated "surplus," official espionage, deep factional intrigues, and behind everything the shadow of that malevolent secret society, the Carbonari, which seals the lips of the people through fear, and makes the bomb a factor in practical politics.

ONE MAN GOVERNMENT

Instead we have the "one-man government" of Dr. Affonso Costa, who is content to dominate affairs with the modest title of premier, and it is this government, under the nominal presidency of Senor Arriaga, that is trying to withstand royalist intrigues from without and republican counter-plots from within.

The men who conspired together to make the republic are now arrayed against each other in the guise of hostile political parties, the mere names of which mean nothing to the outside world. One such party, with syndicalism as its corner-stone, is storing up bombs in suburban cellars against the day when its incendiaries will again attempt to overthrow the government and plunge the country into anarchy.

Another party of so-called "evolutionists"—less violent in character—is equally active in trying to undermine the Costa regime for its own ends.

Then there are the monarchists, watching the internal struggles of the republic with grim satisfaction, and hoping to profit by the chaos they expect will follow when their enemies wage open war on each other.

Much of the responsibility for republican disaffection and party strife rests with Affonso Costa and his chosen friends.

His relentless treatment of enemies and disregard of former allies, his oppressive financial schemes and overpowering personal ambition, have combined to weaken the republic and caused anti-monarchists of three years ago to plot treason against the new flag they hoped to raise.

The working classes in Lisbon and Oporto—even those who still cheer for the republic—are becoming more and more discontented because of the rise in food prices. Bread, potatoes, oil and dried fish, the necessaries of life, all cost more than they did three years ago.

KING ALFONSO CHATS WITH REPORTERS AND EDITS COPY

Paris, Dec. 13.—King Alfonso of Spain is taking great interest in what the reporters write about his visit here. While walking this morning with two members of his staff he chatted occasionally with the correspondents, who has accompanied the party and in one case revised a reporter's despatch, correcting some small details.

Queen Victoria spent this morning in the department stores making purchases for Christmas.

THE TIMES SWEEPS THE CITY ONCE EACH WEEK

The tremendous boom which The Times is experiencing just now is due in a large measure to the fact that once each week the paper is distributed free to every home in the city. For this purpose the city has been divided into six districts of 600 each, one district being covered each day in the week. Thus each week every home in the city receives a copy of The Times. This will be continued indefinitely, thus affording those who have not been in the habit of reading The Times, an opportunity of doing so each week, our main object being to get the masses in the habit of reading and becoming interested in a morning paper, and eventually securing them as subscribers.

The regular price of The Times is $3.00 per year—only 25c per month. Each yearly subscriber on payment of four months' subscription or over will receive ten beautiful works of art—pictures well worth framing. Call at The Times Office and see them.

BRAND NEW SOO CANAL IS GOVERNMENTS NEXT BIG WORK

Appropriation, it is Expected, Will Appear in Estimates Part of Great Waterways Scheme

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—The next great waterway scheme which the government will construct will be the new Sault Ste Marie Canal. It is understood that an appropriation will appear in the estimates of the minister of finance to begin the work. The new Soo Canal is part of the great scheme of the government to fashion a waterway from the Atlantic to the head of navigation on the Great Lakes, so that the huge ocean freighters will be able to carry their cargoes for the west from Europe and other parts of the world right to Port Arthur and Fort William. And on return voyages the freighters will carry wheat from Port Arthur to the old lands.

The first section of the great scheme is the rebuilding of the Welland Canal, making it thirty feet deep, and now that its construction is well on the way the Soo Canal can be started next. It will also accommodate vessels of 30 feet draught. The necessary land at Sault Ste Marie was expropriated last summer by Hon. Frank Cochrane.

The hardest section of the huge undertaking will be the deepening of the St. Lawrence canals. This will be undertaken after the Soo Canal is well on its way. An interesting part of the appropriation of land at the Soo is the fact that in 1906 White Fish Island and valuable powers which go with it, were secured by James Conmee. The town of Sault Ste Marie protested to the late government but without avail and it looked as if these rights were irretrievably lost to the Canadian people. However, A. C. Boyce, M.P., who fought for the retention of the island by the Dominion, made the prophecy on the floor of the house that one day a Conservative government would be in power and they would secure again for the people their lost rights. The prophecy has now come true.

DR. BARNARDS HOMES A DOOR ALWAYS OPEN

"The Door that always opens" is the title of the latest illustrated booklet issued by Dr. Barnardo's Homes. It contains the life stories of a day's admissions told in a very readable fashion. Here is one of them:

"In the dark hours came little Teddie, found in the street at two o'clock in the morning, burning with fever. Not even Dr. Barnardo's Homes could save him, and we can see that he must die. But nobody could know how pitiful some of his last words would be. His good nurse kissed him like a mother. 'Why did you do that?' said the astonished boy; and then, 'Nobody—never—kissed—me—afore.'"

For nearly half a century the door of Dr. Barnardo's Homes has opened to all destitute children. Many of them come in a pitiable condition—afflicted, suffering and miserable. 79,000 children have passed through the Door, and the majority of them have been trained in various ways to take their places as useful citizens in the Homeland, and as supporters of the flag in the Dominions beyond the seas. But think for a moment what would have become of these Boys and Girls if they had not found a haven within the shelter of these Homes! Almost every hour of an ordinary working life some helpless child is struggling to reach the Door. It has never yet remained shut. But it is harder and harder to keep it open, and the cost of living is more and more. Half-a-sovereign will prop it open for a minute.

The Christmas season is approaching. Spare a little of your good cheer for the orphan and the homeless, the suffering and the sorrowful little people of our land. Gifts of all kinds, money, clothing, blankets, toys, etc., will be welcomed by the Honorary Director, Mr. William Baker, M.A., LL.B., at Headquarters, 18 to 26, Stepney Causeway, London, E.

DOCTOR NOBLY SACRIFICED LIFE FOR HIS PATIENT

Dr. Farewell Sat Constantly at Bedside of a Woman Dying of Pneumonia

New York, Dec. 13.—The death of Dr. Norman Eugene Farewell, one of the best-known eye, ear and throat specialists in Brooklyn, last night was due directly to a noble sacrifice by the doctor, according to a statement made to-day by Dr. Ralph C. Williams.

Eight days before the death of Dr. Farewell was called to see a woman patient who was suffering from pneumonia. The case was acute and the woman was in a serious condition. Dr. Farewell was compelled to be constantly at the bedside of the woman. He contracted the disease and died yesterday.

Norman Eugene Farewell was born in Oshawa, Canada 36 years ago, and was graduated from the Trinity University, Toronto, in 1899, and Trinity Medical College in 1901. He then became house surgeon at the Toronto General Hospital and the Oshawa General hospital.

Coming to Brooklyn, after a few years, he made a specialty of diseases of eye, ear and throat and had an extensive practice.

Dr. Farewell was a member of the University of Toronto Club.

A widow, his parents, two sisters and one brother survive. Interment will be made at Oshawa.

CONSIDER THE CAT.

The Only Animal Man Has Never Been Able to Conquer.

There is just one animal man has never conquered, never can conquer. Conqueror over every other beast [illegible] from human habitation. [illegible]

[illegible] They have been his unquestioning and uncomplaining slaves. The elephant, too, has become a servant or have gone jungle feeds.

The lion, the tiger, the wolf, the bear, and such other savage beasts as have not yielded service to man have shied away in terror from the path of civilization, and are killed on sight.

But one single animal claims man's protection, shares his food and hearth, wanders at will and unmolested through human houses, and does absolutely no work in return [illegible]

This only exception [illegible] domestic cat.

[illegible] ferred prey to its owner to eat. Nor will it hunt rodents unless it happens to feel like doing so.

The cat won't work. It won't even learn tricks unless it happens to want to. And no one can punish or torture it into learning any trick it doesn't want to learn.

That is why there are almost no trick cats in animal shows and why the few that are there do such very simple tricks. A dog can be tortured into doing tricks. A cat can't.

When some animals became man's slaves and others fled from him, the cat did neither. It simply took all the favors and advantages man had to offer, and refused to do one lick of work in exchange. Beat a dog and he will fawn on you. Beat a cat and it will attack you and then desert you. You can't conquer the cat. You can't make it work.—New York World.

Want Their Children Thieves.

The Kaiba Khels, a tribe that inhabits the country of the Khyber pass, in northern India, are thieves and consider thieving a most honorable occupation. A young woman of the Kaiba Khel will not look at a young man who would like to become her husband unless he is proficient in the art. The fondest wish of a mother is that her little boy may become a cunning thief. Every child is consecrated, as it were, at its birth to crime. A hole is made in the wall similar to that made by a burglar, and the mother passes the infant backward and forward through the hole, singing in its ear: "Be a thief! Be a thief! Be a thief!" They are probably the only tribe in India who glorify peculation and raise it to the dignity of a regular calling.—Christian Herald.

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children

COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1913, last year, 1,648 in-patients, 25,567 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, [illegible] nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 159,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 15,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 5,[illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,154 of the total in-patients were cured, and 7,287 were improved.

In the Orthopedic Department last year, of the 1,648 in-patients, [illegible] were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 3 knock-knees, 1[illegible] bow-legs, 62 club feet, 3 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 4 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1913, the Surgical Apparatus Shop manufactured 427 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 38 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Feet and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Kingston Showing Growth.

That Kingston is growing, and growing rapidly, is illustrated by the big increase in the number of building permits taken out for the erection of dwellings this year as compared with a few years ago. An increase of approximately 150 per cent. is shown in the last four years. This year to date there have been 168 building permits taken out, while in 1910 for the whole year there were only 70 dwellings built.

Gasoline Import.

As showing the immense increase in the numbers of automobiles, motor boats and agricultural machinery using gasoline fuel, the value of the import of gasoline has increased from $1,061,015 in 1912 to $5,366,064 in 1913.

Shed Your Light.

Talents are not wasted in a narrow sphere. Your lamp would add but little to the great glow that illumines the world, but it may fill with light a home that without it would be in darkness.

Be not hurried away by excitement, but say, "Semblance, let me see who you are and what you represent."—Epictetus.

Our Point of View

We have no respect for a liar, but neither do we care a great deal for the man who rushes to tell the truth when he knows it is going to hurt.

It is rather unpleasant to be told that electric heating will soon become commercially practicable, not because of the lowering of its cost to that of coal heating, but through the increase of the cost of coal heating to that of electric heating.

It is a noble fight that Godfre Langlois is waging in Quebec for improvement of the public school system. One statement which he has made is, if true, alone sufficient to justify his attitude. He asserts that seven-eighths of the public school children in Quebec quit school for good at the age of ten.

The latest estimates of the cost of the Balkan wars are that 346,000 men were killed or wounded, and that its cost was £246,000. As to comparisons, the list is a long one, but here are a few comparisons: Crimean war: casualties, 785,000; cost £340,000,000. American civil war: casualties, 800,000; cost £1,400,000,000. Franco-German war: casualties, 853,000; cost, £444,000,000. South African war: casualties, 63,700; cost, £270,000,000. Russo-Japanese war: casualties, 486,000; cost, £502,000,000.

ASSESSMENT ANOMALIES

The Council of the town of Aylmer has recently been having a good deal of unpleasant discussion over its assessment rolls, without getting any nearer a solution. It was stated that a valuable farm containing one hundred acres of excellent soil, located within two miles from the town hall, was valued at three thousand dollars last year. From this there has been sold twenty-five acres for thirteen thousand dollars, and the greater part of these fifty-five acres [illegible] "farm to town lots, but none of them land" have been subdivided [illegible] yet been resold. In the new assessment roll, the remaining seventy-five acres of this valuable farm is assessed at two thousand dollars, or about one-twentieth of its actual value, while the twenty-five acres which were sold from it less than a year ago for thirteen thousand dollars, is assessed in the new roll at six thousand dollars.

Peterborough has somewhat similar conditions, it is said.

How to Ascertain If You Have Catarrh

Look for Symptoms of This Treacherous Disease in the Following List.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice husky?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears roar and buzz?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or bronchial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catarrhozone," a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

"No one can know better than I the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P.Q. "I had for years a stubborn case of bronchial catarrh, ear noises, headache, sore eyes, stopped-up nose and throat. It affected my appetite and made my breath rank. Catarrhozone cured quickly."

The dollar outfit last two months, and is guaranteed; smaller size 50c., sample size, 25c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

CANADA'S STRONG POSITION

The position of Canada in the money market of England is as strong as ever for those who wish to do legitimate business. This is shown eloquently by the confidence shown in government bonds by the small English investors. Annual returns show that the funded debt of the Dominion is practically all held in London, England. The funded debt of Canada payable in London amounts to nearly two hundred and sixty millions of dollars, according to the financial statement of October 30th. The same statement shows the funded debt payable in Canada to be two and a quarter millions. But on November 1st the government paid off about a million and a half of this, being the amount of a domestic loan at four per cent. raised in 1883. This reduces the funded debt payable in Canada to about three quarters of a million only, consisting of savings bank stock issued many years ago. The only borrowing of the government in Canada is represented by the deposits in the government and post office savings banks, amounting to $55,450,000, and which, of course, differs from funded debt in that it may be recalled by the depositors at any time.

STRANGE ACCOMPLISHMENT

The criminal law of England was formerly marked by indiscriminating severity. Theft of an article valued above 10 shillings was punished with death. In writing about "Sweet Hampstead and its Associations" Mrs. White recalls a pleasant thing of Lord Mansfield, who, as a rule, leaned to the side of mercy. It was Lord Mansfield who directed a jury to find a stolen trinket less in value than 10 shillings in order that the thief might escape capital punishment. To this the jeweler who prosecuted demurred, asserting that the fashion of the thing had cost him twice that money.

"Gentlemen," replied the judge, with grave solemnity, "we ourselves stand in need of mercy. Let us not hang a man for the fashion's sake!"

MR. SHOOK AS COMMISSIONER

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I saw in your paper of yesterday that Mr. J. C. Shook is a possible candidate for the Water Commissionership. I would like to say Mr. Editor, that in all this city there is possibly not a man more conversant with power and water conditions than Mr. Shook. His private and public life have been characterized by honesty and intelligence. My vote goes for Mr. Shook should he stand.

THE PRICE OF COAL

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would call the attention of the public to the fact that a local coal combine apparently exists, and I would therefore suggest that steps be taken to establish a municipal fuel yard. I see that coal that sells from six to seven dollars in Toronto, is placed on the market here at $7.50 to $8.50. Poor people are thus being forced to pay more than what constitutes a reasonable profit.

James B. Black.

WHY SUCH DIFFERENCE?

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Port Hope Guide of last Saturday contains the advertisement of G. N. Patterson, of that town, who advertises furnace coal at $6.50 per ton. Here we pay $8.50. Oh, no, there is no coal combine in Peterborough! Of course, by a singular coincidence, every few months all the local coal dealers advertise, on the same day, a unanimous and exactly equal rise in price. There is no coal combine in Peterborough! Oh, no! The simultaneous raise in price is only an undesigned coincidence! Rats!

Anti-Trust.

A WINTER CARNIVAL

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—I would like to offer a suggestion that I think, if acted on, bring a good many strangers to the city. That is why should not Peterborough hold a winter carnival? If a little town like Lindsay can make a success of such an affair, why not Peterborough.

THE LITTLE RED SCHOOL-HOUSE

A Plea to Have the Public School Thrown Open to the People

Open the schoolhouse doors
And keep them open wide,
Let the schoolhouse serve us as a meeting place
For all of the countryside,
A temple of true democracy
Where Liberty may abide!

Open the school house doors
And let the people in:
Let them in to sing or dance,
Where rich and poor are kin,
Let them in when they congregate
To battle with wrong and sin.

Open the schoolhouse doors
And throw away the key,
Let this be the house of the people's soul
Which keeps the nation free—
Not merely a hall where the children learn
To murmur their A. B. C.

Open the schoolhouse doors
And let in the eager throng,
That the spirit of Truth may spread its light
And the spirit of Love be strong.
Open the schoolhouse doors—
They have been closed too long!

AN EQUINE JOKER

The late J. Q. A. Ward, the sculptor, found great diversion in watching the tricks and peculiarities of the horses which served as models for some of his equine studies. He made friends with them all, and he was a good friend to them.

"The only horse humorist that I have had experience with," Mr. Ward is quoted as saying, "was of thoroughbred blood, and he was a real joker. That was Lee, a horse of the blood of the [illegible] Lexington.

"Lee was of a splendid type. He stood for me for much of my early work. Somehow he discovered that a table on which I worked was easily shaken. It was a board on trestles so arranged that the position of the board might be altered to almost any angle. When Lee saw I was busiest he would slide slowly and silently to the side of the table and turn his head to have a good look at [illegible] as [illegible] jostled the table with his shoulder or hip. It was amusing at first, but it sometimes hampered me, and I thought I would try a joke in return.

"Lee had a place at the table [illegible] he invariably approached, and when he struck it always turned on the same [illegible]. Lee was not conscious when I placed my weapon, with the pointed [illegible] half an inch [illegible] over the edge of the table, and [illegible] the other end against a [illegible].

"I had not long to wait before Lee [illegible] came up, and I thought I [illegible] [illegible] in his eye. He [illegible] his [illegible] and then when I [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]. He [illegible] long and [illegible] at me, but [illegible] his years of duty [illegible] [illegible] that day."

SOCIALIST GROWTH IN ITALY ALARMING

Rome Dec. 13.—The recent socialistic anti-dynastic outbreak in the Italian Parliament has caused much comment and no little concern in court and Government circles. The steady growth of socialism in Italy of recent years has caused no particular alarm, and it was supposed to be entirely in [illegible] limits. That in the recent [illegible] of deputies appointed were included four prominent socialists is evidence of this feeling. But the cry of the socialist deputies of "Down with the House of Savoy!" indicates an new phase of the socialist movement.

There is no particular feeling against the House of Savoy. On the contrary, King Victor and Queen Elena are personally very popular among all classes. It is the general impression that the influence of Italians who have resided for a long time in America, and who have returned home has promoted the socialistic organization with republican ideas, and it is feared that this trend will be more marked in the future.

No Mourner Left.

"I ate a worm," said the little tot in the kindergarten.

The teacher, thinking that perhaps the child had really done such a thing, protested warmly over the undesirability of the proceeding. "Why, just think," she said as a final argument, "how badly the mamma worm felt to have her little baby eaten up."

"I ate she's mamma, too," was the triumphant rejoiner that proved too much for the teacher.

A Generous Bequest.

One of the briefest and queerest wills on record is that of an old farmer who, though reputed to be rich, died penniless. His will ran: "In the name of God, amen. There's only one thing I leave—I leave the earth. My relations have always wanted that. They can have it."

HOME HEALTH CLUB

DR. DAVID H. REEDER.
Chicago, Ill.

HOW DID YOU GET IT? Some time ago I told you of disease carriers; the human kind, I mean, for by the term carriers we understand a person who carries the germs of a disease without having any signs or symptoms of the disease himself. Thus a person may have Diphtheria bacilli in the nose and throat, germs of pneumonia in the mouth, typhoid bacilli, or the germs of cholera or the hookworm in their intestinal tract, without showing manifestations of the disease.

So-called germ "carriers" are capable of infecting others, who will have the active symptoms. Disease carriers are a public danger, because they are usually not discovered until the mischief has been done and they have spread the disease. It is only recently that attention has been attracted to this class of disease spreaders, and it has been found that there are persons capable of spreading these infectious disease germs for years.

Only recently there appeared among the patrons of a certain restaurant in Chicago, over forty cases of typhoid fever. The water was tested and found free from pollution, also the milk, butter, and all other food supplies, but the final analysis discovered a young woman washing dishes who had recently come from St. Louis. She had what is called by many "Walking typhoid." She was a carrier and was scattering the disease on everything she handled. The reason why all the patrons who got the disease germs did not contract the disease was that their powers of resistance was greater. They were in comparatively perfect health, digestion and elimination in good order.

In another part of the city at about the same time, the patrons of a certain milkman were stricken with the same disease. His place was inspected and found sanitary, but a more careful investigation proved that the man himself was a "carrier."

From many of the animals, particularly domesticated animals, man contracts a number of infections. Thus we contract rabies from the dog, plague from the rat, glanders from the horse, trichina from the hogs, anthrax from cattle, malta fever from goats, foot and mouth diseases from cattle, tuberculosis, in part from cattle, tapeworm and other animal parasites from meat of fish, fowl and mammals. Various skin parasites are also contracted from lower animals, as ringworm from cats, fleas from dogs, etc. The number of diseases and the extent of their ravages are, however much less than those contracted from man himself.

Now what's to be done about it, we can swat the flies, kill the cats, rats and mice, and dispose of diseased domestic animals in the same way, but what shall we do with "Human Carriers?" We may not kill them and no law justifies their detention or isolation. We can refuse to employ them, but they must eat and most of them want to work. Some of them will at once use every precaution against spreading the disease and others will do nothing. One carrier, a strong, rugged woman was confined several months by the authorities, but they were finally forced to liberate her and she was just as much a carrier as ever, because no rational treatment had been applied that was effective in overcoming the germs, although the means are simple and practical and readily available everywhere.

I will venture the assertion that there is not a "carrier" among the thousands of Home Health Club members in any part of the world.

CLUB NOTES

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if same are addressed to Home Health Club, [illegible] Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

Dear Doctor:—It has been some time since I last wrote you, but I have been steadily gaining and now have gone back doing my own work, including the washing, and think I feel just as well as I ever did in my life. I do not think it necessary to continue treatment any more than drinking the buttermilk and taking the lemon and hot water in the morning. My weight remains the same and I feel fine. I now want to thank you most heartily for what you have done for me. Your mode of treatment is so simple that a child could follow it.—Mrs. J. D.

Looking back some months when you first commenced with the treatment, I stated it was my opinion that just as soon as your weight has been increased to a normal point the irregularities, including indigestion and nervousness would disappear. My prediction came true and I am glad that you are now perfectly well again. It required some labor on your part to follow my dietetic instructions, but it certainly has paid you to do so, and it should encourage others to proceed along similar lines. The methods I advocate are natural, they are safe and will have the desired effect in every case where they are intelligently used.

Dear Doctor:—What is the cause of nose bleed? Is the blood too thick or too thin, or is it an indication of weakness? [illegible] plexy. Very often, however, it is so profuse that it causes much weakness. Some people are especially addicted to nose bleed, and they are not well and need treatment. They should not live at a high altitude where the atmosphere is light and the blood vessels are dilated and readily burst. The application of cold water over the nose and back of ears is often sufficient. In many instances the plugging up of the nostrils with cotton will stop the flow. Pressing firmly upon the artery in the temple; holding the head back; or placing in the nostrils finely minced salt dried beef; injecting a little ice water containing a little salt are all often of much value. Remember that one should never blow the nose under these conditions.

[illegible]

Nosebleed may be caused by lack of blood, and in such conditions energetic measures should be adopted so as to prevent frequent attacks. In your case, however, I do not think it is the cause. Am rather inclined to think that it is due to the high altitude where you live. Next time you write tell me how much you weigh, your height, age, etc. As your general health is good there is no cause for alarm, however.

DAILY SHORT STORY

A MEDIEVAL LOVE AFFAIR

By MARGARET L. BLISS

Copyright by American Press Association, 1913.

One morning some three centuries ago, when Florence, Italy, ruled by Duke Cosimo de Medici, was divided among a number of powerful families, the Duchess Eleonora, attended by courtiers, was driven from the Pitti palace across the bridge called the Ponte Vecchio, spanning the river Arno, into the main part of the city. Beside the duchess sat a young girl noted especially for her fair complexion and golden hair. From an upper window overlooking the bridge a young man looked down on the cavalcade. About stood a crowd of persons dividing their glances between the young man and the young girl beside the duchess. His eyes were riveted on her, while she glanced up at him. They were known to be lovers, all Florence sympathized with them, and the crowd had collected to observe this lovers' look that passed between them.

The girl was Maddalena, the daughter of Ferugio Vettori, surnamed "the light haired," and it was from him that his daughter inherited her locks of gold as well as an immense fortune. The mother of Maddalena when widowed married Pietro Salviati and, in order to keep her fortune in the family, the stepfather betrothed her when still a child to his son by a former marriage. But this young man was killed in battle.

When Maddalena came to a marriageable age a love affair came about between her and Lodovico Capponi, who owned a villa in the country adjoining one of her own. It was a grand passion on both sides, and the flame was fanned by opposition. Maddalena's stepfather, still bent on keeping his fortune in his own family, persuaded Duke Cosimo to forbid the marriage. Despite her own, her mother's and her lover's protests and entreaties the girl was placed in a convent.

Lodovico was a fiery young man, and it was hoped by the stepfather that he would commit some act of violence which would afford an excuse to banish him, lock him up or otherwise dispose of him. But the lover displayed more self control than had been expected and refused to give his enemy the coveted opportunity.

Maddalena's mother told the story of her daughter's love and misfortunes to the duchess and succeeded in interesting her. The affair was known to all Florentines, who were a poetic and artistic people easily moved by a story of love. Moreover, they feared that if the duke was able to prevent this marriage he would prevent others. Therefore, though all the power to keep the lovers apart was on one side, all the sympathy was on the other.

The duchess finally succeeded in persuading her husband to permit her to invite Maddalena to visit her for a few days at the palace. Instead of days she remained months. But the struggle to compel her to resign her lover was not given up. Indeed, her invitation came in order to unite her with another suitor. By the duke's order Lodovico was never mentioned except in contempt, while [illegible] di [illegible], a favorite of the duke, was always spoken of with the highest praise.

Lodovico, not being permitted to visit the girl he loved, rented a house overlooking the Ponte Vecchio, from which he could look down upon her and receive her return glance whenever she crossed the bridge with the duchess.

It was one of these crossings that has been described at the opening of this story, a scene that would not likely have happened anywhere except in the city of the mediaeval Italian poets and painters where passion and worship [illegible] today, traversed daily by thousands of Florentines and tourists.

Perhaps no incident in the history of Florence can so well express the [illegible] people and this. Fancy a crowd at the entrance of a park in an American city, Washington for instance, waiting to see an heiress driven out with the president's wife, her lover standing at the window of a house [illegible] his heiress go by. [illegible]

Whether it was that the duke, who [illegible] through friendship for him, found that he was playing a losing game for himself, becoming unpopular, or whether he met an undercurrent of opposition from those prominent families who feared his power to interfere in their own affairs, is not recorded, but in any event his opposition suddenly collapsed. One morning at daylight an old woman appeared at Lodovico's bedside and awakened him with some astonishing and delightful news. She bore a message from the duchess. Lodovico was summoned to the palace to take Maddalena away with him and prepare for an immediate marriage.

The lover bounded out of bed and began the preparations at once, going as soon as he was dressed to the palace. All Florence was interested in the wedding, which took place at the house from which the lover had so often looked down on his mistress, but since it was not large enough the piazza on which it stood was inclosed for a ballroom.

AUTO INTOXICATION

Overeating Turns Our Bodies Into Breweries of Poisons

Self-poisoning is one of the most common disorders with which people are afflicted and it expresses itself in so many different ways that, in order to describe them all without too much trouble, it was auto-intoxication.

Self-poisoning is caused almost wholly by wrong eating, usually eating too much, but in many cases, by eating several things at the same meal that are chemically inharmonious.

Some of the symptoms of self-poisoning are anaemia, languor, that tired feeling, mental dullness, headaches and a lack of interest in things and a general falling below mental and physical par.

When we take more food into the stomach than the body can use, Nature's first method to get rid of it is to decompose it. This produces what is called superacidity, or fermentation. On account of the excess of acid, food is forced from the stomach too quickly, and usually congests and ferments in the upper intestines.

This condition produces carbon-dioxide, carbon-monoxide and sometimes toxic poisons. In cases of intestinal congestion, these poisons are absorbed into the blood and become a source of a great deal of trouble.

If we are blessed with good digestion, and can assimilate more food than the body can use, the excess passes into the circulation, and is stored up, either in the form of fat or it undergoes decomposition and is changed into alcohol and other poisons. This is one of the plans provident Nature adopts to keep us from suiciding, and is also where the word auto-intoxication gets its name.

The remedy for auto-intoxication is a moderate quantity of simple food, copious water drinking, and the total elimination of all stimulating and sedative articles such as coffee, tobacco, liquor and drugs of all kinds.

No greater mistake can be made than to seek a remedy in drugs or take stimulants, where one is anaemic or "run down." By this process we merely throw an additional poison upon the self-poisoned body.

It is not meant that all drugs are bad, but that the theory of correcting a disorder without removing its cause violate the greatest law of physics.

The human body, while the most complicated, is the toughest piece of mechanism known to the scientific world. It will adjust itself to more unnatural things than any other piece of living matter known, and while Nature is exacting, she is at the same time forgiving, and, if given a half chance, will keep the biped man in a fair state of health, therefore, the more we conform to natural laws the more bodily ease we will enjoy, and the more we violate the natural laws the more disease we will be afflicted with.

A Long Scold.

Brewster, who was returning late from his club, was received by his wife on entering the bedroom with a well rehearsed curtain lecture. Fortunately he had not turned up the gas, and as the door was not closed he quietly slipped out and rejoined his friends at the club. Two hours later he again wended his way home and picked up his cue on reaching the bedroom door.

"H'm! She didn't notice it!" said he, chuckling to himself. "She's still scolding!"—Glasgow Herald.

MILK! MILK!
How many have become poor by buying inferior articles because they are cheap? This is false economy. The same applies to milk as well as any other commodity. Our milk costs a little more than other milk but the "quality" is there and it is cheaper in the end. Try it and find out. Many tell us they have proven this fact.

New Institution Is To Be Opened Soon After New Year's.

One glance into the Egyptian room of the new Royal Ontario Museum, which will be opened to the public shortly after the turn of the year, is sufficient to interpret the phrase in the book of Exodus: "Against all the gods of Egypt." To see a number of these various gods [illegible] articles for the enlightened [illegible] of a twentieth century city and to see something of the mode of life in those far-off days is to secure a vivid glimpse into the depths of the past. But what is a great museum for if not to record the activities of past man in his endeavors to add to his material comfort on the one side, and his methods of defence and offence on the other side, with something of his higher and religious tendencies interspersed?

But the riches of the museum date further yet, for there are things here which belong to prehistoric times and that is anything [illegible] B.C. What has the museum to offer from these remote times? There are the remains of a man who lived and toiled in southeastern Africa before the world had known how to construct elaborate burial caskets. When [illegible] the [illegible] wrapped the corpse in a rude grass mat and in this condition he is to be seen to-day in our new museum.

Close by the Egyptian room there are several cases of Roman camp equipment and the frying pans and many predecessors of our present day pots and pans, to say nothing of door locks and hinges, are elaborately carved. It is interesting to note from the same inscriptions that much of this Roman material has been unearthed in Upper Egypt, belonging in all probability to [illegible] expedition.

A very fine model of the Acropolis and Mars Hill is presented to view and these structures form a striking contrast to the model of houses used by the poorer class of Egyptian peasants.

Leaving the room where the relics of these past empires are stored we come on representative collections of later peoples such as the Venetians and mediaeval England.

Sir Henry Pellatt has placed his famous collection of armor and weapons within the building and the [illegible] portion of a large room is devoted to the display of these articles.

The manner in which man has expended his energies on devices to murder and mutilate his fellows is almost hideous.

The forerunner of the modern automatic pistol is clearly seen in the great ponderous guns which are equipped with many barrels and firing mechanism. Then on the other side the ingenuity expended to offset the terrors of these and other weapons is extremely interesting and includes almost everything from [illegible] of armor upwards.

The students of ethnology, the comparison of the barbarous nations and the civilized, is of great benefit, for one may see the relics of a people who have stood still for centuries contrasted with a race whose ideas, if not ideals, have slowly evolved in the years they have [illegible].

The Royal Ontario Museum has been seeking a home for some years and now that the Provincial Government and the University have settled on this magnificent home [illegible] contents, Toronto undoubtedly is in possession of one of the finest [illegible] of its class in America. The [illegible] are devoted to exhibits of [illegible] interest, dealing with rocks, minerals, crystals and fossils.

Choosing the Cuspidors.

Rev. Alexander MacGillivray, the well-known Presbyterian minister in Toronto, is credited as being the relator of an amusing story concerning an actual incident in a Canadian kirk.

It seems that in this particular church there are some careless young fellows who got into the bad habit of expectorating on the floor. The nuisance had continued for some time when the pastor's patience finally came to the breaking point.

He attended a meeting of the Church Session and explained the situation to the [illegible] of the kirk.

"I am afraid if this expectoration continues we will have to have a couple of cuspidors," said he.

[illegible] one of the aforesaid [illegible], and strongly supported that immediate action should be taken on the request of the minister.

"I move," said he, "that we appoint Duncan [illegible] and Sandy Campbell as cuspidors."—Canadian Courier.

[illegible]

[illegible], who used to be [illegible] in the [illegible], tells a story of a sham fight at a militia camp down east.

One of the infantry regiments had been sent out along a country road where they were supposed to be lying in ambush awaiting the approach of the enemy.

Nothing happened, however, and some of the men began to amuse themselves by firing off their blank ammunition.

"Here, that won't do," exclaimed one of the rural officers, "we're supposed to be lying here in ambush."

A Western Landmark.

Another historical spot in western Canada has recently been located and marked. It is in the Province of Saskatchewan, and in the constituency of Pelly, situated about three miles north of the town of Pelly, on the C.N.R. The location is on the site of the old headquarters of the Mounted Police, known as Fort Livingstone, or Swan River Barracks, and in the seventies was an important point in the West. It was here that the first session of the first Northwest Council was held, commencing on March 8, 1877, presided over by Hon. David Laird, who was Lieutenant-Governor of the Northwest Territories at that time. The members of that historic Council were: Col. Jas. F. Macleod, Commissioner of Mounted Police; Hugh Richardson, Stipendiary Magistrate; Mathew Ryan, Stipendiary Magistrate. At that time there were no settlers, [illegible] were only being [illegible] the far west. In 1878 the headquarters of the post were moved about 150 miles south, where the men put up new log buildings. In 1884 the country around Swan River was swept with prairie fire, to which the old barracks fell a prey.

Sergeant-Major Under General French

Veteran of Boer War Who Lost Health on the Veldt Tells Experience.

Good Advice for All Who Have Indigestion or Stomach Disorders.

In his home at Weldongrove, N.S., no one is better known than Sergt.-Major Green, late of the 4th Queen's Own Hussars. Speaking of the ill-effects of a campaign upon a man's constitution, the Sergt.-Major writes: "I served under General French during the late Boer war, in the capacity of Sergt.-Major. It was perhaps owing to a continued diet of bully beef, hard tack and bad water, but at any rate my stomach entirely gave out. I was in such a stage that I could eat nothing without the greatest suffering. The army doctors did not help me much, and since leaving the service I have been very miserable. Some few months ago a friend told me he had been a great sufferer from indigestion until he tried Dr. Hamilton's Pills; they cured him. I confess it was without much faith I bought a box, but the first dose made me feel better than I had been for a long time. Dr. Hamilton's Pills completely cured, and now I can eat everything and anything. I have recommended them to others and in every case the result has been similar to mine."

Quick, sure results attend the use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They cure disorders of the stomach, correct indigestion, make you feel uplifted and strengthened. To renew or maintain health, Dr. Hamilton's Pills always prove a good prescription. 25c. per box, five boxes for $1.00, all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

Mr. Henry, superintendent of the Children's Aid Shelter, had a chat with The Times on Saturday. This efficient official reminded our scribe that on Christmas Eve the usual Xmas tree will be provided for the little wards of the city. Whilst neither the association nor Mr. Henry ask any direct contribution towards the Christmas tree, in so commendable a charity, the foregoing should be "a nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse."

Judgment Was Reserved.

At Saturday's police court Percy Holland and Lavergne Killenbeck were charged with stealing $14 from W. Ireland. They elected for summary trial, and pleaded not guilty. Wilfred Ireland, in the box said, to Mr. Gordon, acting in place of Mr. Wood for the prosecution, he and the prisoners were together on Hunter street. Ald. Anderson is going to stand for re-election in East City.

Christmas trees were an abundant commodity on Saturday's market.

A number of young men had a hockey practice on the canal ice yesterday.

Mr. O'Leary, bridge tender of the Chemong Lake floating bridge, is very ill.

Lindsay is to have a four team town hockey league, this winter, instead of six as heretofore.

Don't put anything in your boxes, tubs, pails or other receptacles along with ashes for the garbage collectors.

A very pleasing musical recital was held Saturday afternoon in the Green Music Company's warehouse.

Mr. Wallace Nicholls, son of Mr. W. Nicholls of Bridgenorth, who was recently shot in the neck, is again able to be out. Dr. Sutton has been in attendance.

Chemong Lake is now completely frozen over. The bridge is almost impassible owing to ice being pushed up and freezing.

His Honor Judge Edmison will give his decision today on the Norwood liquor case against a hotelkeeper named King.

The phenomena of the sun will be explained by Rev. Dr. Marsh to-morrow evening in the Collegiate Institute.

Mr. Geo. Ball, the local tailor, on Saturday told The Times he has intended to become a candidate for Water Commissioner.

At Saturday's police court, John Weins of Norwood pleaded guilty to having been drunk in a public place. He was fined $2.

Col. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, is advocating the training of students of Canada for military purposes. He is, very rightly "teaching the young idea how to shoot."

Merchants on William street, Lindsay, are kicking because, for self-advertising, the town put all the new magnetite lamps on Kent street.

At Saturday's police court Leslie Howden pleaded guilty to having been drunk whilst in charge of a horse and rig. He was fined $5 and $3.75 costs.

The police court on Saturday was literally crammed with spectators; i.e., behind the bar or "dead line."

At Saturday's police court a local man was put on the blacklist.

The contractors engaged in the work of constructing the new C.P.R. bridge across the Otonabee River expect to have the structure completed by Christmas.

A well worded appeal for assistance for the Lindsay Salvation Army Band is printed in the press of that town. This is a hint worthy of emulation here.

ACTRESS INCOME TAX CASE IS THROWN OUT OF COURT

Chicago, Dec. 13.—The suit to test the income tax law was thrown out of the United States district court here today by Judge K. M. Landis, who decided that he had no jurisdiction.

The effect of this decision, which does not involve the constitutionality or unconstitutionality of the law, is to send the case direct to the supreme court of the United States.

Washington, Dec. 15.—Consideration of the case by the supreme court of the United States would be limited to the question of jurisdiction passed upon by Judge Landis and would not involve the constitutionality of the income tax.

GARMENT WORKERS DECLINE TO JOIN IN ARBITRATION

The Anti-Dynasty Outbreaks Have Caused Feeling of Apprehension.

Philadelphia, Dec. 14.—The garment manufacturers whose employes are on strike today refused to take up arbitration with Ethelbert Stewart, statistician of the Federal Department of Labor, sent here by Secretary Wilson as peacemaker. Mr. Stewart conferred with the manufacturers for several hours.

The strike has been in force for twenty-two weeks and has caused much disorder. Two men involved in the strike have been shot and killed since the inauguration of the strike. The workers demand higher wages and better working conditions.

TELLS THE JURY ABOUT THE SALE OF POISON

New York, Dec. 14.—Telegraph and express records showing how cocaine in wholesale quantities has been shipped into New York to supply the illegal traffic in the poisonous drug were presented to the grand jury today.

Assistant District Attorney F. H. Wilmot has returned from Memphis, with corroborative proof that reveals the transactions between the New York cocaine ring and the middlemen who buy direct from the manufacturers.

"I found that one man in Memphis has shipped approximately $50,000 worth of cocaine into New York in the last three months," said Wilmot. "That individual would now be under arrest had he not fled. I intend, however, to push the prosecution and I am satisfied we will be able to involve one of the biggest manufacturers of the drug in the United States.

GRANGES DIVIDE ON SUFFRAGE IDEA

Boston, Dec. 13.—Opposition to woman suffrage was declared by the Massachusetts state grange today at the closing session of its forty-first annual convention. The secretary's report of a referendum vote among the members showing a majority oppose to granting the vote to women, was adopted.

In direct opposition to the attitude assumed by the national grange at its recent convention in Manchester, N.H., the state grange adopted resolutions commending Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

Rutland, Vt., Dec. 13.—A resolution favoring the extension of suffrage to women was adopted at the state grange convention to-day.

MAN'S WILL POWER

In an entertaining account of a dinner party at Prince Bismarck's Berlin residence which is given in the recollections of the Livonian [illegible] Eckhardt the following, which was a part of the table talk, shows the host in a new light: The conversation had turned on Bismarck's early days at Frankfort, and Eckhardt asked whether at the table d'hote of the Hotel d'Angleterre he had ever met Schopenhauer. "No," said Bismarck; "he had no use for me nor I for him. Moreover, I have never had time or desire to occupy myself with philosophy. While I was a student Schopenhauer was still unknown. I know absolutely nothing about his system."

Another guest, an admirer of Schopenhauer, then joined enthusiastically in the conversation and explained that the philosopher's great merit consisted in the discovery of the fact that will power was the indestructible essence of the mind of man and that intelligence was only of secondary importance. "That may very well be true," said Prince Bismarck, "at least as far as I am concerned, for I have often noticed that my will had already come to a decision while my mind had not yet finished thinking about the same subject."

VENETIAN WOMEN.

The Whims of Fashion Hold No Terrors For Them.

The women of Venice are absolutely free from the rule which Dame Fashion exercises over their sisters elsewhere. They care nothing for modes. With them the length of the skirt remains always the same, neither short nor long, and they always wear plainly made dark dresses, black stockings and the heelless slippers of the east. Hats are unknown.

The universal outdoor wrap for all ages and all sizes is the black shawl, with a deep silken fringe. It is folded with a short point above and a long one below, and sometimes it envelops the figure from head to foot. It is never fastened at the throat, and when it slips off it is gathered up with one outstretched arm, which makes the spectator think of a big bird stretching its wing.

In their attire the women of Venice are independent, only wearing local clothing, but with feminine inconsistency they are thoroughly up to date in the matter of hairdressing, the style of their coiffures changing from time to time, according to the vogue of the moment in London and Paris.

Identified.

William M. Chase, the artist, was a picturesque figure, affecting in clothes that had a certain originality, though they conformed more or less to the prevailing fashion. On one occasion Chase on his way home stopped into a little wine shop and ordered a jug of claret of a special brand sent to his house. The lad who brought it came to the front door an hour afterward, when the artist had already arrived. "Some wine," he said curtly. The maid, knowing there was yet plenty in the cellar and believing the lad had made a mistake, said she was sure it was not for that house and for the boy to remember the name of the [illegible] who ordered it. The boy [illegible] [illegible]

THE WIDOW OF ASTOR WOULD EVADE PROPERTY TAX

New York, Dec. 15.—Mrs. Madeleine Talmage Force Astor, widow of John Jacob Astor, has directed her attorneys to try her a state tax of $39,342 upon $1,604,119 of property. For this purpose the attorneys will appear before Surrogate Cohalan tomorrow and try to get him to send the report in Astor estate back to the appraiser for reappraisal.

In an ante-nuptial agreement, Mrs. Astor was given a certain share in real property in West Thirty-fourth street and it is this property that has been taxed. She contends that, as the property came to her under the ante-nuptial agreement and not under the will of her husband, it is exempt from an inheritance tax.

MacMahon's Epigram.

When Marshal MacMahon in the Crimean campaign took the Malakoff by storm and wrote his celebrated dispatch, "J'y suis; j'y reste" ("Here I am; here I stay"), these words made him famous all over the world. Yet his friends said that the worthy soldier had written them in the most matter of fact manner, with no thought of phrase making. The most surprised person over the success of this epigram was MacMahon himself.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels when it is loosened, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite, without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. [illegible] have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and [illegible] the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4080, 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

FREE WHEAT IS DEMAND OF WEST; MEN WILL INTERVIEW PREMIER

Heads of Manitoba and Saskatchewan Grain Growers, of United Farmers of Alberta, and of Ontario Grange Meet in Capital

Ottawa, Dec. 15.—Another invasion of Ottawa by the farmers of Canada took place to-day, when the advance guard of a deputation representing the Dominion Council of Agriculture arrived to interview Premier Borden and the members of the Government.

The deputation will present these demands to the Government:

1.—Free Wheat. They will ask the Government to take advantage of the countervailing offer in the new Underwood tariff of free wheat.

2.—An increase in the British preference from 33 to 50 per cent.

3.—Free agricultural implements.

The deputation of twelve represents the Grange of Ontario, the Manitoba Grain Growers' Association, the Saskatchewan Grain Growers' Association, and the United Farmers of Alberta. A conference of the delegates will be held to-day, when they will draft a memorial to present to Premier Borden.

Coon-Coated Brigade.

The first arrival were the coon-coated brigade from the West: F. W. Green and J. A. Maharg, of Moose Jaw; C. F. Fleet and E. Carswell, of Red Deer; Rice Sheppard of Edmonton; M. C. Henders, of Culross, Manitoba; [illegible] McEwin of Drayton, Ont., and W. C. Wood, of Brantford.

The first demand is for free wheat. They want the Government to take advantage of the offer contained in the new American Underwood tariff. There is a duty of ten cents a bushel on wheat, except to such countries as admit American wheat and wheat products. This means that Canada would have to admit American flour free and open Canadian mills to the competition of the big American companies.

Renounce Catholic Faith

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 15.—Renouncing his faith in the Roman Catholic Church and also his title as bishop in the National Catholic Church of America, which he had organized here after his controversy with Bishop H. J. Alerding, of Fort Wayne, Rev. Victor Von Kubinyi and his entire congregation of more than 200 marched bareheaded into St. James Episcopal Church, of this city, and embraced the Episcopal faith. Kubinyi was immediately ordained an Episcopalian rector.

MRS PANKHURST TAKEN IN ON ARRIVAL FROM PARIS

Dover, Eng., Dec. 15.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst who left Paris to-day when her ticket of leave under the cat and mouse Act expired, was re-arrested on her arrival here this evening.

Policemen boarded the train and placed the militant leader under arrest.

Mrs. Pankhurst's arrest was achieved with little opposition excepting by Mrs. Pankhurst and her personal companion, at Dover Town, just outside this city. A dozen Scotland Yard detectives were present and all accompanied the militant leader to the Victoria Station in London and thence to Holloway jail, where Mrs. Pankhurst immediately declared a hunger strike.

Suffragettes declared they will picket the jail until Mrs. Pankhurst is again released.

Mrs. Pankhurst's arrest came as a result of her declaration in Paris that she would speak at Monday's suffragette meeting in London.

Boat Just Naturally Sank.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 15.—The Mississippi River steamer Shiloh, operated by the Delta Navigation Company, sank while tied to the Memphis wharf early this morning. All the passengers left the boat and the crew reached the shore in safety. Officials of the Packet Company are unable to assign a reason for the sinking of the boat. She was valued at $45,000.

MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL TO BOLT; FORM A THIRD PARTY

London, Dec. 15.—The Liverpool Courier which is often well informed on inner political movements, gives prominence to-day to an intrigue against Mr. Winston Churchill, which is alleged to be proceeding amongst the Liberal party. The Courier points out how several of the most important Ministerial papers have recently shown a hostile attitude towards Mr. Churchill, and [illegible] he will eventually leave the Ministry and form an independent following.

Wreck Victim Identified.

Goderich, Dec. 15.—One of the four unidentified bodies from the steamer Carruthers buried two weeks [illegible] has been identified as that of John Huber, of Canton, Ohio.

And Some Cannot

Drink Tea and Coffee Without Dangerous Results

But if you intend to win out in life you will need a clearer head and steadier nerves than the tea or coffee drinker usually has.

Tea and Coffee contain caffeine, a subtle, poisonous drug, and the use of either as a daily routine beverage causes more or less disturbance of nerves, heart, stomach, liver or some other organ. This may not show for a time, but the drug, caffeine (from 1½ to 3 grains to the cup) is a cumulative poison, and, for most persons, a day of reckoning will surely come.

But why wait until Nature drives home her arguments against tea and coffee? Try this easy test—quit tea and coffee for 10 days and try POSTUM.

After a few days the habit-forming drug, caffeine, will be eliminated from the system, and the gradual return to old-time comfort will be the best evidence that tea and coffee were "getting you."

There's no headache or pains of any kind in Postum. It is a pure food-drink, made only of choice wheat and a little New Orleans molasses, and is absolutely free from caffeine or any other drug.

Postum now comes in two forms.

Regular Postum—must be well boiled to bring out its delicious flavour and food value.

Instant Postum—(the new form)—is a soluble powder. A spoonful stirred in a cup of hot water, with sugar and cream added, makes a perfect cup, instantly.

The person who has to bother with aches and pains from tea and coffee is badly handicapped, but it's easy to shift to

POSTUM

And the change works wonders—

MARRIED ON A PITTANCE

Russian Bigamist Goes to Prison for One Year

Toronto, Dec. 15.—"I was getting $35 a year in Russia, your Honour, at the time I was married," said Louis Levine, who appeared before Judge Denton in the Sessions Court to-day charged with bigamy. The defendant was rather hazy about his first marriage, which took place in Russia when he was 16 years of age.

"What age was your wife?" asked the Judge.

"I don't know exactly, but she was twice my age," was the reply.

Levine stated that he lived with his father-in-law after the wedding, until he assumed his military duties as a conscript.

The second Mrs. Levine he met and married in Toronto and everything went well till the first Mrs. Levine appeared with a family of two.

Judge Denton sentenced the prisoner to one year in Central Prison.

Magistrate Cohen acted as interpreter for the witnesses.

CANADA'S PRODUCE HIGH

Cheaper to Import from South America via England.

The following letter has been received by Mr. Geo. Mather, the well known local produce merchant. It tells its own story:

December 6th, 1913.

Geo. Mather Esq.,
— Peterborough, Ontario.

Dear Sirs,—Thank you for night letter of December 4th, quoting White Stars at $3.30 off. Sorry we cannot handle them at this price as we can [illegible] from Europe cheaper. We are getting our supplies of butter now from England, in the shape of Argentine Creamery Butter, Australian, New Zealand and Irish Creamery, the price is much lower than getting it from Canada, about 4 cents per pound difference.

Instead of buying our corn from United States we are also buying Argentine corn from Liverpool, England, and landing it cheaper than we can get the same goods via New York. Present conditions are changing and our firm has got to change with the conditions. The high prices existing in Canada shows that the consumption of food products are overtaking the demand.

We are negotiating for a round lot of bran milled in the Argentine, the difference of price is $1 a ton cheaper on Argentine bran against the price of Canadian.

We thank you for your good wishes and Mrs. Williams, my brother and myself join in extending to your and your family our kindest regards.

Yours very truly,

INSANE GIRL IN CHURCH

London, Dec. 15.—Great excitement prevailed during the evening service in St. Peters Cathedral Sunday when a well dressed young woman cooly forced her way through the crowded congregation to the pulpit and calmly ordered Mr. Aylward who was about to start the sermon, to vacate the church, as she declared it was her own private property and she did not want him there. It was later found that she was suffering from a fit of temporary insanity, and is a member of the congregation.

AMERICAN EGGS IMPORTED DUTY OF THREE CTS DOZEN

60,000 Dozen Since the Ontario Hens Went on Strike.

Toronto, Dec. 15.—Seven or eight car loads of of storage eggs have already arrived in Toronto in the last few weeks from Chicago, egg dealers report. Laid down here they undersell local storage eggs by half a cent a dozen. A car holds 400 cases of 30 dozen each, or 12,000 dozen which means that over 60,000 dozen of American eggs have entered this city since Ontario hens laid off for the moulting season. Duty of 3 cents a dozen was paid on these imported eggs.

MAYOR BRADBURN FOR WATER COMMISSIONER

MORMONS LOST MILLIONS

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 15.—Revolution in Mexico has cost Mormon colonists from the United States more than $10,000,000. This was the statement credited today to President Joseph Smith, of the Mormon Church, who is here on his return from a visit to the refugees in Arizona and southern California.

The church head also said he favored a plan for the exiled colonists to settle where they now are instead of returning to Mexico when conditions permitted.

REPORT NEW TRIBES DISCOVERED

Philadelphia, Dec. 15.—Three tribes of Indians, hitherto unknown have been discovered by the University of Pennsylvania's Amazon expedition in regions of Brazil never before penetrated by white men, according to a letter received at the University Museum yesterday from Dr. Farabee, head of the expedition.

The letter was dated Boa Vista, Brazil, which is at the headwaters of ordinary navigation on the Uraricoera River, a northern affluent of the Amazon.

MR. HAWKES ASSERTS S. LANARK CAMPAIGN WAS "WORTH WHILE"

He Found Rural Ontario Better Than its Policies Would Indicate

Toronto, Dec. 15.—Like everyone else, Mr. Hawkes was smiling to-day over the result in South Lanark. He is satisfied that he is a defeated candidate and will not ask for a recount. In his customary cordial manner, he greeted a newspaper representative and laughed when asked if he could give a list of his seventy supporters. "I could not do that, for I do not know them all," he replied. "Many years ago there was a campaign in Galilee," he said, and "seventy disciples emerged from it."

Shaking his burly form with laughter, he said he had been having some great fun in his campaign. "My experience reminds me of a fable," he continued. "A Broad View Hawke was sitting on a limb of a tree beside an owl.

"Where have you been?" asked the owl.

"Looking for chickens."

"Get any?"

"[illegible]." (The owl observed the Hawke quivering).

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"I'm laughing," replied the Hawke. "You should have seen them run."

In a Class By Itself.

Mr. Hawkes assumed a more serious tone. "The interest of the thing is not in the number of votes cast for me," he said. "I asked no single person to vote for me, I think as far as I can learn, that the campaign is one in a class by itself—and certainly so far as the constituency of South Lanark goes. I sent every elector four copies of a paper, every line in it bearing on the election, and I discussed issues as they were never discussed before. I published articles for young people who have not yet votes. I struck the personal note and I made no attack upon anyone. The interest in this election up to the time of my entering the field was nothing but a mean squabble, and I transferred it to something higher than that."

Mr. Hawkes referred in some detail to the splendid attendance which had marked his meetings in the country, all held by special request and on the shortest notice. The women and the young people were liberal in their patronage.

THE "SLEEP STRIKE" IS NEWEST WRINKLE IN SUFFRAGETTE PLANS

Sylvia Keeps Walking--Near Collapse by This Time--Prisoner Has Arm in Sling

London, Dec. 1[illegible].—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragette agitator, since her incarceration on Dec. 10, has adopted the more drastic method of adding a "sleep strike" to her "hunger and thirst strike."

According to some of her comrades of the militant suffragette organization, she accomplishes this by continuously walking and one of her friends says she expects her release shortly as she must be on the point of collapse by this time.

The police, however, hoped to be able to keep both Miss Sylvia Pankhurst and her mother in jail until after to-day's weekly meeting of the Women's Social and Political Union.

In the meantime the militant women continued their violent tactics last night by burning down an empty mansion near Bristol and breaking every window in the Richmond Police station.

Police Ride Down Women.

Miss Zelie Emerson, the militant suffragette of Jackson, Mich., was brought up at the police court today charged with disturbing the peace last evening in the Bow District of the East End of London. She appeared in the prisoner's enclosure with one of her arms in a sling. It had been badly twisted in the scuffle with the police. In their evidence the police testified that Miss Emerson had smashed in a policeman's helmet with the pole of a suffrage banner she was carrying. The magistrate remanded her for a week on bail on the prisoner promising to remain quiescent until the conclusion of the case.

WOMEN AND CARDS.

The Newest Fad of the Fashionable Set in New York.

Card playing for money among the fashionable women of New York has become such a craze that they have found it expedient to emulate the example of their husbands and brothers to that extent that there are few games now that "kitty" doesn't play an important part—that is to say, a percentage of the stakes goes to pay for a hired room and refreshments.

The big Broadway and Fifth avenue hotels are the scenes of many quiet little games of bridge these wintry afternoons, and here is how they are arranged: Women who launch upon shopping or calling tours in the morning hours agree to meet for luncheon at some well known hotel. One woman in the party is designated as cashier, and she pays the bills. While the luncheon is in progress orders are given that a room be reserved and the furniture so arranged that one or two tables of bridge can be indulged in.

Play starts, and the cashier of the party "cuts" each hand or pot until a sum sufficient to defray the cost of the luncheon, hire of the room and whatever refreshments might be ordered while the game is on has been provided for.

The Waldorf-Astoria, the Knickerbocker and the New Astor of the Broadway hotels and the Plaza, St. Regis and Gotham are the favorite rendezvous just at present for those women who wish to buck the tiger outside the prosy confines of their homes.

"Yes, afternoon bridge parties have become quite the rage," said one of the managers at the Waldorf a few days ago. "It is such an easy matter for women to meet in the restaurant and then adjourn to a private room for a quiet game of bridge.

"Run a 'kitty'? Oh, dear, yes, and there are many lively scenes, I am told, when some grand dame who happens to be losing thinks that the kitty is getting more than its share."—New York World.

LIKED THE FRYING PANS.

Indians Found an Exciting Use For the Cooking Utensils.

The Indian, however averse he may be to any kind of useful labor, is not slow to avail himself of a new source of amusement. This was shown some years ago when among the supplies sent by the government to a certain agency in the west were several hundred large frying pans with long handles.

These the Indian agent found in stock when he took possession, and at the end of the year the number had not been diminished. Thinking that perhaps he had not discharged his whole duty in the matter of supplying Uncle Sam's wards with these culinary utensils, the agent began making special efforts to induce the red men to use them.

At first it was hard work, but by the time he had given out about two dozen there came a sudden change. Not a day passed in which the agent did not have applications for at least a dozen, and some days he disposed of twice that number.

When the supply was nearly exhausted he noticed among the applicants some to whom he had previously given pans, and naturally enough he became a trifle curious to know what use they were making of them. He questioned several of the men to no purpose, but at length a young buck more communicative than the rest gave him to understand that if he would visit a certain part of the reservation not far away he would find his inquiry answered.

The next day, therefore, the agent rode out in the direction indicated. About two miles from the agency he noticed on the crest of a narrow spur of the mountain three or four Indians who suddenly disappeared on the opposite side of the ridge. At the same time he heard faintly the cry of many voices.

On turning the point of the ridge he saw a crowd of several hundred Indians who were shouting as if greatly excited. He noticed also several objects, which he at first supposed to be bowlders, descending the side of the mountain toward them with tremendous rapidity.

Instead of fleeing from these moving objects the Indians simply applauded and shouted. Soon he saw other objects like the first descending, and in a short time the whole situation was plain to him.

Having selected a long, smooth slope of the mountain where there were no stones, the Indians had converted it into a sort of earthen toboggan slide and were utilizing the frying pans as toboggans. Seating themselves in the pans they grasped the handles with both hands; then, curling their legs over their arms, they went spinning down the slide with great rapidity. The agent let them have the few pans that remained in the storehouse, but did not order a new supply.—Harper's Weekly.

Easy Way to Kill Moles.

An excellent way to exterminate moles is as follows: Procure a small can of carbon bisulphide, which can be purchased from an automobile or bicycle dealer, [illegible] Pour two or three gallons of water into the hole and close up the opening. In about fifteen or twenty minutes open the hole and immediately ignite the gas formed. Be careful in lighting the gas. [illegible] should be used. The gas will burn for a few seconds and then it will back fire in the hole. There will be no more trouble from the moles.

Advantage of the Crinoline.

"The crinoline," says Lady Dorothy Nevill in her reminiscences, "was an odious, hideous and dangerous affair. On one occasion I was as nearly as possible burned to death owing to one I was wearing catching fire, and had I not had the presence of mind to lie down and roll myself in a rug I should certainly have been burned to death. Even at the time when crinolines were in fashion it was generally admitted that they were monstrous things, though some women defended them. One of these, a witty woman, having archly remarked that if crinolines had no other advantage they at least kept men at a distance, added, 'That at least you will admit is a great blessing.'

CHRISTMAS APPEAL

FOR

The Hospital for Sick Children
COLLEGE ST., TORONTO

Dear Mr. Editor:—

Thanks for your kindness in allowing me the privilege of appealing at this Christmas time on behalf of the Hospital for Sick Children, Toronto.

It would take more space than you can spare to tell of the good work done for the sick and deformed children of this Province. Let me, however, in a few words, tell you of the progress of the work of the Hospital.

One nurse, six little white beds, a few dollars, a few friends—this was the beginning. The beds have grown to 250, the dollars to thousands, the friends to hundreds. 1875, the first year, 44 in-patients, 67 out-patients; 1912, last year, 1,646 in-patients, 20,407 out-patients; 1875, 1 nurse; 1913, 79 nurses.

Since 1875, thirty-eight years ago, the Hospital has admitted within its walls 21,018 children as in-patients, and 150,231 as out-patients, a total of 180,249, or an average of 4,743 per year. Of the 21,018 in-patients, 14,[illegible] were from Toronto, and 6,[illegible] from other parts of the Province; 10,[illegible] of the total in-patients were cured, and 6,367 were improved.

In the Orthopaedic Department last year, of the 1,646 in-patients, 373 were treated for deformities, 25 hip disease, 37 Pott's disease, 3 knock-knees, 19 bow-legs, 61 club feet, 5 lateral curvature of the spine, 44 infantile paralysis, 6 wry neck, and 75 tubercular disease of knee, hip and ankle. In 1912, the Surgical Appliance Shop manufactured 437 appliances for in-patients and out-patients, including ankle braces, spinal braces, hip splints, bow-leg splints, club-foot splints, plaster jackets, etc.

In this Department in 36 years nearly 800 boys and girls have been treated for Club Foot and 650 corrected. Half of these came from places outside of Toronto. Surely we have a fair claim for help from the people of this Province.

Will you, the reader of this letter, help to give crippled children a fair start in life?

Busy dollars are better than idle tears. The sympathy that helps is good, but the Hospital has to have the sympathy that works.

While Christmas Bells are ringing to the glory of Him "Who made the lame to walk and the blind to see," give, give, give, and help the Hospital to help God's little ones, upon whom the heavy hand of affliction has been laid.

Will you please send a dollar, or more, if you can spare it, to Douglas Davidson, the Secretary-Treasurer of the Hospital, or

J. ROSS ROBERTSON,
Chairman of the Trustees, Toronto.

Taking His Medicine.

He found his hair was leaving the top of his head and took his barber to task about it.

"You sold me two bottles of stuff to make this hair grow."

"It is very strange it won't grow again," interrupted the barber. "I can't understand it."

"Well, look here," said the man, "I don't mind drinking another bottle, but this must be the last."—Western Christian Advocate.

Great Prospects.

"I'm at the end of my rope! Everything I have is gone, and I'm broke at last."

"Have you borrowed all you can?"

"Borrowed? No; I haven't tried that."

"And you say you are at the end of your rope. Why, man, you haven't even started!"—Toledo Blade.

Wanted Particulars.

Motorist Senior—You kept the car out rather late last evening, son. What delayed you? Motorist Junior—Had a blowout, dad. Motorist Senior—S'pose? Tire or roadhouse?—Puck.

It is better to live rich than to die rich.—Johnson.

FURTHER DECREASE IN LABOUR DISPUTES.

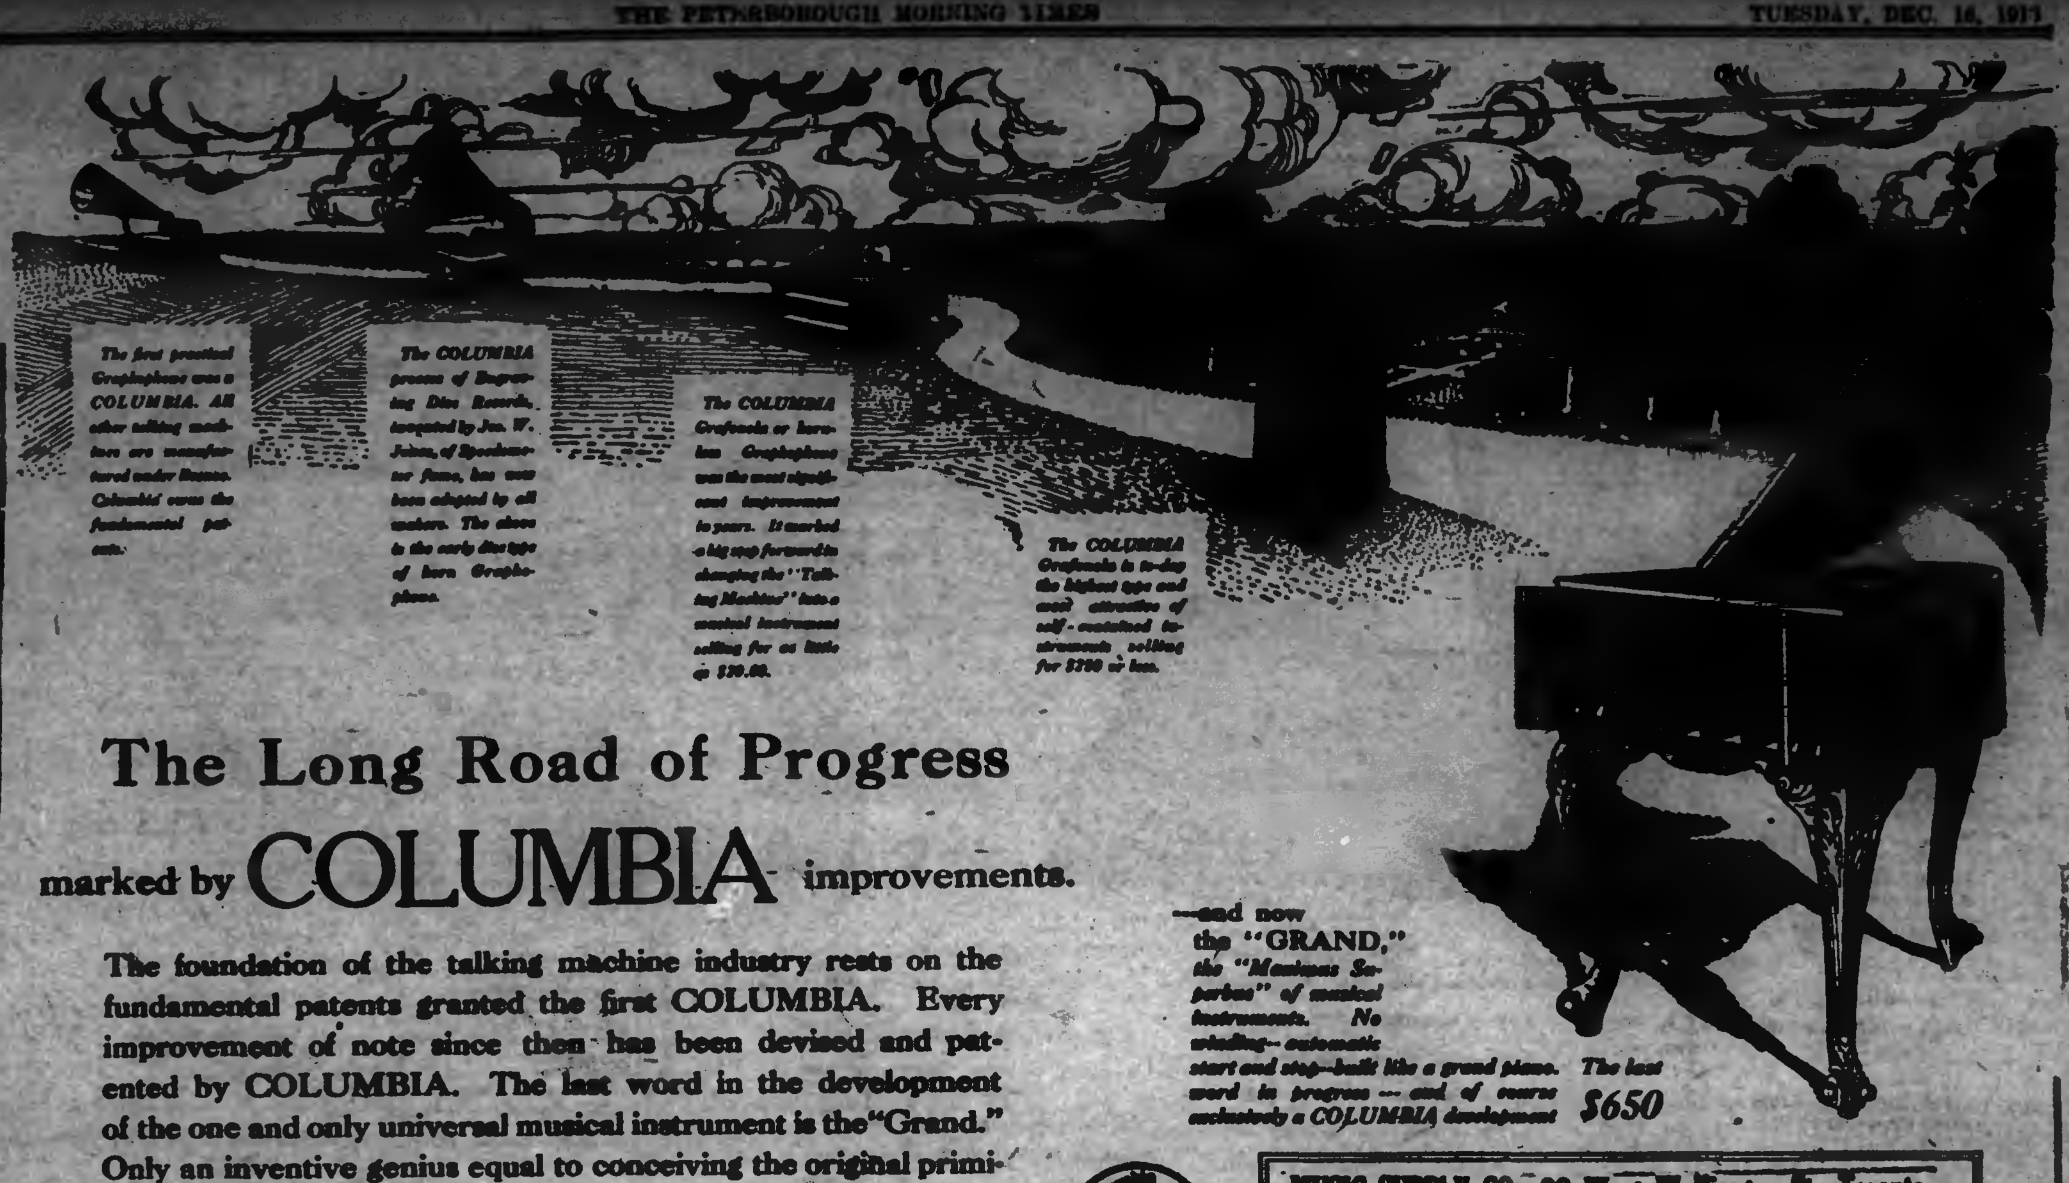
According to a bulletin issued by the Department of Labor there were only seven trade disputes in Canada during November, 1913, a favorable showing in comparison with October, when there were nine in existence, and also in November, 1912, in which month twenty-five were recorded. There was, however, an increase in the number of working days lost over the previous month, the figures being 89,000 for November, 1913, and 70,000 during October. It is worthy of note that of the 89,000 working days lost during November, 67,500 were lost as a result of two disputes in British Columbia, coal miners on Vancouver Island, and railroad construction labourers on the Pacific Great Eastern Railway. Three disputes were definitely settled during November, leaving four in existence at the end of the month as compared with eleven at the end of November, 1912.

WIRELESS SYSTEM ON THE GREAT LAKES.

Canada will have in a short time wireless facilities for Canadian inland steamer traffic which will be unequalled in the world. During the past two years Hon. J. D. Hazen, under whose guidance the wireless is carried on, has done all possible to perfect its use for the safety of life at sea.

When the new Montreal station has been completed and three new stations at Toronto, Port Burwell and Kingston, now under construction, have also been finished, it will be possible for a vessel reaching Canadian shores either through the Straits of Belle Isle or via Cape Race to proceed all the way to Port Arthur and be in touch with wireless all the time. Wireless communication will thus be afforded over a distance of 2,000 miles.

When the three new stations now building are completed the government will have eight stations on the Great Lakes. The Port Burwell one is to be put in operation this winter for the railway ferry across Lake Erie and the Toronto station may also be put in commission.



The first practical Graphophone was a COLUMBIA. All other talking machines are manufactured under license. Columbia owns the fundamental patents.
The COLUMBIA process of Engraving Disc Records, invented by Jos. W. Jones, of Speedometer fame, has now been adopted by all makers. The above is the early disc type of horn Graphophone.
The COLUMBIA Grafonola or hornless Graphophone was the most significant improvement in years. It marked a big step forward in changing the "Talking Machine" into a musical instrument selling for as little as $20.00.
The COLUMBIA Grafonola is to-day the highest type and most attractive of self-contained instruments selling for $200 or less.

The Long Road of Progress
marked by COLUMBIA improvements.

The foundation of the talking machine industry rests on the fundamental patents granted the first COLUMBIA. Every improvement of note since then has been devised and patented by COLUMBIA. The last word in the development of the one and only universal musical instrument is the "Grand." Only an inventive genius equal to conceiving the original primitive machine and this latest elaboration of it can hope to devise further improvement. That means that when it does come it will be marked COLUMBIA GRAFONOLA.

—and now the "GRAND," the "Maximus Superbus" of musical instruments. No winding—automatic start and stop—built like a grand piano. The last word in progress — and of course exclusively a COLUMBIA development $650

Quit Sniffing,
Stop Sneezing,
Cure Your Cold Now!

Thousands of Cases Prove the Quickest Cure is Catarrhozone.

When germs attack the lining of the nose, make you sneeze and gag—when later on they infest the bronchial tubes—how can you follow them with a cough syrup?

You can't do it—that's all. Cough syrups go to the stomach—that's why they fail.

But Catarrhozone goes everywhere—gets right after the germs—kills them—heals the soreness—cures the inflammation—makes Catarrh disappear.

"Nothing I have ever used gives the warm, soothing sensation of Catarrhozone," writes Isabel Fry, of Seguin Falls, Ont. "I was in a frightful way with catarrh of the nose and throat—had droppings, hard breathing, bad breath and indigestion. Catarrhozone relieved at once and cured thoroughly. It is invaluable in colds, sore throat and bronchial trouble." Not difficult for Catarrhozone to cure, because it contains the essences of pine balsams and other antiseptics that simply mean death to catarrh. Large size costs $1.00, and contains two months' treatment; smaller size 25c. and 50c., all druggist and storekeepers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

THE WATER COMMISSIONERS

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—In your paper of yesterday I saw a letter signed C. Hamilton advocating the candidacy of Mr. J. C. Shook for the coming vacancy in the local Water Commission Board. I quite agree with Mr. Hamilton's contention. Mr. Shook is not only well posted on water conditions here but is a gentleman who may enter the field unprejudiced and is certainly not looking for civic honors for the money that may be in it. Mr. Shook is actuated by merely patriotic and unselfish objects.

WAIFS AND STRAYS SOCIETY — AN APPEAL.

Editor Morning Times.

Sir,—Will you kindly allow me, through the medium of your columns, to make an appeal to your readers on behalf of the Waifs and Strays Society.

The splendid result of the Society's operations may be gathered from the fact that over 12,000 children have been received under its care since the commencement of operations in 1881, the majority of whom are now self-supporting and self-respecting men and women, and worthy citizens of our Empire. At present the Society's family consists of more than 4,600 boys and girls, who are being fed, clothed, and cared for in the 116 Homes, or boarded out in the country with respectable foster parents. Then there is the Emigration Branch which is chiefly utilized for those children whom it is absolutely necessary to separate as far as possible from their unworthy and disreputable relatives, in order that all the loving care and attention bestowed upon them may not be wasted.

For the maintenance and extension of such a work funds must be forthcoming, and it is with this object in view that I am appealing to your readers to show their interest and practical sympathy with those in the old country. At this time of the year, which we feel [illegible] to celebrate by mutual hospitality and good-will, there must be many who would be willing to give a contribution, if only as a thank-offering for their own [illegible] and happy home-life, and gifts however small would be most gratefully received at the address given below. Unfortunately at the moment there is a serious deficit on the General Fund, amounting to nearly £6,000, which naturally causes hindrance, and if the Society's work is not to be curtailed, it is most necessary that the deficit should be extinguished without delay.

Subscriptions and donations, however small, are earnestly solicited, and will be most gratefully received and acknowledged by

Your obedient servant,
E. de M. RUDOLF.

"MONKEYS POSSESS MORE KNOWLEDGE THAN SOME FOLKS

Miss Lind-af-Hageby Also Says Women Who Wear Sealskin Coats Are as Cruel as Men Who Bleed Seals for Them

Washington, Dec. 15.—While a half dozen women in her audience blushed and looked uncomfortable in handsome sealskin coats, Miss Lind-af-Hageby in the closing session of the International Anti-Vivisection and Animal Protection congress today declared that women who wear sealskin coats ought to be ashamed of themselves.

"The women who wear sealskins are as cruel as the men who cut the seals and bleed them alive for women—ignorant and shamefully ignorant women—to wear on their backs," she said.

LIKES "BRAINY" MONKEYS.

Miss Lind-af-Hageby admitted that she did not find the theory of a psychic relationship with monkeys an unhappy doctrine and that she had a monkey once who was "far brighter and far more charming than many human beings I know."

"I assure you that were you to study monkeys closely as I have studied monkeys—their little lives—their little hearts," she continued, "you would not only find it less difficult in accepting the evolution idea; you would positively find certain parental instincts and relationships that you might be delighted to acknowledge."

The congress before it adjourned adopted a resolution which called upon the United States government to appoint a commission of investigation to consist of members of both houses to investigate the text books used in public schools "which contain the equivalent of instruction of cruelty" and to pass legislation to ensure and enforce a closed season covering a period of five years which will check the wholesale slaughter of birds which threatens the total extinction of some species.

This order of the Council will make it impossible for us to serve you with electricity after that date, and while deeply appreciative of past patronage, we exceedingly regret having to sever business relations with you, but we are bound to bow to the superior authority vested in the Council.

Catarrh Cannot be Cured with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a blood or constitutional disease, and in order to cure it you must take internal remedies. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, and acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure is not a quack medicine. It was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years and is a regular prescription. It is composed of the best tonics known, combined with the best mucous surfaces. FUN IN THE HOME

Make Life There Joyous and Bar Out Business Worries.

Whatever your lot in life, keep joy with you, says Orison Swett Marden in Success Magazine. It is a great healer. Sorrow, worry, jealousy, envy, bad temper, create friction and grind away the delicate human machinery so that the brain loses its cunning.

Half the misery in the world would be avoided if the people would make a business of having plenty of fun at home instead of running everywhere else in search of it.

"Here For Rest and Fun." "No Business Troubles Allowed Here." These are good home building mottoes.

When you have had a perplexing day, when things have gone wrong with you and you go home at night exhausted, discouraged, blue, instead of making your home miserable by going over your troubles and trials just bury them. Instead of dragging them home and making yourself and your family unhappy with them and spoiling the whole evening, just lock everything that is disagreeable in your office.

Just resolve that your home shall be a place for bright pictures and pleasant memories, kindly feelings toward everybody and "a corking good time" generally. If you do this you will be surprised to see how your vexation or business wrinkles will be ironed out in the morning and how the crooked things will be straightened.

THE COTTON GIN.

Whitney Got the Idea From the Work of an Old Negro.

Eli Whitney, the inventor of the cotton gin, got the germ of his great idea from seeing through the interstices of a hut an old negro work a hand saw among the freshly picked cotton stored within.

The teeth of the saw tore the lint from the seed easily and quickly, and young Whitney (he was barely thirteen at the time) realized at once that a machine working a number of similar saws simultaneously would revolutionize the cotton growing industry.

He said nothing to anybody, but set to work building models and experimenting. His difficulties were enormous, for he not only had to make his own wheels, cogs, etc., but he had also first to forge his own tools and even to manufacture the paint wherewith to color his many plans and drawings.

But he succeeded in the end, and, though the outbreak of war and other hindrances prevented the invention from being actually placed upon the market until many years afterward, the first complete cotton gin ever constructed was built from those very models and plans and with scarcely a single alteration.

THE SPRINGBOK

A peculiarity of that most beautiful of South African antelopes the springbok is that it always leaps over human tracks. It is at once exceedingly shy and marvelously active, and the reason for this strange antic is its intense suspicion of any possible enemies, among whom it has come to recognize man as the most dangerous. It is not only with human tracks that the springbok goes through this performance, for it does the same with the tracks of lions or even when it gets wind of a lion. The leap is exceedingly graceful, and the animal covers from twelve to fifteen feet at each bound. It drops on all four feet at once and immediately rises again, making a clear spring without any run. Its usual gait when not pursued is a light springy trot. The springbok usually travels with its nose to the ground, as if constantly on the lookout for the scent of enemies.

A Game That Lasts.

For the man who has once had the responsibility of coaching an eight-oared crew the task has an attraction which can't be resisted. Some one asked me once why it is that most college crew coaches make good chess players. I know that the person who put the question didn't know much about the rowing game, for producing a successful eight-oared crew requires an amount of thinking which makes chess seem like pure recreation in comparison. Of course it's different from a chess problem in the fact that opponents don't always start with the same strength of forces, but this only adds to the fascination of trying to beat a winning combination.

How Much Sleep Do We Need?

How much sleep is necessary for a man? The question was raised centuries ago by Montaigne. "Physicians," he wrote, "may consider whether sleep be so necessary that our life must needs depend on it, for we find that Perseus, King of Macedon, prisoner at Rome, being kept from sleep, was made to die; but Pliny alleges that some have lived a long time without any sleep at all. And Herodotus reporteth there are nations where men sleep and wake by half years. And those that write the life of Epimenides the wise affirm that he slept the continual space of seven and fifty years."

TABLE D'HOTE WITH MUSIC.

When I'm in funds, as sometimes hap,
I frequent one of those cafes
Where in an artificial bower
Some gifted aggregation plays.
How strangely sweet music sways
Digestion! No star dish appeals
To me 'less flanked by roundelays
When I have music with my meals.

With oysters let them rattle off
Some syncopated ditty gay,
But plaintive music I prefer
When they bring on the consomme.
"My Rosary" is fitting. Nay,
A tear into my soup oft steals.
But, then, I like to be distrait
When I have music with my meals.

The roast, an overture with this—
Say "Carmen" and her Don Jose.
That intermezzo's sure to come
Accompanied by the entree.
Strauss, rendered in a dreamy way,
An added charm in greens reveals.
Vin ordinaire acquires bouquet
When I have music with my meals.

"Good Kiss" and cigarettes! Here's food
For poppy dreams, thoughts far away.
"Waiter, the bill." I've lingered long.
Now sprigs that Kipling lay
With its refrain of "Pay, pay, pay."
An empty pocketbook reveals
I've nothing for a rainy day
When I have music with my meals.

Prof. Mulveney Known All Over the World

Proprietor of World's Famous Tape Worm Exterminator

Tape worm is bred from a parasite. It is of pear shape, having two, four and six suckers. It lays the eggs, which are connected together. They develop and form a body, which is the worm. Each section is an individual, having a sucker or mouth. The worm grows much longer than the bowels where it is located, and sometimes a whole colony of them are found, enough to fill a quart of solid worm, and when put in a basin of water would apparently fill it. It is the hardest task in the world to destroy this parasite without doing injury to the individual who may be so unfortunate as to have it, as the parasite clings to the bowels, freeing itself from the body of the worm, and remains there to breed another. It is an internal demon, and causes its victim to suffer all the symptoms of disease imaginable. The cleverest physicians are led to believe the patient is suffering from some other disease, as nearly every person has different symptoms. Some have been treated for cancer of the bowels, consumption of the bowels, consumption of the lungs, chronic dyspepsia, nervous prostration, melancholia, hypochondria, hysteria, inflammation of the bowels, appendicitis, and other complaints, when one or more of these worms were eating their lives away.

Prof. Mulveney has made the discovery to free the victim without injury to the system, destroying the parasite as well as expelling the worm with one dose of medicine without any previous starvation. Visit his office, where he has in his possession the most wonderful collection of these parasites which have been expelled from hundreds of people by his famous remedy, some bottles containing colonies of worms, and anyone seeing them cannot imagine how a person could possibly live with them in his bowels. It is surprising the number of people that have them. Thousands have them and are not aware of the fact. The letters and testimonials the professor has in his possession are enough to convince you of this alarming fact. Some of the most prominent symptoms are ravenous appetite, dizzy spells, headaches, cramps in the bowels, a feeling of something moving in the bowels. Segments may be in evidence at any time, and this is complete proof of the presence of tape worm. There are many other feelings of distress which take too long to enumerate. Strange to say some people of strong constitution have very little distress.

Prof. Mulveney's world famous Tape Worm Exterminator is safe, sure and harmless. No starvation, no danger, is not disagreeable to take. One dose nearly always effects a cure. Information free. Phone Park 4680, 167 Dundas street, Toronto.

How many have become poor by buying inferior articles because they are cheap? This is false economy. The same applies to milk as well as any other commodity. My friend Mrs. Southwick wrote me to come down to her country place. She said she had an especial reason for asking me, but didn't tell me what it was. So the [illegible] morning I took a train to make the visit. On reaching the station—I was not expected till an hour later—not finding a conveyance to meet me, I concluded to leave my luggage at the station and walk. Never having been to Mrs. Southwick's place before, I was obliged to inquire the way and was put on to a short route, at the end of which I could enter the grounds at the rear. On [illegible] I climbed a fence and walked some three or four hundred yards to a clump of trees, which was so [illegible] that I concluded to penetrate it.

The Other Way.

There was a hopeful gleam in the eyes of the young man with a slightly receding chin as he approached the father of his ladylove.

"Will you give your daughter to me in marriage, sir?" he asked in as firm a tone as he could muster.

"I'm afraid you are not well enough acquainted with her, young man," remarked the father.

"Why, I've seen her twice a week for nearly a year," said the astonished suitor.

"That may all be," said the parent. "But if you knew what I know [illegible] you'd [illegible] your daughter [illegible]"

A Fiasco.

The phrase "a complete fiasco" originated with a German [illegible] man, who declared that he could blow glass as well as an expert [illegible] worker. A friend laid a wager with him to the contrary, and when the test came off the would-be glass blower found that he could produce only a pear shaped flask (fiasco). Nothing daunted, he tried again, but with the same result. The story of the wager became known, and hence the origin of the phrase which is used in designating a failure.

DISEASES OF CIVILIZATION.

New Environment In Time Renders Humanity Immune.

Civilization brings a host of diseases in its train. The extremists of the back-to-nature cry have gone so far as to declare that civilization is a disease. But it is only just beginning to be clearly perceived that civilization is [illegible] own disease, that it preys upon itself, and that the aim of man is not to be civilized, but to avoid being civilized, though using to the full the opportunities that civilization affords.

Perhaps an illustration may make this quite clear. Measles is a definite germ disease. It is widely spread over the earth, but not by any means universally spread; for example, it seems to have been unknown among the North American Indians prior to the coming of the Spaniards. As a consequence, when an epidemic of measles strikes an Indian settlement the mortality is [illegible] and in some cases an entire village has been swept away, every man, woman and child perishing from measles. [illegible] among the white race, the disease has been so prevalent that it has become one of the [illegible] of childhood and is hardly dreaded with regard to its fatal effect.

The white race, therefore, by having had these diseases for many thousand years has built up an organism that is almost immune, or in other words it has perfected its resistance to a hostile environment.

Especially is this true in the world of work and thought. Too hard work is one of the diseases of civilization. But the very fact of the compulsion of enduring life, although working too hard, has enabled a man or a woman to endure heavy toil and has developed the human race to that extent. Eight or ten hours of continuous toil to a race not accustomed to it would kill it off speedily. The same is true about thinking. The Bushmen and Negritoes, for example, can by no means follow a conversation with each other for more than five minutes, and when a white man learns their tongue and tries to talk to them, at the end of three or four minutes of questioning or attention in listening they fall to the ground in sheer dizziness and weariness or go to sleep temporarily under the strain. Yet, under the force of poverty, [illegible] of duty, the desire for fame or some such motive, men have worked all their lives 12 and 14 hours a day without suffering for it.

A DUKE'S LOVES.

The Force of the Attacks Were Measured by His Appetite.

In the late eighteenth century a Dr. Moore was tutor to the young Duke of Hamilton of those days, whom he accompanied on the usual continental tour. The duke was then eighteen and was susceptible to feminine charms. He had just fallen a victim to the black eyes of a married lady when Dr. Moore made this report to the youthful peer's mother:

"This is the third passion the duke has had since we crossed the sea. They generally affect his appetite, and I can make a pretty good guess at the height of his love by the victuals he refuses to eat. A slight touch of love puts [illegible]

A Bad Heart, Its Cause and Cure

Many, Firmly Convinced They Are Dying of Heart Trouble, Have Often the Strongest Hearts.

Sometimes you wake up at night, heart throbbing like a steam engine. Your breathing is short and irregular; pains shoot through the chest and abdomen, and cause horrible anxiety.

Your trouble isn't with the heart at all. These sensations are the outcome of indigestion, which has caused gas to form on the stomach and press against the heart.

Just read what happened to Isaac Malleau, of Belle River, Ont.:

"Three months ago I was a weak, sickly man. My appetite was poor, food fermented in my stomach, I had poor sleeps and indigestion. At night I would often waken with gas in the stomach and heart palpitation.

"I consulted my doctor and used remedies that my friends advised. Nothing helped.

"One day I received a sample of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and my cure commenced. To-day I have a vigorous appetite, strong heart action, and no sign of indigestion. I feel younger and healthier than ever before."

Your druggist or storekeeper sells Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box or five boxes for $1.00. By mail from The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

At a very large meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. in St. Alphonsus Lyceum, the nomination of officers for the ensuing year took place. The election will be held on Sunday December 28th. Next Sunday the election of officers of the Sacred Heart T.A.S. will also take place.

He will join the staff of the R. C. [illegible] Co., bond and debenture dealers, of Toronto.

[illegible]

Trapped Well Baited.

After the trial yesterday morning when Killenbeck and Holland were given three and two years respectively in penitentiary and Central prison for robbing Mr. W. Ireland, a cook from the Peterborough Lumber Company's camp, Mr. Ireland explained how he happened to be robbed. He had suspected, during former visits to the city, that one of the prisoners had "touched" him for money. He laid a trap for Killenbeck and Holland, into which they fell.

Trapping in East City.

A young man living in almost the Central part of East Ward, has for the past week or two accompanied two professional trappers to a swamp some ten miles east, near the C.P.R. in quest of muskrats and mink. The crown of success awarding their efforts was very light with mighty few jewels. On Friday this East Ward resident set five traps in a little creeklet running through his garden. On Saturday evening he met his friends who had taken a tramp of 10 miles back from their eastern grounds, bring one muskrat. The Ashburnhamite showed them three muskrats he had captured the preceding night in his garden.

Blacklister Fined.

David Crowley, a blacklister, yesterday pleaded guilty to having been drunk. When asked where he got his liquor Crowley said: "I met two men in a shed and they gave me the whiskey." "Why," said the chief, "You had a bottle of whiskey on your person." The bottle was produced. He came from Monaghan and bargained for a quarter of beef with two men in the shed of a local hotel. He does not know the name of the men who gave him the liquor. He does not know where the bottle in court came from. Defendant was assessed the usual $10.

Local Thieves Heavily Sentenced

At yesterday's police court, Killenbeck and Holland, two local young men charged with stealing $14 from a lumber camp, named Ireland. He said the evidence of the prisoners' evidence alone convicted them. Holland was given two years, less a day in Central Prison and Killenbeck was given three years in Kingston penitentiary. Mr. Gordon, acting for County Attorney Wood asked for a disposal of the $14.75 found on the prisoners. This was ordered to be returned to Ireland.

Local Man at Big Launchings.

Mr. Ireland, who at yesterday's police court, had the money stolen by Killenbeck and Holland, sentenced to prison, returned to him, gave the Times a slight insight into his past history in England. Mr. Ireland used to be a member of the Mounted Army Service Corps. When England's first dreadnought, the Queen, called after our late revered Queen Victoria was launched at Keyham Dock, a Devonshire, Sergt. Ireland was one of the eight selected to specially escort the late King Edward VII. who christened the ship. A few years later, when King George V. our present august sovereign, launched the dreadnought, King Edward VII. at Keyham Dock, on the Trent River, Mr. Ireland was one of a chosen few from Granby barracks to form a guard of honor. There were 800 marines aboard the "King Edward VII."

The C.P.R. Entertainment.

It would seem that the ball to be held in the new C.P.R. freight sheds tomorrow evening is going to be a grand success. The large floor is in fine condition. The building will be fittingly decorated and heated. The offices will be reserved for a card room, ladies' dressing room and gent's cloak room. There will be a lady in charge of the ladies' dressing room, which will also be fitted with 1 large mirror. In conversation with a member of the committee in charge of the "at-home" and ball, which will possibly be the biggest since the opening of the C.G.R. Company's first building in this city, said, "the proceedings are intended as a general gathering of our citizens for pleasure as well as to inaugurate the opening of the fine new shed." Every effort will be made to ensure happiness and safety for all present. The Grand Opera House orchestra will supply the musical end of the program.
